

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carloti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

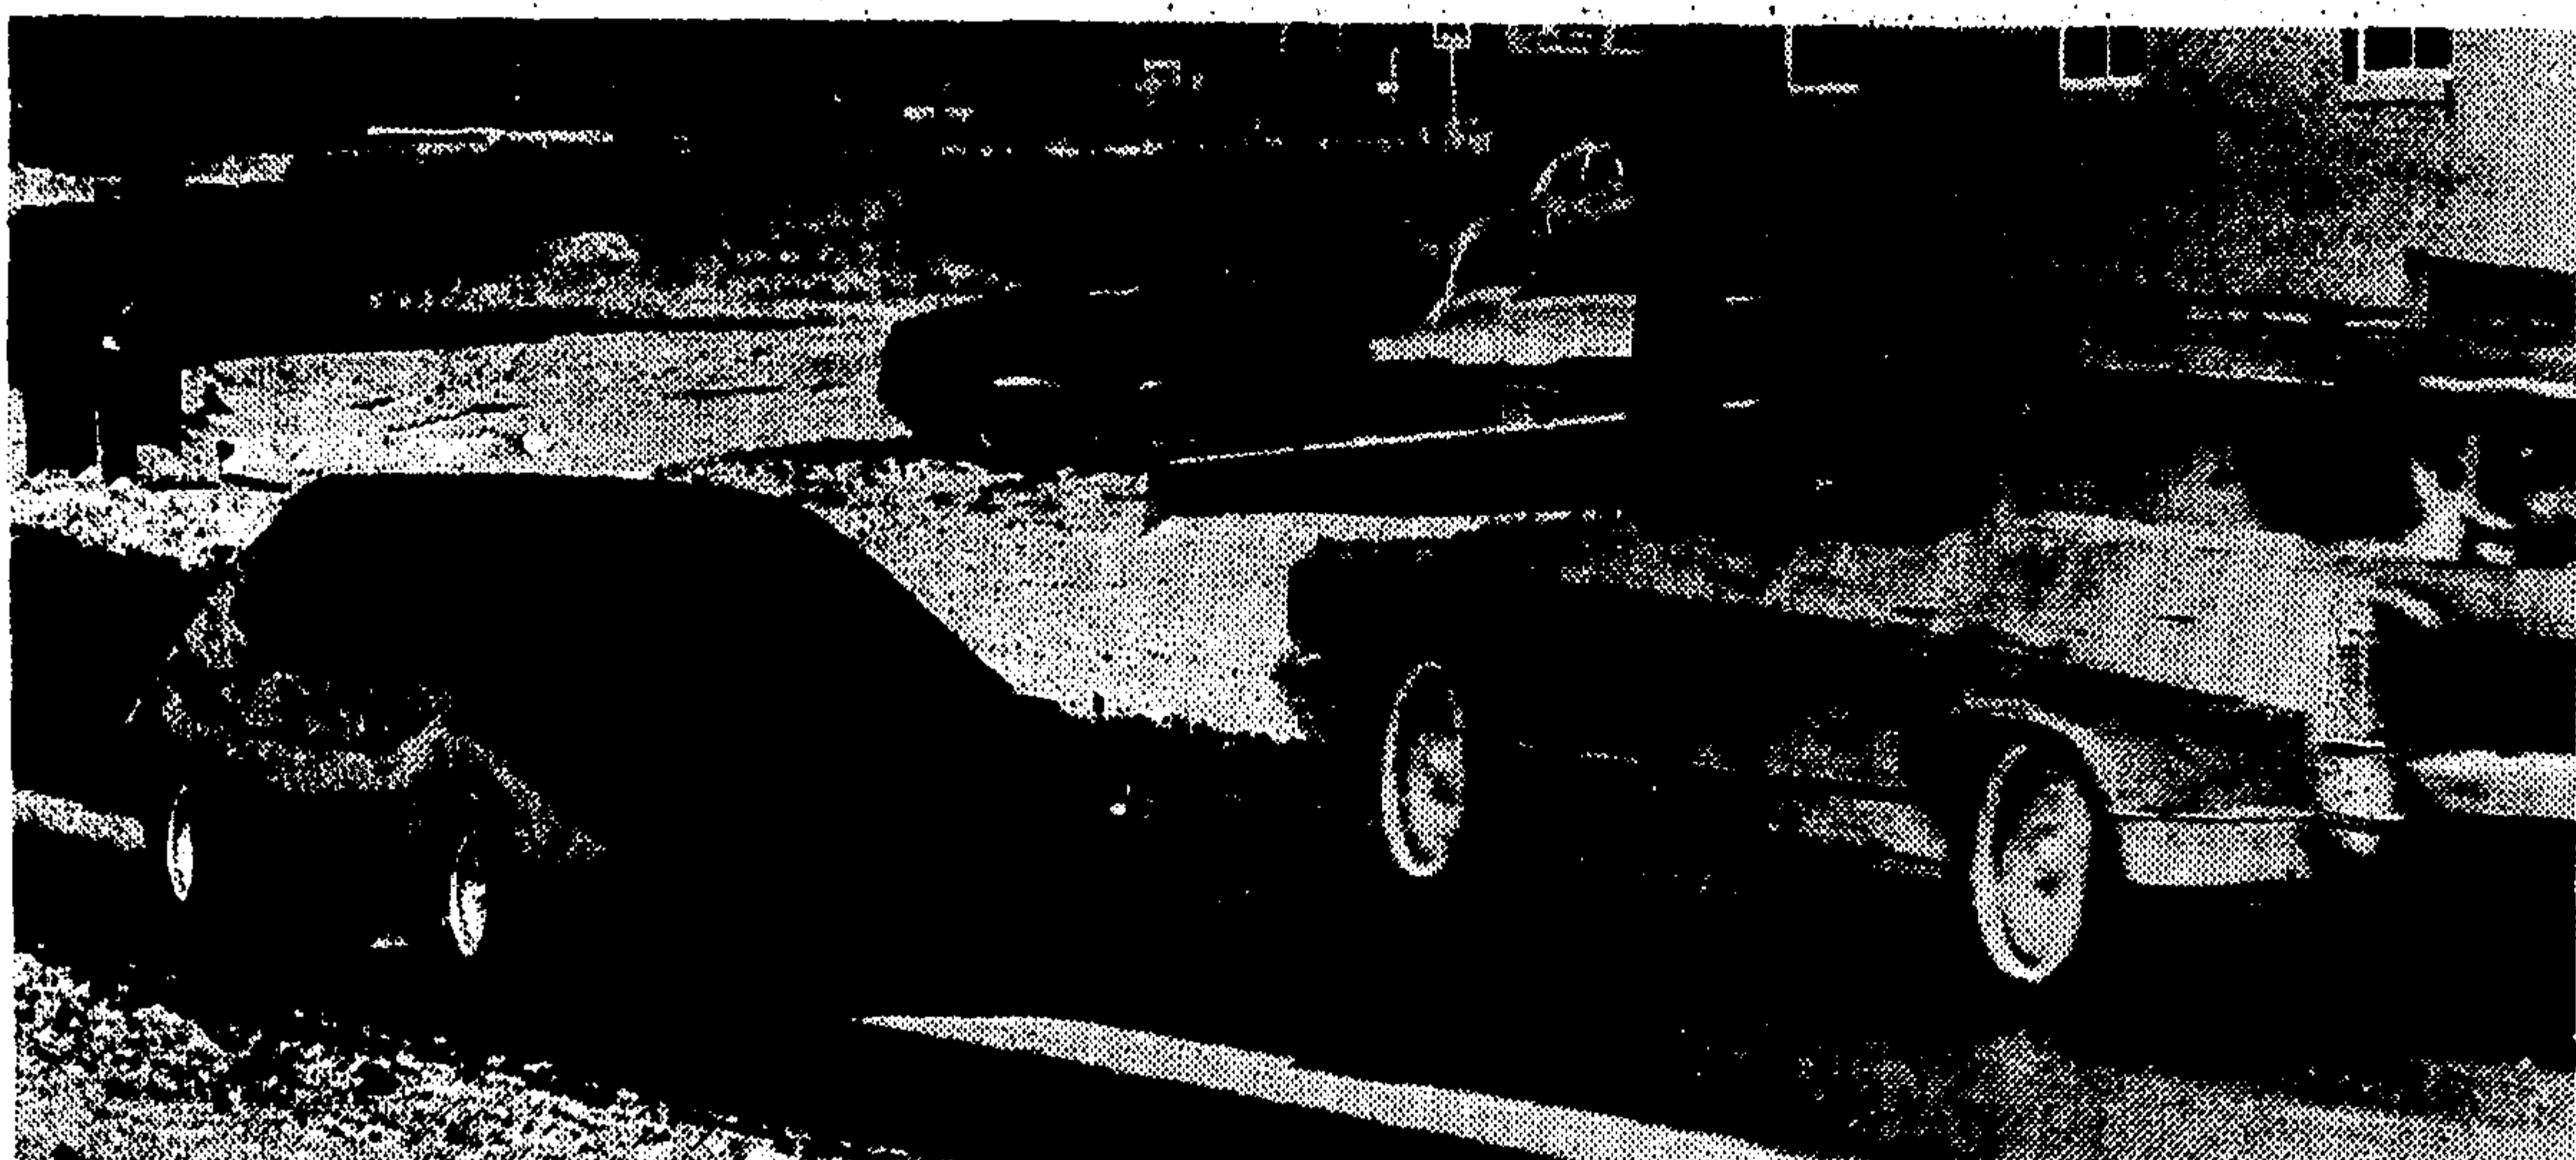

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

He also suggested that motorists ride public transportation one day a week for the welfare of the country and industry. "If we have rationing, everyone is going to be hurt."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING TO McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Moonlighting policemen do it mostly for profit

by TOM VON MALDER

In Wheeling, some are pumping gas. In Mount Prospect, they are standing around in department stores, while in Buffalo Grove, they are walking through construction sites.

They all are moonlighting policemen, whether their after-hours employment is arranged through their respective police departments or on their own. Mostly, they are working for extra money, although some feel jobs such as department store detective are good training for their police career.

All three departments permit policemen to work extra jobs and, although departmental regulations vary, each insists that the extra job not interfere with their police duties.

Lt. Ronald Nelson estimates that 5 of 25 men in the Wheeling Police Department have outside part-time jobs. He said he knows of three who pump gas and two who drive cement trucks for a local construction firm.

For any "police-related, guard-type duty," Nelson said an outside employer must contract for a policeman's service with the Village of Wheeling. He said this is done so that the policeman's regular pension and similar benefits and insurance will still cover him while he is on outside guard duty.

THE GUARD CATEGORY of jobs covers department stores, rock concerts, circuses, Christmas duty at the post office and the like.

"We contemplated forbidding all outside jobs," Nelson said, "but we felt it would be unfair." Rules were drawn up after other area departments' policies were investigated. These rules were then approved by the policemen.

As in Buffalo Grove and Mount Prospect, Wheeling policemen are forbidden to sell liquor or work in an establishment that does, including operations like bowling alleys with lounges. Wheeling police chief Peter Guttilla also must approve any outside job.

Nelson said Guttilla is "pretty liberal" about what jobs the men can take. Freshman policemen are "highly discouraged" from taking an outside job because it might interfere with their training, Nelson added.

IN MOUNT PROSPECT, the situation is more liberal. There is no hour limitation on outside jobs (such as the 20-hour limitation in Wheeling) and the police chief does not have to approve the job, although he is informed of the outside employment.

"It hasn't been a problem," Police Chief Bert Giddens said. "There is no order on hours yet."

Although the exact number of Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight was not available, one patrolman, who works part-time as a guard in a store at the Randhurst Shopping Center, guessed that about 90 per cent of the force at one time or another moonlights.

As in Wheeling, extra-hour assignments at sporting events, circuses and similar activities are handled on a first-come, first-serve basis with the employer hiring through the village. Department store guard duty is handled strictly between the employers and the

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Accounts Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Accounts Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectability on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

Price of milk is raised again

For the seventh time since last January, the price of milk in northern Illinois is being raised, dairy industry officials said yesterday. The cost of a gallon of milk will go up an average of three to six cents effective Monday, to a level somewhere between $1.41 and $1.44 a gallon in this area. Chicago milk prices have soared from $1.06 a gallon in January, 1973, to the present average of $1.38. Central Milk Producers, a group of 16 cooperatives, cited decreasing milk production and higher farm costs in explaining the increase.

Hoffman official admits guilt

A total of six former Hoffman Estates officials have now admitted their guilt in a bribery scheme involving Kaufman and Broad, Inc.'s, Barrington Square subdivision. Herbert C. Gibson, 46, a village trustee from 1965 to 1969, yesterday pleaded guilty to two federal charges of bribery and one charge each of conspiracy and tax evasion. He was indicted Oct. 26 as were five other ex-officials, Kaufman and Broad and its attorney, former State Rep. Bernard Peskin. The company pleaded no contest to charges of bribing the officials and Peskin has pleaded innocent and will go on trial.

Metron ridership increases

Metron Systems, a fledgling bus company operating in Arlington Heights, enjoyed a 50 per cent ridership increase in November but is still running in the red. Claude Luisada, Metron president, said 1,900 passengers rode the firm's three buses in November, up 600 from the previous month. The December deficit is expected to be the smallest in Metron's four-month history, he said. The ridership increase is attributed to growing public awareness of the service, bad weather, increasing auto operating costs and concern over gasoline supplies.

Toilet paper in demand

Local grocery stores are reporting a tremendous demand for toilet paper, apparently prompted by rumors of a shortage. Not so, say industry officials. If there is any shortage, it is being caused by scare-buying on the part of consumers, they say. Some companies have taken ads in East Coast newspapers to assure the public that the supply is adequate.

Gifts plentiful in Elk Grove

Some employees of Elk Grove Village took in more than $100 worth of Christmas gifts, according to a report released yesterday by Village Mgr. Charles Willis. The 57-member police department shared in $1,500 worth of goodies including liquor, hams, turkeys and candy. Some key men in the streets and building departments got gift certificates ranging in value from $10 to $50. They may have violated a village rule prohibiting acceptance of gift certificates. Gifts came from contractors and other businesses which operate in the village.

increasing. "It would be good if they could try harder to help people in this middle-income bracket." Right now, "it's a real tough situation," he says, and it is "difficult for middle-income people to get anything."

The state board of higher education has approved an increase in funds for Illinois State Scholarships. Part-time students will now qualify for aid and it is expected that 75 per cent of these students will attend community colleges. The state board also increased eligibility standards for state grants but the increase was slight and will only affect about 3,000 students statewide.

THE REAL problem occurs in federal financial aid programs, particularly the Basic Opportunity Grant which was designed this year to replace two other federal programs, the Educational Opportunity Grant and the National Direct Student Loan (formerly the National Defense Student Loan) program. But the new program was not implemented until late this year, its appropriation was cut, the two other programs were retained but their appropriations were also cut and the result was a net loss in federal student financial aid to most colleges and universities in the country.

Northern Illinois University lost almost $400,000 in federal student aid money this year, says William Herrmann, coordinator of student financial aids. Financial aid was either reduced or eliminated this year for about 40 per cent of the students who qualified for the programs last year, he estimates.

The guidelines for the new Basic Opportunity Grant program are too low, says Herrmann. A student can qualify only if his family makes less than $10,000, has no assets and the student is not receiving Social Security payments.

About 55 per cent of the students at Northern are from middle-income families making between $10,000 and $18,000 a year. These students can't qualify for federal programs, says Herrmann. "The rules for eligibility are not realistic."

EVEN IF A student does qualify for the new federal aid program, it's hardly worth his trouble. The maximum grant was supposed to be $1,400 per year but was lowered to $452. The forms for the program were not mailed until last summer when most students were out of school. As a result only 200 students at Northern are receiving aid through this program this year, says Herrmann and the average award is only $260 a year, a little more than 10 per cent of the total cost of attending Northern.

"We don't object to the Basic Opportunity Grant, but they better fund it properly and get it to operate," says Herrmann. "And they're already too late."

Herrmann's sentiments are shared by many high school counselors and community college financial aid officers. "The government program isn't fair," says Rosenthal from Arlington High School. "It helps students in the lower-income area. There is nothing nationally that would help the middle-income student."

The federal program hasn't been effective at Oakton Community College according to Mike Desamo, assistant director of admissions. Only half a dozen students applied for it and only one student qualified. He is receiving $175 this year. The old federal programs were not much better for Oakton students, says Desamo. In fact, the college had to turn back $10,000 in federal money this year because it doesn't have enough students with family incomes low enough to qualify.

THERE ARE NOT many alternatives open to the middle income student from the suburbs who can't qualify for financial aid. In the past many students received bank loans but today the interest rates on loans are higher and are harder to get. "If you don't have good banking connections you can't get a loan," said Herrmann. "If they don't want to lend you the money they don't have to."

Guaranteed student loans, the most popular type for students, are controlled by federal and state student aid programs. That involves paperwork, says Herrmann, and "a lot of banks don't like paperwork." The interest rate on a guaranteed loan is set at between 7 and 9 per cent by most financial aid programs. In the present money market, with the prime interest rate for a bank's best customer running above 9 per cent, banks tend to put their loan money into more profitable areas.

Many students aren't going to four-year colleges and universities at all. They are attending community colleges so they can work part-time and save money by living at home. Herrmann estimates that Northern lost 500 students this year because they couldn't qualify for financial aid programs. He estimates that 40 per cent of these students went to community colleges and that more will go next year if costs continue to rise and eligibility standards for financial aid remain low.

"Learning at the junior college is just as good," says Herrmann, and financial aid covers more of the cost there than in a university. Because tuition is lower, community colleges "can help four students when we can only help one with the same amount of money," he says.

ONE STUDENT who transferred to Northern from a community college says "I would never have been able to make it financially starting at Northern. I think this school is too expensive." In many states the tuition is lower than in Illinois and in some states it's free. She says, "that's the way it should be."

She brings up a point that is becoming popular today with many administrators in four year colleges and universities. Now, when the cost of tuition is going up and enrollment is going down, they see a reduction in tuition as a solution to both the enrollment and financial problem. If more students can afford to go to universities, enrollment will go up and cost will go down, they say.

OFFICIALS AT Southern Illinois University presented a report to the state board of higher education last November which recommends "a step by step transition which would achieve the result of providing higher education in the state universities of Illinois on a tuition-free basis." Beginning in 1974, tuition should be reduced to what it was in 1970 says the report, and continue until all Illinois residents may attend state universities without tuition.

The report says rising tuition charges and low financial aid requirements "have made higher education a right of the poor, the privilege of the rich, and a serious problem for large numbers of students from middle class families." It challenges the state board to decide "whether or not the State of Illinois really believes that higher education is a right of all the people and not a privilege of those who can afford it."

The state board decided last month. It recommended a tuition increase next year.

ADDED to this is the fact that for the first time in years, college enrollment is declining and is predicted to decline for at least a decade. As a result the costs of operating state colleges and universities will go up as they serve fewer students.

Educators are beginning to think the system of higher education in Illinois may have to be changed to meet these problems, but no one knows for sure what those changes will be.

Mitchell-Stans trial postponed again

A federal judge in New York agreed to postpone the trial of former cabinet officers John Mitchell and Maurice Stans, accused of obstruction of justice. The trial, scheduled to begin Jan. 9, will probably begin in mid-February. It was the third delay granted to the defense since the trial was scheduled to begin last September.

Nixon OKs railroad consolidation

President Nixon's approval of a plan to reorganize the bankrupt Northeast rail system was called a "step away from," not toward, nationalization by Transportation Sec. Claude S. Brinegar. The plan would consolidate a network of seven railroads — including the Penn Central — into a smaller system. Thousands of railroad workers face the loss of their jobs with the consolidation.

More jumbo jets grounded

The fuel shortage has grounded more Boeing 747 jumbo jets. American Airlines and Trans World Airline said they are grounding a portion of their fleets of the $25 million jet because of reduced flight schedules made necessary by fuel allocations. Continental Airlines said earlier it is removing all four of its 747s from service. American grounded 10 and TWA has pulled two.

American Motors announces cutbacks

American Motors Corp. said 200 workers will be idled at two Wisconsin plants as it cuts back production of larger cars to make sure there are enough parts to build the fast-selling small models. It was the first announced cutback by AMC, the smallest major U.S. automaker. An 11-day holiday ended for auto workers, but more than 50,000 were idled by plant shutdowns among General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

U.S. girl arrested; linked with Arabs?

A maximum alert was ordered at airports throughout Britain following the arrest of an 18-year-old American girl who police sources say may have been a courier for Arab gunmen planning to kill prominent Jews. Custom officials said they found five pistols and 150 rounds of ammunition hidden in a false bottom of her suitcase. The girl's brother has also been arrested. Both are believed to have links with Moroccans living in the United States.

China military shakeup boosts Chou

Mainland China disclosed the biggest shakeup of its military command since 1969 in moves that appear to have strengthened the position of Premier Chou En-lai. The moves, which gave new command positions for more than two dozen key officers, are said to have given Chou's policy of improved relations with the United States a boost.

Cambodian troops renew drive

With talk of a prisoner exchange in Vietnam, Cambodian government troops and planes battled rebel forces in a renewed effort to reopen the road linking Phnom Penh to its only deepwater seaport at Kompong Som. In South Vietnam, there were indications that the Saigon government and Viet Cong are close to a prisoner exchange in time for the Tet lunar New Year on Jan. 23.

Accused Arabs won't be extradited

The government of Kuwait has refused to extradite to Italy five Arab guerrillas who killed 32 persons at the Rome airport Dec. 17. Kuwait, it was said, expressed regret over the killings but said it could not turn over the men to the Italian courts because the attack was political.

Pleads guilty to bribery charges

Oscar Tucker, 62, former assistant chief of the Cook County's assessor's real estate division, pleaded guilty to charges of bribery and income tax evasion in Chicago. Earlier, U.S. District Court Judge Prentice H. Marshall told Tucker he would have to sentence him to two years in prison and order a fine if he entered his guilty plea. Tucker admitted to three counts of accepting bribes totaling about $3,500 in return for favorable tax treatment afforded real estate owners.

Hundreds shiver after explosion

Hundreds of residents in western Randolph County shivered in their homes in near zero temperatures or sought refuge with neighbors after a spectacular gasoline explosion cut off service Tuesday night. The explosion caused no injuries but an estimated 7,000 persons in Prairie du Rocher, Ill., Chester, Modoc and some rural areas were affected by the power break. Cause of the explosion is unknown and service is expected to be restored soon.

Market rallied by gold mining

Stock prices, bogged down in profit taking most of the day, rallied on the New York Stock Exchange during the last trading hour, led by surging gold mining stocks. Trading was sluggish. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 4.46 to 855.32, advancing most strongly toward the close. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was up 0.13 to 97.68. Advances led declines, 1,070 to 431, among the 1,788 issues traded.

55 MPH limit now official, search for new oil goes on

From Herald news services

The legal speed limit on the nation's highways is now 55 miles per hour following enactment yesterday by President Richard Nixon of federal legislation which curbs speed limits to conserve fuel.

Under the new law, all states which fail to comply with the limit will face a cutoff of federal aid for highway construction. No state is expected to balk at the federal legislation and some states have already lowered their speed limits in anticipation of federal action.

But Illinois, caught without a definite plan to reduce state speed limits on some roads from 70 mph to 55 mph, is attempting to find a way for the action to be done speedily.

A spokesman for Gov. Daniel Walker said the governor's office was investigating the possibility of Walker reducing state speed limits by executive order, but that it appeared legislation would be needed, meaning the legislature may have to be called back into special session.

In signing the new federal law, Nixon said "estimates indicate we can save nearly 200,000 barrels of fuel a day by observing a national speed limit of 55 miles per hour."

The new speed limit was originally mentioned by the President when he asked Americans to drive only 50 mph, a proposal which brought storms of protest from truckers and other professional highway users.

In other energy related matters:

—The Interior Department Wednesday opened 7.7 million acres of California's ocean shelf, some of it just off Los Angeles, to oil and gas exploration. The action is expected to draw heavy criticism from environmentalists and recreation industry spokesmen since some of the areas now open to the oil industry is in heretofore untarnished Santa Monica Bay with its beaches and valuable homes.

—An independent business and research group in New York said the government may have overestimated the petroleum shortage in this country by as much as 1.3 million barrels a day. The Conference Board, an organization headed by former Sec. of Commerce Alexander Brownbridge, said although the government has more fuel than previously thought, it is no sign the fuel crisis is anything but real and that the crisis will get worse.

—Although the fuel shortage caused a cutback in commercial airline flights toward the end of the year, the nation's airlines carried five per cent more passengers in 1973 than in previous years with a net profit of $226 million.

—Factories in Great Britain laid off almost 750,000 workers Wednesday in the first shock of the three-day work week imposed by the government because of the energy crisis.

Federal health plan may be near

From Herald news service

A comprehensive new federal plan to eliminate "all the barriers to quality health care" may be part of President Nixon's State of the Union message this year, according to Caspar Weinberger, secretary of health, education and welfare.

Weinberger revealed yesterday that a new, major health care program using the insurance facilities of private corporations may be in the offing soon.

A tentative version of the plan goes like this:

Persons would pay a minimum annual fee for health care of say, $150 and medical care expenses incurred during the year over that amount would be subsidized by the plan. The program would pay all medical costs above an upper limit of about $1500.

The new plan, according to Weinberger, would provide that employers and self-employed be required to offer health insurance to employees.

The medical plan would also include various cost sharing features and government assistance for people of low income.

Weinberger emphasized that the new plan would not involve nationalizing either the medical profession or the health insurance industry.

Immediate government aid to many individuals came in the mail yesterday when new, gold checks from federal welfare checks were mailed to over three million aged, blind and disabled persons.

The checks are part of the new Supplemental Security Income program which went into effect Jan. 1.

The new program represents a federal takeover of some 1,152 differing state and local welfare programs and the nation's first guaranteed annual income for specific needy persons.

The first three million recipients of the checks were on state and local welfare rolls last month. The federal government now pays these specific individuals directly, guaranteeing them at least $130 a month for an individual and $195 a month for a couple.

Monthly cost to the government is expected to run $330 million this month.

Mideast troop issue at important stage

From Herald news services

Egyptian and Israeli negotiators in Geneva said yesterday they have reached "an important stage" in negotiations on separating their military forces along the Suez Canal front.

No details were disclosed, but the report of progress in the talks — which resumed after a four-day recess — came shortly after Israel and the United States announced Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan will meet Friday in Washington with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The announcement said Dayan and Kissinger would discuss the Middle East crisis with particular emphasis on the disengagement of the Egyptian and Israeli troops.

At the same time, Cairo dispatches said Egyptian foreign minister Ismail Fahmi would visit Moscow in mid-January for talks on the Mideast, including the troop disengagement issue, and Egyptian-Soviet relations.

On the tense cease-fire lines, new clashes and artillery fire were reported and Israel said its forces had suffered their biggest day's casualties since the Middle East truce began.

Previous efforts to work out an agreement on separating the Egyptian and Israeli forces ended in deadlock and the issue was given top priority at the Middle East peace conference in Geneva.

The Arabs said there could be no real peace talks until a settlement was reached.

The Geneva talks were recessed last Friday because of Israel's national elections in which balloting indicated Prime Minister Golda Meir's ruling Labor alignment had retained power, but that opposition parties advocating no territorial compromises with the Arabs, had gained ground in parliament.

The National Religious party, which opposes surrender of the West Bank of Jordan, poses the biggest hurdle to formation of a new coalition government of Golda Meir, political sources said.

The Religious party holds a projected 11 seats in the next parliament, making it the major coalition party in any new Labor government.

Unofficial returns from the elections thus far indicated the Labor alignment had lost six of its 57 seats in the 120-seat Knesset parliament while the hawkish right-wing Likud bloc would gain six for a total of 38. Tabulation of the soldier vote is not expected to be completed before the weekend, but observers said voting was expected to be along lines already reported since it was a citizen army.

IRS again eyes Nixon's tax deduction legality

From Herald news services

The Internal Revenue Service announced Wednesday it is reviewing President Nixon's income tax returns again to determine the legality of certain deductions he took during his White House tenure.

Such an announcement concerning an individual's returns is unusual, but the IRS said it "has been authorized by the President's representatives to disclose that it is re-examining the Presidents tax returns."

Nixon made public on Dec. 8 his tax returns for 1969-72, and asked Congress' Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to investigate two controversial deductions which reduced his taxes for the period by about $300,000.

The IRS did not disclose the years to be covered in the new audit. But the joint committee, headed by Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., decided Dec. 12 to examine not merely the two deduction issues Nixon raised, but his entire tax situation during 1969-72.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren said in California the committee was asked to examine the returns for the past four years and that the IRS was working in conjunction with the committee, leaving the impression it was those four years that were under review.

Warren said the White House was co-operating fully with the investigation.

Nixon wrote Mills Dec. 8 that "in the event that the committee determines that the items were incorrectly reported, I will pay whatever tax may be due."

The deductions he listed were: —$576,000 for the gift of his vice presidential papers to the National Archives, on which there have been questions as to whether this was done before a new law prohibiting such deductions took effect.

—Savings Nixon realized by not paying capital gains taxes on profits from selling 23 acres of property from his estate at San Clemente, Calif.

Hunt released from jail

From Herald news services

Former White House aide E. Howard Hunt Jr. was released from prison yesterday pending outcome of his appeal after serving less than one year for masterminding the Watergate break-in. Bernard Barker, foreman of the burglary team, also appealing, was slated to be released from Eglin federal prison in Florida today for a flight to Washington.

The U.S. Court of Appeals ordered the two released pending disposition of their appeals. Both men cited family reasons. Hunt's wife was killed in an airline crash in Chicago in December of 1972 and his four children have been living in Washington. Barker lost his business and his only daughter has been seeking his release.

Of the 19 White House aides, corporation executives and others who have pleaded guilty or been found guilty in connection with 1972 campaign violations, only five remain in jail. Three of these are Cuban-Americans.

Report hints rise in food prices

From Herald news services

The Agriculture Department has reported that prices of raw farm products stopped declining in mid November and rose 1.5 per cent in the following month, which may mean an increase in consumer food prices.

Wheat and cotton reached record highs in the report for the month ending Dec. 15. The report showed raw farm products were still 11 per cent below the all-time peak reached in August, 1973, but were 34 per cent above a year earlier.

The department's monthly report on prices farmers get for raw products — which could foreshadow another hike in consumer food prices, showed beef cattle and hogs declined again in December. But those drops were more than offset by higher prices for wheat, corn, cotton, milk, soy beans and eggs.

If the costs and profits for food processors and retailers hold steady or widen, the higher raw farm prices would push retail prices up.

Beef cattle prices declined for the fourth straight month by $1.90 per hundred pounds to $37.60 a hundredweight. The Dec. 15 cattle price average was the lowest since last January and was 27 per cent below the August, 1973, peak. Hog prices fell $2.20 a hundredweight to $36.20, down 32.4 per cent from the August peak. Overall, prices for all meat animals combined dropped 5 per cent for the month but were 15 per cent above a year earlier.

The $37.60 beef cattle average compared with $34.80 a year earlier while the $36.20 hog average compared with $29.50 a year earlier.

A sharp increase in wheat prices — 58 cents per bushel to a record $4.78 — helped push the index of food grain prices up 10 per cent to more than double the year-ago level. The cotton price index rose 16 per cent and was 89 per cent above a year earlier.

Average prices for dairy products rose another 2 per cent in December and were 32 per cent above a year earlier.

The report said farm costs rose 1.5 per cent in the month ending Dec. 15 and were 17 per cent above a year earlier. With both farm costs and prices rising, prices remained at 89 per cent of the "fair earning power" level, unchanged from November but 11 points above a year earlier.

People

• While a throng of over 100,000 persons crowded the palace grounds, Japanese Emperor Hirohito and his family came out in public yesterday for his regular New Year's public appearance. With the 72-year old emperor was the Empress of Japan, 70-year old Nagako and other members of the royal family, including Crown Prince Akihito and Crown Princess Michiko. While scattered shouts of "bonzai" erupted from the crowd below, Japan's ceremonial chief of state for the past 47 years stood with his family behind a bullet proof glass.

• Another royal family is also in the news. Rumors in London are that Prince Charles is now serious about Lady Jane Wellesey who reportedly was the prince's guest at the royal family home at Sandringham. But despite talk of an early betrothal, Prince Charles left England yesterday to rejoin his naval unit in Singapore.

• The newest member of the royal family, Captain Mark Phillips has been appointed a personal aide-de camp to Queen Elizabeth, a title which is honorary and exists from Victorian times.

• In a mood mixing soul music and hard political reality, Detroit inaugurated its first black mayor Tuesday, 55-year old Coleman A. Young. Mayor Young takes over a city beset by financial problems, high crime and a dwindling population. Young appealed to blacks and whites to work together to take Detroit away from its image as a ugly, violent city.

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Fiber Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large earloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, es, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of P.K. Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Cops moonlight — for the money

policemen, however.

Most Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight do so as a store detective, usually at Randhurst, because it is the biggest shopping center in the area. However, the policemen have worked at other stores, particularly when they first open and have not as yet hired their own full-time security force. The men either can wear their uniforms or act as undercover agents.

BUFFALO GROVE policemen pick up most of their extra jobs by guarding construction sites. The builders contract with the village for the men. Some men work at banks too.

Chief Harry Walsh, who does not have to approve such jobs, said he knows of no

FISH volunteers sought by group

FISH, a volunteer service organization, is seeking volunteers to provide transportation, hot meals or babysitting services to those who need them.

The local FISH organization, serving Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights, recently has been handling an increased number of calls with a dwindling number of volunteers.

Persons who are interested in donating one day a month or more should call 382-2300 or write to THE FISH, Box 158, Prospect Heights, Ill. 60070.

Burglars 'catch' $700 in fishing gear

Burglars went fishing over the weekend in Buffalo Grove. Their "catch" included $700 worth of fishing equipment and a suitcase from a storage locker in the basement of 655 Grove Dr., police said.

The "tackled" equipment was owned by Arthur R. Brady, of that address. Burglars also took some tools belonging to Edward J. Huetsen, 645 Grove Dr. The tools were in a workshop area near the boiler room, police added.

one in the department who has a non-guard-type of job, such as working in a gas station.

All of the policemen who moonlight and talked with The Herald admitted they do it mainly for the money, particularly at holiday time. "It pays for Christmas. It makes it a lot easier and a lot happier," as one man put it.

One policeman said he is down to being a store guard one day a week, although he had worked more when he had his children's medical and educational bills to pay for. The extra cash appears welcome in times of financial stress.

Yet a couple of men said they felt acting as a store detective helps them sharpen their investigative techniques and awareness. All agreed that being a policeman, however, is first.

Man, 22, severely burned in motel fire

A 22-year-old Wheeling man was seriously burned Tuesday morning at the Wishing Well Motel, 397 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Police said Howard Fallat, 1409 S. Wolf Rd., suffered second- and third-degree burns over 30 to 40 per cent of his body.

Fallat was in fair condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital, where he had been taken by Wheeling firemen.

An investigation of the 1:38 a.m. fire still is being conducted, according to police. They said Gary E. Firek, whose parents live at 445 Lauren Ln., Buffalo Grove, was with Fallat in the motel room when the fire occurred. However, police said Firek could remember nothing other than the two allegedly drank a bottle of whiskey earlier.

Firemen said a mattress was the only property burned and the fire had been put out before an ambulance was called. No fire equipment was called to the scene.

Police said a container of lighter fluid and a cigarette lighter were found next to the bed.

Firek was not injured.

Bakalis in 'power grab'? Many educators believe so

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis says he believes the most significant thing he has done during his three years in office is the development of the "Action Goals for the '70s."

The "Action Goals" were developed after Bakalis held a series of public hearings in 1971 and were published in book form. The document listed goals in many areas of education, including things like finance, curriculum, teacher training and equal education. Each goal was strongly worded and many placed specific time limits on accomplishment.

The goals created quite a stir, particularly in places like board of education meeting rooms. Many board members felt Bakalis was making a "power grab" and was trying to take over all the schools in the state. They resented the fact that goals said that schools absolutely "shall" do certain things by a certain time.

Last week, Bakalis issued a second edition of the "Action Goals." And, while some of the language has been toned down to placate boards that feared for local control, some new problems which are sure to be pointed out to the state superintendent have also cropped up.

THE SECOND edition contains a progress report on accomplishment of the original goals. As part of the progress report, the document lists programs which are going on in various school districts around the state that are "innovative" and in keeping with the letter and spirit of the goals.

High School Dist. 214, High School Dist. 211 and Palatine Twp. Dist. 15 are the districts from this area which are mentioned in the new Action Goals. But before you jump to the conclusion that the other districts in the Northwest suburbs aren't doing anything good, listen to how the districts listed were chosen.

The state office asked all the districts in the state to send in memos describing new and innovative programs they were trying. Also, according to Bakalis, there were some programs the members of his staff had heard of firsthand. When a district sent in a description of a "new, innovative" program, no one from the state office went out to see if the program was working or even if it was going on at all. In the words of one official, "We took them at their word."

THE PROBLEM with this system is

Equivalency tests Tuesday at Harper

Applications for high school equivalency tests will be accepted Tuesday at Harper College in Palatine from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the community counseling center building Room 347.

Students who pass the tests qualify for a certificate which may fulfill college entrance requirements and job placement requirements. The examinations are open to anyone over age 19 who has never received a high school diploma.

Three testing periods are required and are scheduled for Jan. 18, 19 and 25 at Harper. A $5 fee must be paid when applying for the tests.

Education today

by Wandalyn Rice

clear. Some districts, and some individuals in some districts, sent in lots of ideas. Other districts didn't send in any ideas, frequently because they were doing other things — like, for example, running "new, innovative" programs.

Now, just because the state listed mostly the districts which had taken the time to send in a description of their programs, that does not mean that any of the programs listed are undeserving of recognition. It is interesting to note, however, that the bilingual programs in the Chicago public schools are listed, and those are the same programs that have come under question recently by the Chicago board of education.

The chief difficulty with listing specific districts in the new edition of the Action Goals is that, by listing the programs, the state appears at least to be giving them a de facto stamp of approval. And, no matter how often state officials say that they don't mean the list to be exclusive, and that they don't mean other districts aren't doing good things, some people are going to misunderstand.

BAKALIS SAYS HE hopes in time to develop a more comprehensive listing of innovative programs going on in the state. That way, he says, school districts will be able to share each other's good ideas.

Now that is certainly needed. After all, there's no reason for a district in a far downstate county to "reinvent" a program that has already been a success or failure in the Northwest suburbs.

But in order to develop the list, I sure hope Bakalis' staff intends to do more than accept unquestioningly the public relations releases sent to him by school districts.

After all, every innovative program any school official sees fit to tell the state office about cannot possibly be good. That's just the law of averages.

ANOTHER BRIEF observation from the Action Goals: I wish someone would decide what, if anything, the name of High School Dist. 214 is. The Action Goals sometimes refer to Mount Pros-

Europe rushes to rebuild railways for fast travel

by LEROY POPE
NEW YORK — While Americans insist on traveling by airplane and automobile, the Europeans are rushing to rebuild their railway system to handle passenger trains at 120 miles an hour.

The Europeans thus are betting on railways as the economic backbone of the future. On the other hand, the bill just passed in Congress to restructure the railways in 17 Northeastern and Midwestern states with the aid of $2 billion in government guaranteed loans is expected to create a trunkline freight system in the main.

Passenger service will be restricted to a few corridor lines with high density business travel. Even commuter service is largely being taken over from the railroads by local communities.

THE AMERICAN railroads are no longer considered a factor in the tourist business. The Europeans have a different attitude. They are restructuring their railroads to take over an ever-increasing share of tourist traffic from the airlines, restoring the railways to their dominant position of half a century ago in short haul traffic.

The goal is to shift virtually all short haul traffic in Europe from the highways and the airways to the railways by 1985.

The plan for this has been drawn up by the International Union of Railways representing 50 government and privately owned carriers. The plan is being publicized by the union in the United States because of the importance of American tourist dollars.

The goal is to make train travel more economical and faster than travel by car in most of Europe and to make it faster than airline travel for round trips of 300 miles or less. The gain in time, as compared with the planes, comes from elimination of taxi or bus trips to and from airports.

The European plan required tremendous rebuilding. Roadbeds on major trunklines must be built up to a standard allowing trains to move safely at 120 miles an hour and to average 90 miles an hour.

THIS ALREADY has been accomplished on a few European lines. Germany's Blue Train makes those speeds between the Baltic port of Hamburg and Klagfurt in Austria. French railways hit 120 miles an hour between Paris and the Spanish border town of Irun and between Paris and Toulouse.

An integral part of the European railway plan is the tunnel under the English Channel, construction of which is to start soon. The British and French want to eliminate both the slow ocean ferry and the shuttle plane in favor of high speed passenger and freight trains under the sea channel.

The railway union claims its plan will move passengers by a train at an average speed of 81 miles an hour, including necessary stops, whereas the most a motorist can hope to average on European roads is 54 miles an hour.

The plan will reshape the main railway routes in Britain, France, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy and Spain.

The whole plan is based on the conviction that for Europe and possibly for the rest of the world in the years to come, the private automobile and the airplane will be too slow and too expensive for all except longer passenger trips.

Hear cash register—not wedding bells

So you thought that wedding bells were in the back of every unmarried woman's mind, right?

Wrong. Case in point: single working women with five-figure salaries.

So observes W. Scane Bowler, chairman and chief executive officer of Pioneer Western Corp., a national financial services organization whose principal subsidiaries are Western Reserve Life Assurance Co. and the management company for the Pioneer group of mutual funds.

He notes that "a growing number of women are clearly reluctant to give up lucrative positions and a sense of independence. The antithesis is true for men in similar financial positions. The moment they begin to achieve monetary stature, they begin to hear wedding bells — and so starts the hunt for the legendary rose-covered cottage."

A RECENT STUDY showed that male executives are far more marriage-minded than their female counterparts. Of 100 single women questioned — ages 35 to 44 — and all with substantial incomes, only 36 indicated any real desire to marry in the near future. Queries of the same number of single men in similar age and salary brackets revealed that the opposite holds true — 87 were either already planning marriage or had hopes of marrying in the not-distant future.

Bowler adds that these findings coincide with the national profile of men and women, aged 35 to 44, with annual incomes over $12,000. Fully 32 per cent of these wage-earners are single women — whereas single men comprise only 4.3 per cent of the mix. "Evidently, money and marriage for men go hand-in-hand."

He further comments that many of the women felt their careers were of prime importance. They feared marriage would rob them of a sense of freedom and conceivably even their jobs — not to mention their paychecks.

As one woman said: "A man would have to be quite affluent to provide me with the same amount of money I now earn each month."

Another opted for working as opposed to marriage because "it gives me a sense of belonging, of involvement — of identifying with a busy world rather than sitting at home reading about what is happening."

BOWLER ALSO observes a definitive trend among such successful single women toward meaningful financial planning for future goals, including retirement.

"For the most part, the women enjoyed the relatively plush life style afforded by their substantial salaries and were cautious about placing it in jeopardy through marriage. Today, the majority of women in the upper income brackets feel they literally cannot afford to get married," Bowler concludes.

Zenith Radio cited for hiring handicapped

Zenith Radio Corp.'s active role in hiring the handicapped was recognized by the State of Illinois during a recent ceremony at the company's headquarters in Chicago.

The State's Division of Vocational Rehabilitation presented Zenith with its 1973 merit award, the only such award given to a private company this year in Illinois.

Ex-POW gets chance to find second career in industry

by EDWARD S. LECHTZN
UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) — His first love is flying, but 5½ years in a North Vietnamese prisoner of war camp has made that an impossibility for Lt. Col. Donald "Digger" Odell.

Instead, the Air Force officer is being given a chance to find a second career in industry.

Odell is one of three POWs taking part in a military program called "Education With Industry," normally designed to give an officer knowledge to become a procurement officer and work with companies handling defense contracts.

In Odell's case, it may be the basis for a new career outside the Air Force. Not yet 40, Odell says he'll decide by next summer whether he'll take off the uniform and exchange it for civvies permanently.

ODELL HAS been with the Pontiac Motor Division of General Motors Corp. since late September, learning how an auto company operates. He spent much of December in the Public Relations section, dealing with the news media.

Odell was shot down over North Vietnam in October, 1967, and was not released until March of this year. During his confinement, Odell's neck was broken by a rifle butt and doctors say he's fortunate to be walking.

"I've always been a fighter pilot and my first love is flying," he said in a recent interview. "But, as a result of some of my injuries, I can no longer fly."

"So, my next thought was to pursue a career that I could directly relate to the outside, and hopefully, industrial management, somewhere in there," Odell said.

For the 120 Air Force officers who take part in the EWI program each year, the outcome is pretty well decided. They normally have to spend at least three more years in the military monitoring defense contracts.

"IN OTHER words," Odell explained, "a contract is made with one of the major industries here in Detroit to manufacture some item for the services. The only thing you do is more or less supervise, or monitor, these programs to ensure they're meeting the specifications on the contract, quality control and other things."

If Odell decides to stay in the Air Force, he'll stay right in Detroit in DASCAR — Defense Contracting Region — to make sure defense contractors deliver products on time and in the right quantities.

Either way, says Odell, the program provides a good way to get back into the pattern of normal life.

How about increasing educational quality?

Herald editorial

Enrollment drop can aid schools

Declining public school enrollment, a unique phenomenon in the Northwest suburbs, should offer the incentive for higher quality education in 1974.

As reported in the Herald last week, nearly every school district here is experiencing an enrollment decline or stabilization, with only Schaumburg Dist. 54 still growing rapidly.

Other districts, after years of too many children and too few desks and buildings, now find themselves with just the reverse — too few children, too many desks.

Logically, this should be the perfect time to trim budgets, as simple arithmetic dictates fewer students equals fewer costs — but it isn't as simple as that.

School officials find supply costs have zoomed upwards with inflation. State aid contributions drop as enrollment declines. Teachers demand more in paychecks, and the schools built in the 1960s must be paid for in the 1970s.

In short, the enrollment drop won't create massive savings for taxpayers in the immediate future. We're pretty much locked into present school expenditures. With careful budget trimming, some money can be saved — and school boards should insist that costs should be reduced, wherever possible.

But there are important educational benefits hidden behind the stabilization of population growth here. We offer a few possibilities for educators to consider:

—Declining enrollment does not follow a precise pattern, but generally smaller classes are coming, and that should encourage greater use of individualized instruction.

—Empty school rooms or buildings can be used for after-hours school use or for community use.

—School officials now need to spend less time on planning for more buildings and to spend more time on the quality of suburban education.

Local education, under the strain of the baby boom, has done an excellent job for the children of suburbia. We have no quarrel with the manner in which the public school establishment has reached out to the public, and the public has backed it, during the growth years of the 1960s.

However, there's now more room for innovation and creativity in districts throughout our area. There is no limit to the capacities for our children to learn, and likewise, there should be no limit to the ability of our schools to educate in the mid-1970s.

'74 elections' old news

The New Year's Eve mail brought a calendar from U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th. That sets him apart from the politician who decided not to send out calendars this year — because he is not yet sure that 1974 is going to be the kind of year with which he wants his name to be associated.

I'm not yet sure that this is going to be the kind of year that I want to be associated with, either. But now that we're into it, there isn't much we can do about it but continue to muddle through.

It is now An Election Year, and as the politicians crank up for the day of polling, there will be the regular run of unexpected events: candidates, withdrawing for mysterious reasons, an upset here and there, a frontrunner indicted on the eve of the election.

Nobody can predict all the odd things that are bound to occur in this election year, but there are a number of things that are as certain as death and taxes if you happen to be in the business of political reporting:

—The Search for the Anonymous Candidate. Somewhere there will be a candidate who files his nominating petitions and disappears. He will have an unlisted telephone number. He will be unknown to any of the leaders of his party. He will work for a firm in the Loop and will be permanently out, or in conference. He will not return telephone calls, nor will he answer letters. He will not appear at any campaign functions. When his home telephone number is finally secured 10 days before the election, a foreign-speaking maid will answer the telephone and laboriously explain that he is in Hawaii.

On the day before the election, a previously unheard of personage who identifies himself as the candidate's press aide will call your boss and raise hell because his candidate has been ignored by your newspaper.

—The Misquote. A candidate will make a blatant error of fact in a speech before incorrectly cite the U.S. Constitution — before 200 voters, three tape recorders and two reporters.

Under questioning by the reporters, the candidate will persist in his error. Before the story appears in print, he will realize his error and telephone the reporters, imploring that his public statement be revised to conform to reality. One reporter will comply. The candidate will bear a lifelong grudge against the other.

—The Night of the Candidates. A women's organization will succeed in getting 28 candidates together on the same platform on a snowy night in March. The audience will consist of eight women, only three of which live in a district served by any of the 28 candidates. Each candidate will speak for four minutes, two more than allotted them. There will be one question from the audience, directed at "Any of the candidates who chooses to respond." None will choose to respond. Or, worse, all 28 will.

—The Confiding Candidate. He will first confide in you that his limited budget allows only $2,305 for advertising, and he has concluded that all but $5 of it will best be spent in your newspaper. Later he will hint that following his election he will probably get to name the next state director of revenue and that your publisher is at the top of his list. He will also ask if you ever considered going into public service at, say $38,000 per year. When your newspaper endorses his opponent, he will be convinced that you have been bought off.

200 voters, three tape recorders and one reporter. Having seen his statement in print, he will scream that he was misquoted. He will carry a lifelong grudge against the reporter.

—The Correct Quote. A certified public accountant will misstate the budget by several billion dollars — or a lawyer will

Washington window

Food price-tags periled

by MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON — The day may be coming when shoppers strolling down the aisle of their neighborhood supermarket no longer can find prices stamped on each can of juice or jar of peanut butter.

They may have to rely instead only on shelf stickers. This possibility is viewed dimly by some consumer spokesmen who say stickers are often out of date, hard to read and difficult to match with the food item they are supposed to represent.

An end to the practice of stamping prices on each product in a store is a likely outgrowth of electronic technology now rapidly settling on the supermarket industry. Starting next year, and increasing during the next three to four years, many supermarkets will switch to computer-backed electronic checkout systems.

Instead of a cash register, these systems use a scanner. Most products in the store will carry, on their labels, a code number and a symbol consisting of black and white bars. For instance, when the checkout clerk passes a can of peas over the scanning slot in the counter, the number and spacing of bars on the symbol will trigger from the computer's memory the exact price for that particular brand and size.

The symbols will be on the products when they arrive from the manufacturer. All the store has to do is program the computer for the price it wants that symbol to ring up. The time the shopper stands in line at the checkout will be drastically reduced but the big savings is to the supermarket in inventory information and labor savings, including an end to the need to stamp the price on each food product in the store.

Virginia Knauer, President Nixon's consumer adviser, said recently the industry "has not thought to involve consumers in decisions that threaten the consumer's ability to compare prices" — including the practice of peeling back higher price stickers pasted over older ones to determine which brands are jumping their prices fastest.

"If the industry waits and springs a full-blown system on the consumer, they will find themselves confronting legions of outraged shoppers," Mrs. Knauer added.

The National Association of Food Chains admits that the systems — including an IBM version now on the market at a cost in excess of $100,000 for the average store — are being promoted for their ability to cut costs by eliminating individual price stamping. The trade group also said there is "no question" that consumer groups should have been brought into the planning before now.

"But if there is enormous consumer resistance to the removal of prices from individual items, then those prices will not be removed," a spokesman for the association added. "It's not going to happen all at once or even in the same company all at once, so if there is resistance shoppers will go elsewhere and competition will force stores to put the prices back on. The consumer will win one way or another." (UPI)

Chicago Fire Department plans defended

As the acting supervisor of ambulance service of the Chicago Fire Department, I felt that I should reply to the letter in your "Fence Post" column on December 21, by Richard C. Rehner, an E.M.T. from Hoffman Estates.

First of all, my name is James Harper, not Donald Harper. Second, I have been with the ambulance service since September 1, 1973, not for eight months. Third, Mr. Rehner could have responded to 17 calls in a 12-hour period but not 47.

I was with Commissioner Quinn at the time he was interviewed about the Cadillac ambulances and the reporter was told that all ambulances that will be purchased in the future will meet the Department of Transportation specifications. Pontiac ambulances purchased in 1970 have been replaced already because they have not held up as well as the Cadillacs. If the new ambulances are Cadillacs, they will meet D.O.T. specs.

At the time of the interview, the reporter knew that we have 18 emergency medical technicians (EMTs) that are entering paramedic training at Resurrection Hospital on January 7, 1974. These paramedics will man Ambulance 16 at O'Hare Field and will also man a telemetry unit to be assigned to a helicopter at Meigs Field that responds to all expressway accidents. This is a pilot program, the results of which will be studied by Commissioner Quinn.

During the month of November, 1973, Commissioner Quinn ordered me to see that the men in the ambulance service are properly trained, along with the 12 helicopter pilots.

Five helicopter pilots, along with 25 ambulance men, will start EMT training on January 15, 1974, at Northwestern Memorial Hospital in Chicago. Another group of 30 men will start EMT training at Michael Reese Hospital during February, 1974. All Chicago Fire Department ambulance personnel will be trained at least to the level of EMT. This involves training 275 men plus pilots.

Our 33 ambulances, plus one stand-by ambulance at O'Hare Field, will have responded to 108,000 runs during 1973, averaging approximately nine runs per ambulance per 24-hour period. Our average round trip per run is just under five miles.

The omission of some pertinent facts by a reporter will not give a true picture. Doctor Joseph Cari, the Chicago Fire Department physician, and I have been ordered by Commissioner Quinn to research the ambulance service in order to seek the ultimate in ambulance service, for the Commissioner is dedicated to give the best in ambulance service to the citizens of the city of Chicago.

Hit-and-run driver scolded

A modern day Scrooge must have been in Arlington Heights early Sunday morning, December 23. He was driving an older model, perhaps '66 or '67, light blue Plymouth. He was traveling north on Chestnut when he ran the stop sign at Kirchoff. I was traveling west on Kirchoff when our cars collided. Before I could get out of the car to survey the damage, "Ebenezer" turned off his lights and went speeding down the streets of Chestnut, Rockwell and Vall until he had lost me. He must have considerable damage to his right side and possibly a broken window as there was glass at the scene of the accident.

I wonder what he told his family, friends and neighbors to explain the damage to his car. Did he suggest that he was the victim of a hit and run? I will be working on my Christmas break from college. Instead of using the money towards college expenses, the money will be used to cover the amount not covered by insurance, $100. Over $400 damage was done to the car I was driving. Perhaps like "Scrooge," he will realize there is still time to make amends.

Animal-killers hit

I am going to write about people who kill animals. I don't think this should go on, because people who go hunting usually do it for pleasure, or sometimes just to brag. If it's for pleasure, why kill something for fun, when we have boats, tennis, baseball and hundreds of different sports? As for bragging, you can be a champion racer or boxer and have your name all over the world if you really try. Why should we kill innocent animals for pleasure?

$2 bill: a good bet

Galloping inflation may make our friend the dollar bill obsolete

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — Years ago the nation lamented the passing of the value of the penny coin. Then it was the nickel and in time the two-bit piece. Now it seems the cry is: "You can't buy anything for a dollar anymore." No doubt about it, the buck, the geetah, the old $1 greenback has seen its more useful days.

So it is that the Treasury Department, in its wisdom, is thinking about resolving this lamentable circumstance.

It may bring back the $2 bill. James Conlon, director of Treasury's bureau of engraving and printing, says the thought has been kicking around for several years now. "As early as 1969 we recommended to the secretary of the Treasury that the two-dollar bill be printed again. Right now the idea is under very active study both by us and the Federal Reserve."

The reasons, says Conlon, are three-fold:

- The dollar doesn't go so far anymore. What can one buy for a one? Two gallons of gas, if it's available at all. A pair of shoestrings and a package of potato chips. A fellow in New York still sells fireplace logs for 99 cents apiece.

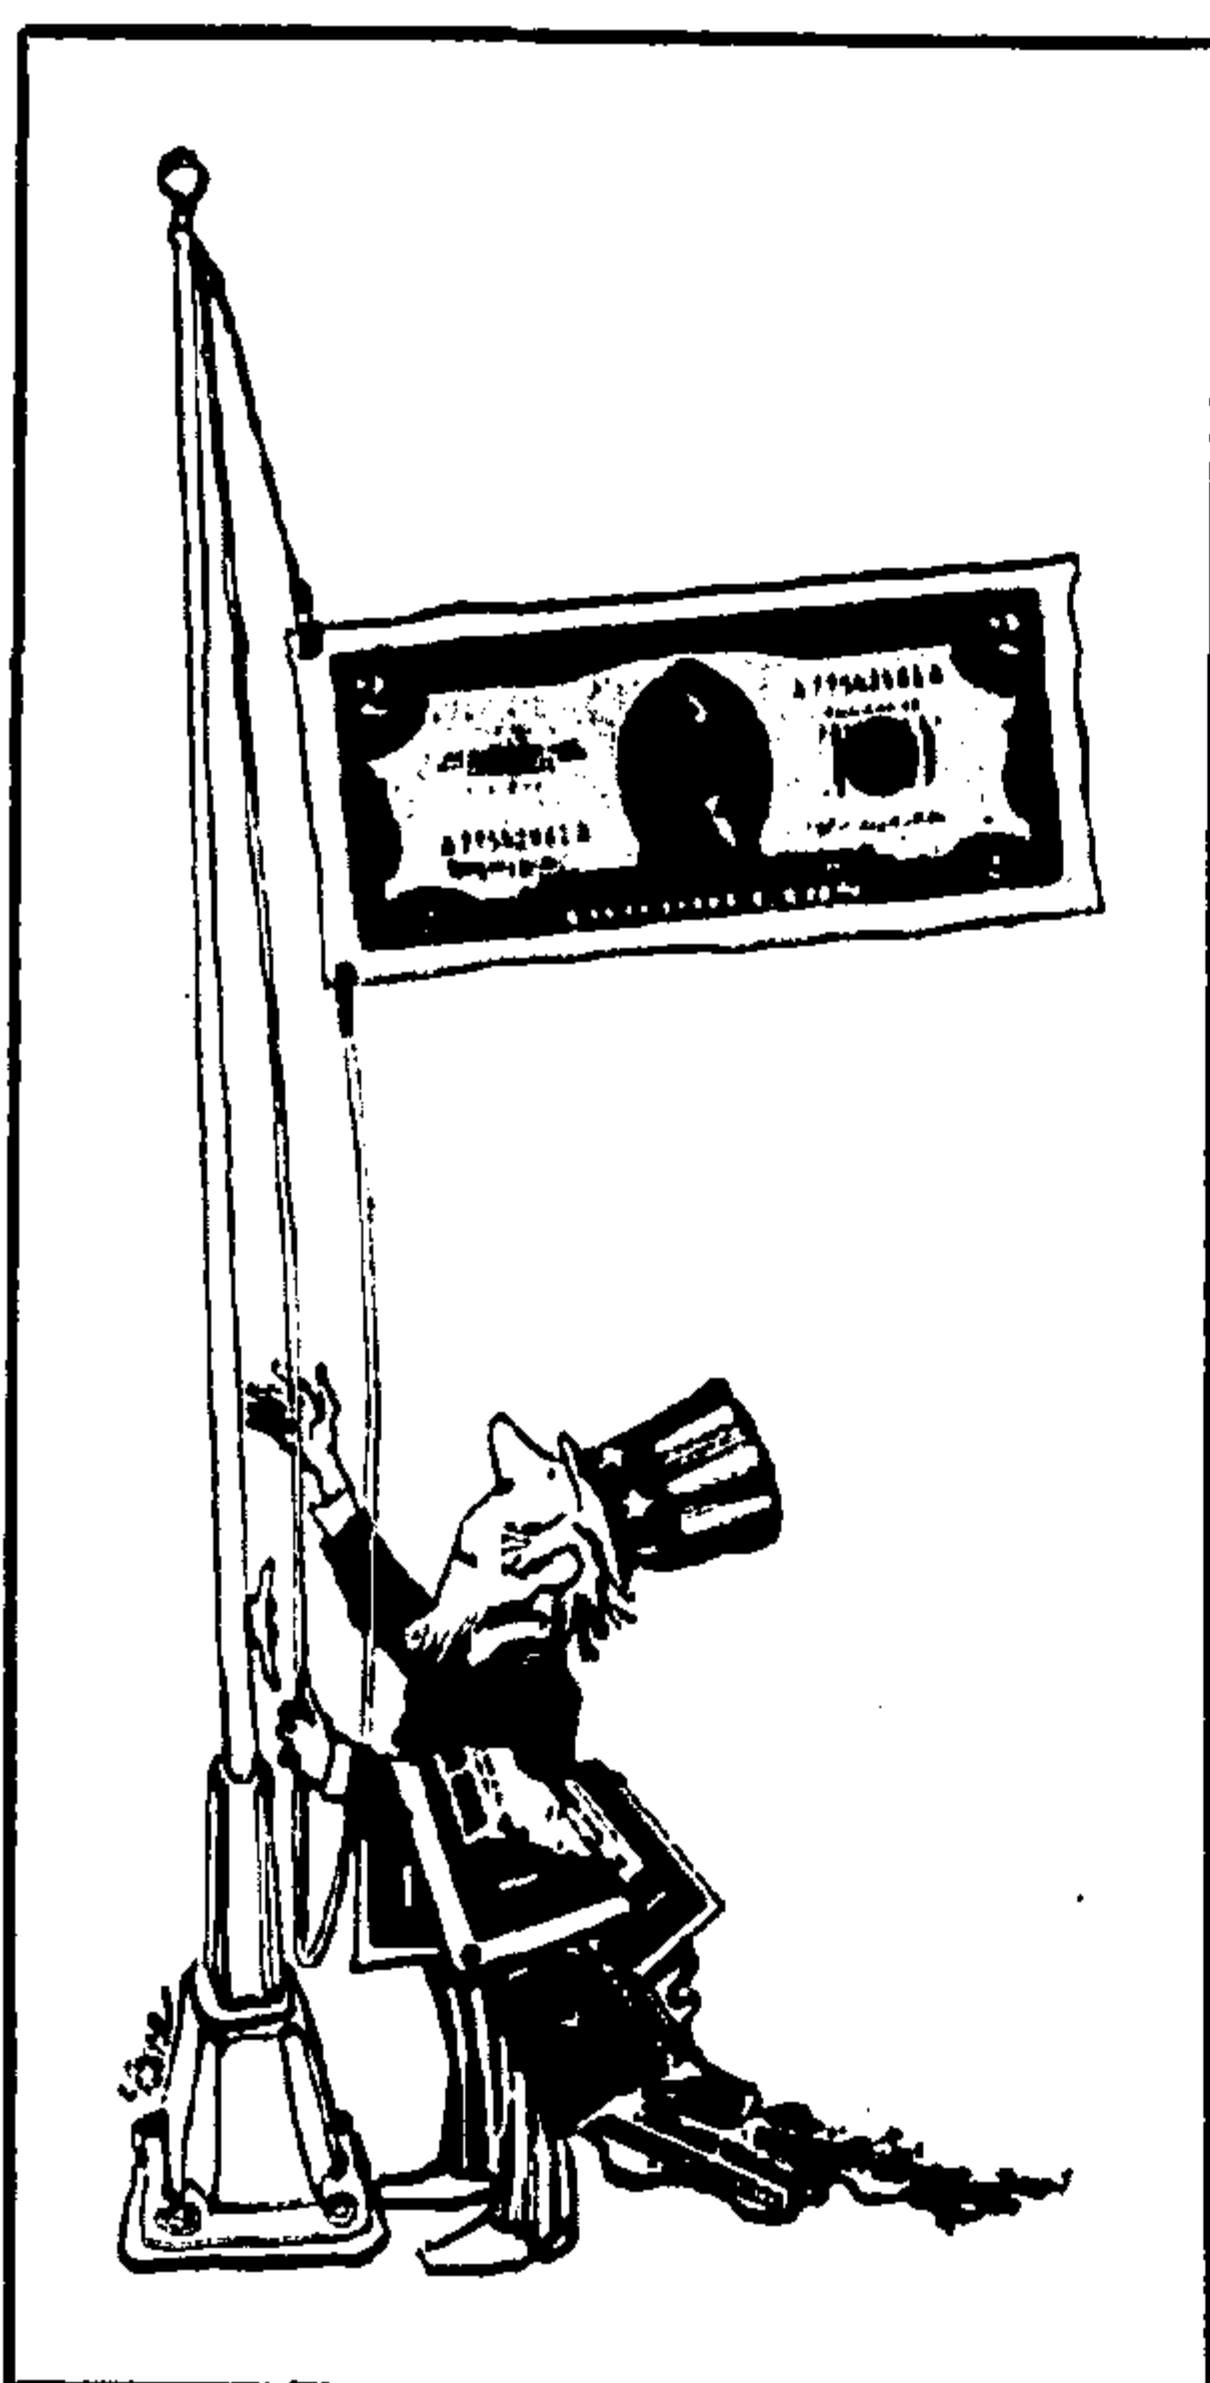

- The American Revolutionary Bicentennial Commission wants commemorative space on the back of the new bill and hopes its re-circulation will advertise 1776. The commission, facing citizen apathy, is at this point grasping for any publicity it can get.

- The $1 bill has a disproportionate ratio of numbers to value. Conlon says about 55 to 65 per cent of all U.S. currency is $1 bills and the substitute printing of a large number of twos could cut engraving and printing costs by about $4 million a year.

TO BE SURE, many Treasury officials feel the two is an idea whose time has come. And this is interesting because many of the same officials, a decade ago, felt the two was an idea whose time had gone. The $2 bill was introduced in America in 1862 and was in general use until 1965, when steadily declining interest in the note forced its discontinuance.

Why the interest decline? The stories are many. From the beginning the bill had an eerie connotation about it: Alexander Hamilton, who was killed in the duel with Aaron Burr, was the original face on the $2 front, and the public unease was such that Hamilton's picture lasted only a year before it was removed in favor of the more routinely deceased Tom Jefferson.

Besides this, says numismatic writer

Mort Reed, the bill in later years "looked a little different from other currency; it wasn't as attractive." Also the bill was "odd" statistically; the government did not print as many twos as ones and because it was somewhat rarer — read that somewhat odder — people attached to it some peculiar significances.

In the end it was superstition that did the two in. Reed says that people would be found hit by a train, or dead from a fall off the building, and $2 bills would be in their pockets. There would also be ones and fives, perhaps, but the twos were remembered and stigmas fixed. Eventually, some business concerns found the public would not even accept the bill in change and this only aggravated the idea it may be funny money.

NO PHONY MONEY, however. Some people apparently did mistake the $2 bill with stories of the $3 bill produced by the Confederacy of the Civil War. "It's as phony as a $3 bill," became, for an erroneous few, "It's as phony as a $2 bill."

But, the two was never phony. Questioned about this by a news reporter in the 1930's, a Treasury official joked: "I assure you the $2 bill is worth $2. If anyone doubts this they may send me personally all their $2 bills and I will prove their worth by spending the money on everything I need in the nearest store."

Yet in its own way the public rejected the bill's value anyway. Sailors during World War II, who for some reason were often paid with disproportionate numbers of twos, gave them to prostitutes who would then hastily give them to pimps, who would in turn give them to the merchants who would turn them into the banks. Recalls a Treasury official of the buck passing:

"Everybody wanted to get rid of the twos. And eventually most of them wound up in banks, which could not get rid of them. Usage dropped to nearly nothing. When we discontinued the note it accounted for only a half-per cent of all bills circulating."

BUT ALL THAT is past, hopes the Treasury Department. Conlon believes a "good public information program" could smooth the way for the $2 return. He says other nations, such as Canada and Australia, use $2 currency with no problems. One idea to stimulate some interest in the new bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives — Rep. Victor Veysay (R-Calif.) has proposed putting the picture of feminist Susan B. Anthony on the $2 face, an idea that doubtless would win favor among women and guarantee the bill wide introductory comment.

Still acceptance can be no foregone conclusion. Dr. V. Clain-Stefanelli, director of the numismatic division of the Smithsonian Institution, remembers giving Cardinal Spellman a $2 bill to autograph years ago.

He thought nothing of it, but other people did. His conclusion: "Either there is a superstition or there isn't. If there is there is no use trying to overcome it. Once something like that gets in the public mind, forget it, it would do no good to try and bring the bill back."

Unless of course they were to, ah, be given out at a reduced rate.

State to upgrade all drinking water

by LEA TONKIN

Drinking water standards will be upgraded in Illinois, pending the approval of Illinois Environmental Protection Agency proposals.

The EPA wants all public water supplies in the state to be chlorinated. The proposed regulations also specify amounts of chemicals such as arsenic, copper, cyanide, mercury and zinc that would be allowed in a public water supply.

Chlorination should help to control the source of such water-borne diseases as typhoid, cholera and polio, according to the EPA. Of the 1,600 public water supplies in Illinois, approximately 930 are already chlorinated. Chlorination is currently required only for surface water supplies or for other supplies that have a history of possible contamination.

Public hearings are scheduled on the proposed standards. They will be conducted by the Illinois Pollution Control Board on Jan. 8 and 9 at Chicago Circle Campus, University of Illinois, Chicago; Jan. 15 at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale; and Jan. 22 at the Holiday Inn, Galesburg. The public is invited to testify at the meetings. The PCB may modify or adopt the proposed regulations.

Pollution board hearings

COMING UP: the Illinois Pollution Control Board's calendar includes these hearings: Environmental Protection Agency vs. Commonwealth Edison Co. today at the State of Illinois building in Chicago; and Texaco Inc. vs. EPA will be heard Jan. 22 at 9:30 a.m. in City Council Chambers, Des Plaines.

Get out and enjoy it . . .

BEAT THE WINTER BLAHS: take a walk through nearby Brookfield Zoo. A self-guided animal walk is offered through Jan. 31. And there's a dinosaur slide lecture at the Elmhurst lecture hall at 2 p.m., Jan. 12. How about the winter outing slated by the Illinois Department of Conservation at Kickapoo State Park on Jan. 20?

Underground 'pickle' disposal

WASTE PICKLE liquor, an acid solution that's left over from the chemical removal process on the surface of steel, may be safely disposed underground. At least, that's what the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines reports.

The waste is injected into permeable underground rock formations. After long storage periods, most of the acid in the solution is neutralized and the iron in the liquid is absorbed, the report said. Underground disposal is three to six times cheaper than surface treatment and disposal.

Subsurface disposal of the WPL was evaluated at the Mt. Simon sandstone formation — a deposit which extends under much of Indiana and Illinois. The Mt. Simon location is used by a steel plant for disposal because the permeable sandstone is sandwiched between impermeable layers of granite and dolomite.

A Loblolly renaissance?

STORY OF JOHNNY LOBLOLLYSEED: Residents in the vicinity of Idabel, Okla., and in southwestern Arkansas are taking part in the Weyerhaeuser Co. seed acquisition drive for reforestation programs. The company shells out $3 for each bushel of ripe, unopened loblolly pinecones. They're hoping that more than 41 million bushels of the pinecones will be gathered by local residents.

The seed will be processed at Weyerhaeuser's forest regeneration center near Magnolia, Ark. About half the seeds will be used for growing seedlings in the nursery. Weyerhaeuser will reforest approximately 114 million acres in Arkansas and Oklahoma in the 1974 planting season.

15 Midwest water supplies are certified

Water supplies in 15 Midwest municipalities were recently certified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as acceptable under federal standards for use by interstate carriers. Among these are Schiller Park and Rosemont.

The EPA classifications are part of an inspection program designed to assist the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in its certification program. Each of the water supplies from which trains, buses and airlines take the water to serve their passengers also is inspected by a state health authority on an annual basis.

1974 may be a banner year—for the collection agencies

ure has risen 40 per cent to a whopping $1.7 billion loss.

Utility and medical accounts are handled by the Credit Bureau of Western Cook County in Oak Park. The agency includes the Credit Bureau of Arlington Heights. According to assistant manager Dick Mitchell, the firm's collection division has encountered a moderate increase in accounts over the past several months.

"You'd be surprised at the volume of business we get," said Mitchell. Debtors are first contacted by mail or phone. The skips — debtors who leave town without a forwarding address — are traced down by the credit bureau, which is paid on the basis of its collection success.

If an overdue bill is paid within 30 days, it will not be entered on the individual's credit record, Mitchell said.

When the debtors are contacted, the most common excuses are "It's someone else's bill" or "I didn't receive the bill," he said.

COLLECTION ACTION by utilities often is initiated within a creditor's business operations. Once the account is handed over to a collection agency, it's no longer active, according to David Price of Commonwealth Edison Co.'s general services department. "If they move and leave a bill unpaid, then it's a bad debt account that's no longer on the books," said Price.

Edison writes off hundreds of thousands of dollars a month in uncollectible accounts. Price said the total "could run close to $3 million" for 1973. Collection agencies are successful with only 3-20 per cent of Edison accounts.

There are many other delinquent accounts which Edison effectively services.

Past due reminders, second and final reminders are sent to tardy customers.

"It's unfortunate that some people wait until we turn off the service," said Price. He says the economic forecasts for 1974 "don't indicate it's going to be a very good year." This could lead to added collection problems, said Price.

MANY BANKS have their own collection departments, adds Robert Schumann, installment loan officer at Mount Prospect State Bank in Mount Prospect. Telephone calls and letters from the bank adjusters are effective in dealing with most debtors. "Also peaceful possession — we will go out and get a car if we can talk them out of it, but that's infrequent," said Schumann. Most hard-core collection work on auto loans is handled by an outside agency, said Schumann.

"Using the credit card is a little too easy," says Schumann of reasons why consumers overextend credit. He anticipates an increase in collections for 1974. "We're seeing people who never received notices before getting them now," Schumann said.

Overextended consumers may choose a consolidation loan as a means of spreading out payments, or they may contact creditors and ask if they will accept a lower payment. Some people learn a lesson from a credit squeeze, and their record is amended at a reporting bureau as a "paid" account.

"Then you have the others who go right back into it. They can't stand the prosperity after a consolidation loan. They're credit ignorant," said Schumann. He adds that credit management education in school or by finance experts would eliminate many credit problems for the consumer.

$58 million in U.S. funds sought

NIPC may clear Elgin-to-O'Hare expressway plan

Review is almost complete of plans for a new expressway linking O'Hare Airport and Elgin, a spokesman for the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission said this week.

NIPC is reviewing a federal grant request for $58 million of the estimated $83 million cost of the 20-mile expressway between the U.S. Rte. 20 bypass at Elgin to Irving Park Road south of O'Hare. Review by NIPC is required to obtain federal funds.

Plans for the state highway have proceeded slowly and are far behind original projections of completion. Complaints about the planned path of the road delayed progress for some time, and there were fears that Gov. Daniel Walker might scrap the state secondary highway construction program that included the expressway.

The four-lane highway was announced in 1971, by Sigmund Ziejewski, highway division regional transportation engineer. At that time, he said the expressway and another one planned to run north and south in a corridor west of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove would be completed within six years.

Harper signups set Wednesday

Registration for spring semester courses in business supervision and administration at Harper College in Palatine will be held for evening students Wednesday from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The program of courses is geared for people who want to move into a supervisory position and for supervisors who wish to move into management positions. Courses in marketing, data processing, accounting, principles of supervision, problems of management and supervision, labor management relations, industrial management and records management will be scheduled one or two nights a week beginning the last week in January.

Students receive college credit for these courses and may work toward a one-year certificate or may transfer their credits to a university where they can work towards a baccalaureate degree. Tuition is $14 per credit hour for residents of Harper's district. Additional information about the program is available from Donald T. Sedilk, coordinator of supervisory and administrative management, or Ray Hylander, counselor in Harper's business division.

Ziejewski said in 1971 that $150 million of a new $900 million highway bond issue would be used on the two projects in the Northwest suburbs.

THE STATE proposed the route of the Elgin expressway and altered it after hearings in affected communities. Hanover Park, for example, bargained to get the highway moved south of the village. Instead of running through the middle of it. Most of the proposed route is on land owned by Commonwealth Edison Co., and the highway department said it would negotiate for the easement rights.

Representatives of other communities in the planned route voiced approval at hearings, as well as offering suggestions to the state. General approval was expressed by representatives of Roselle, Itasca, Bensenville and Elk Grove Village.

The Village of Schaumburg is particularly interested in the link because it would be an important part of Schaumburg's proposed transportation center. The center, to be located near Schaumburg Airport at the Cook-DuPage county line, would provide access to rail, air, bus, taxi, auto and truck traffic. The village is considering purchase of the airport as part of a commitment to the transportation center.

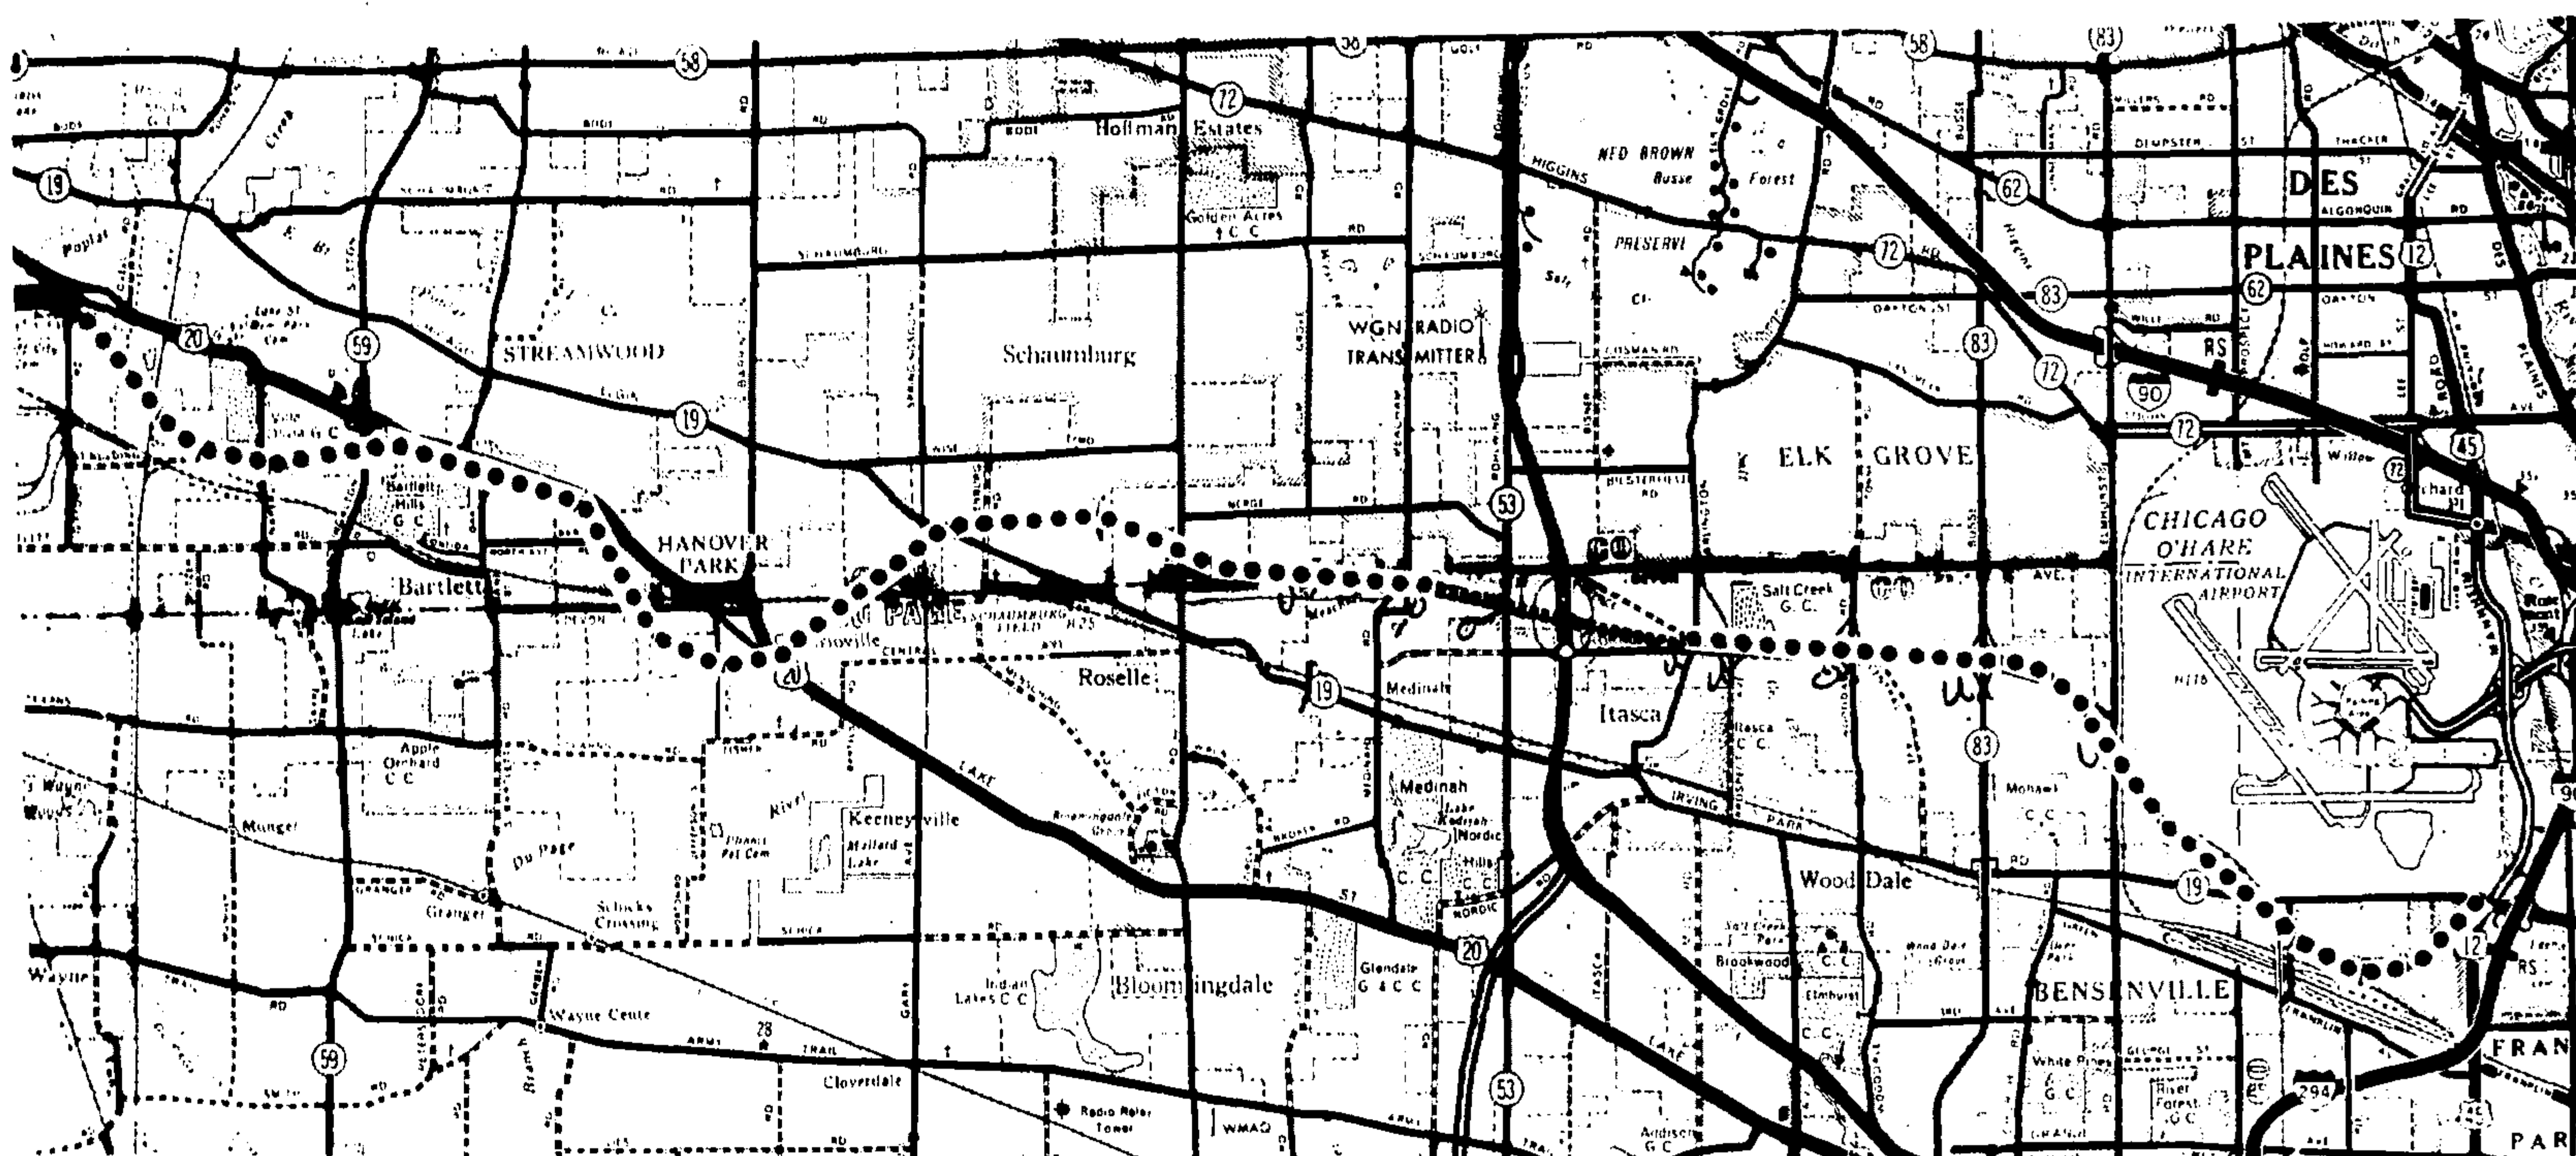

The highway route was included in the NIPC five-year plan adopted in 1971, but there has been concern that the new route may not be needed because the Northwest Tollway may be a satisfactory link between Elgin and O'Hare, according to William Boyd, NIPC general planning and transportation officer.

BOYD SAID he expects the review of the expressway (and request to be presented or discussed by the planning committee of NIPC at a regular meeting on Wednesday. He said the traffic load of the tollway would be a major consideration in the review of the proposed highway.

The Illinois Department of Transportation has completed details of the Elgin-O'Hare route for the federal grant application, but no plans were done for the north-south route near Buffalo Grove.

Bill Flanagan of IDOT said Gov. Walker has since proposed that Ill. Rte. 53 be extended north and south of its present length and be designated an interstate route. His plan was an alternative to the Crosstown Expressway sought by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley.

The federal government has not approved plans to designate that highway as interstate, and has held up other highway plans until the governor and the mayor agree on a single plan for new routes.

WORK IS CONTINUING on plans for the proposed Elgin-O'Hare Expressway, to be funded by state and federal governments. The new four-lane highway parallels the existing Northwest Tollway. Even if federal spending is approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, the project will be far behind schedule.

Surgery can correct tubular pouch birth defect

My daughter, who is 22, just underwent major surgery. She had extensive tests and X-rays beforehand. They knew her appendix and one ovary were bad, and the doctor felt perhaps the female tubes were involved. They did an exploratory and found she had "Meckel's diverticulum."

Could you explain this to me. I understand this is a rare growth found in only a few people.

It's not really a growth. It's a birth defect. And, it's not all that rare, being present in 1 or 2 per cent of the population.

When the baby starts developing, there is a tube connected to the part that will grow into the intestinal tube that comes out to the umbilicus. It is called a yolk stalk. The tube really is a long pouch-like structure like the intestine and it is supposed to disappear. It may remain as a fibrous ligament. In other instances, the tube-like structure remains open as a blind pouch off the small intestine. The long pouch can, on rare instances, connect the small intestine to the umbilicus and even be open and drain.

The doctor says

The tubular pouch or the ligament that remains is connected to the small intestine at a point about one to three feet above where the small intestine joins the colon and to the umbilicus. In most instances it causes no problem, particularly if it is only a remaining ligament.

The tubular pouch, or diverticulum, can have displaced stomach lining tissue or even tissue from the pancreas. It can bleed causing problems or most often it can become inflamed causing abdominal pain.

BECAUSE OF its unusual location it doesn't fit any good pain pattern. It may closely resemble appendicitis. And, it can mimic almost any abdominal disease. The pouch opens off the lower end of the small intestine. For this reason an X-ray of the stomach or the colon will miss it, in most cases. All of these reasons combined mean that doctors can't really diagnose most cases of these problems without surgery. The tubular pouch is usually quite small, no bigger around than the small intestine and commonly no longer than two inches. Some pouches as long as 10 inches have been reported. Even if the pouch is fibrosed into a ligament, it is still possible for the area to cause an obstruction of the small intestine. The ligament-like bands behave a lot like adhesions and obstruct the small intestine at or near the point of attachment.

Just as in the case of your daughter, the diagnosis is usually first made by an exploratory operation. Once the problem is found, it can be corrected completely by the surgical procedure. The surgery literally corrects the birth defect.

All of this means that your daughter should not have any more problems from her Meckel's diverticulum, and she got the right treatment.

The search for mental health

Psychiatric answers to problems of industry?

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a full accredited 150-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

Business, industry and government agencies are looking these days to psychiatry for help with some of their management and employee problems. The result is a new area of psychiatric treatment called occupational mental health — the application of mental health principles to the world of work where most people spend a major part of their time.

Dr. David Bruce Robbins, clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College, has chosen to work in this area because he believes the working people of the world often need help on the job or because of the job.

In his work as psychiatric consultant for a large corporation, Robbins sees stresses of all sorts in every aspect of the working world. "For instance," he pointed out, "a blue collar or factory worker is under day-to-day pressures such as keeping up with the production schedule. The white collar worker has longer range pressures of planning and budgeting. All workers are subject to conflicts with co-workers and managers, and managers between each other."

"WE ALSO ARE available to help workers with personal emotional problems which effect their lives and their capacity to work. Mostly, we try to arrange for outside counseling for the individual with a problem, but we let them know our door is open and they can talk to us confidentially."

"This differs from, say, an initial interview with an applicant for a job where I tell the person straight off what the purpose of the interview is. I don't promise confidentiality that is impossible under the circumstances where I'm trying to determine if the person has emotional disorders that prevent him from effectively doing the job for which he is applying."

For the most part, Robbins believes that initial screening of an applicant should be done medically or psychiatrically — not by the personnel department at time of hire. He objects to application forms that ask "Have you ever been in treatment or in a psychiatric hospital?" "Once a person is considered eligible for the available position," Robbins said, "then it's fair to ask medical questions, if the information obtained is used constructively."

BUT FOR THE most part, there are two reasons Robbins objects to quizzing an applicant about his psychiatric history. First, there is a stigma attached to having had psychiatric treatment, and though the prejudice is fading, it still exists. This would incline a job applicant to not be completely candid about past or current treatment.

Second, Robbins believes there is no correlation between psychiatric diagnosis past or present and work effectiveness, "whether they're able to do the job that's open, which is the real question."

Also, Robbins favors psychiatric screening for particular issues, working out a format that makes sense. "For instance," he said, "I've done annual examinations of people in security positions who carry weapons. In that instance, we know clearly and plan what we're looking for."

"And we in the occupational mental health field try to steer clear of management that tries to use us to get information to use against an applicant or employee. The employer is entitled to information obtained with the full cooperation of the interviewee, but professional ethics do not allow the psychiatrist to 'pump' a person who believes his revelations are confidential, only to have a full report given to his present or potential boss without his consent."

ROBBINS' primary mission in the working world is the prevention of mental illness. He counsels management on the effects of their decisions upon their underlings, on their probably emotional acceptance and coping devices for various decisions, such as relocation or personnel changes.

Robbins said, "I would like to direct the use of psychiatry in business toward the relief of situations in the work place that we know definitely will produce mental illness and casualties."

Social security and you

Don't be misled by book ads

"Some misleading advertising on the Social Security program has appeared in the Chicago area recently," said Norman D. Jerome, manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security office.

"These ads, which promoted the sale of a book, have contained provocative statements about Social Security that are misleading and are obviously designed with one objective in mind — to promote the sale of the book!" added Jerome. The books generally sell for $3 to $4.99, according to Jerome, or can be obtained by subscribing to a consumer-type newsletter.

As an added inducement, some publishers agree to provide the subscriber with a confidential report of "your Social Security account" at no additional costs. "Actually, this report can be obtained by sending a postcard available in our office free of charge," Jerome said.

Samuel Katz

Funeral services for Samuel Katz, 70, of Des Plaines, were held yesterday in Weinstein Brothers Chapel, Chicago. Rabbi Joseph Strauss officiated. Burial was in Shalom Memorial Park Cemetery, Palatine.

Born in Russia, March 2, 1903, Mr. Katz was a retired plumber. He died Monday in Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. Since retiring as a plumber in 1968 he had been working as a salesman for Garden Specialties in Des Plaines.

Preceded in death by his wife, Anna, nee Greenberg, survivors include a son, Marvin and daughter-in-law, Marie Katz of Chicago; a daughter, Mrs. Sheila (Marshall) Gold of Des Plaines; five grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; two brothers, Ben and Joseph Katz, and a sister, Mrs. Minnie Cohen. He was preceded in death by a brother, Harry.

Family requests, contributions may be made to the Israel Emergency Fund.

Nuclear plant film available to groups

Community and school groups interested in the workings of a nuclear power station may now make appointments for a new 15-minute filmed tour of the granddaddy of them all, Dresden Station, near Morris, Ill.

Owned and operated by Commonwealth Edison Co., the station was the nation's first privately-financed nuclear power plant. It began producing electricity in 1960, when the first of its three generators was completed. By 1971 the station reached its present capacity of 1,800,000 kilowatts.

Bookings for the color film may be made through the Commonwealth Edison Public Affairs Department, P.O. Box 767, Chicago 60690. Information about other films and the power industry may be obtained from the same department.

New year's resolutions TV should make

HOLLYWOOD — New Year hopes of a television watcher:

• That more viewers get a chance to see Edwin Newman's conversation series "Speaking Freely," the best program on commercial video.

• That McLean Stevenson of "M*A*S*H" is accorded the full recognition he deserves. A gifted comedy artist, he is hilarious with both scripted material and as a talk show guest.

• That Sally Struthers of "All In The Family" and Ed Asner of the Mary Tyler Moore series get pay raises for their admirable skills. The same goes for Desmond Wilson of "Sanford And Son."

• That the milk industry realizes how absurd its television advertising campaign is. You know: those commercials saying that milk has something for everybody and offering embarrassing testimonials from celebrities. Who cares whether Karen Valentine, Diahann Carroll, Phyllis Diller, Vikki Carr and Michael Landon like milk?

• That Cable-TV makes a big breakthrough and gives the three commercial networks a run for their money. The networks almost never take steps for major improvement unless they are faced with competition.

• That pay TV finally blossoms on a national basis. And that the public ignores scare campaigns saying that such a development means a setback for viewers of so-called "free TV." What is so free about a system that springs commercials on you every few minutes? That's a price, and the public pays it — as a captive consumer audience, and in terms of mental distraction.

• That television stations automatically fine newscasters $10 every time they wink at viewers while telling about the day's developments. What makes newscasters think we want them to assume such intimacy? All we want from them is the news, not electronic pals.

• That performers demand and get 100 per cent of their original pay for the first few reruns of video programs in which they have appeared. That's one way to make the networks think twice about the increasing amount of repeat shows they are presenting.

• That the top executives of the commercial networks be forced by their intelligent spouses and children to watch an hour a day of the game shows and soap operas their organizations put on. That ought to shame any educated, self-respecting executive into making some changes.

• That someone close to Johnny Carson tactfully advises him that he needs a new wardrobe, more in keeping with the added dignity he has taken on in recent years.

• That a network comes up with a brilliant idea for a new comedy series to star Milton Berle.

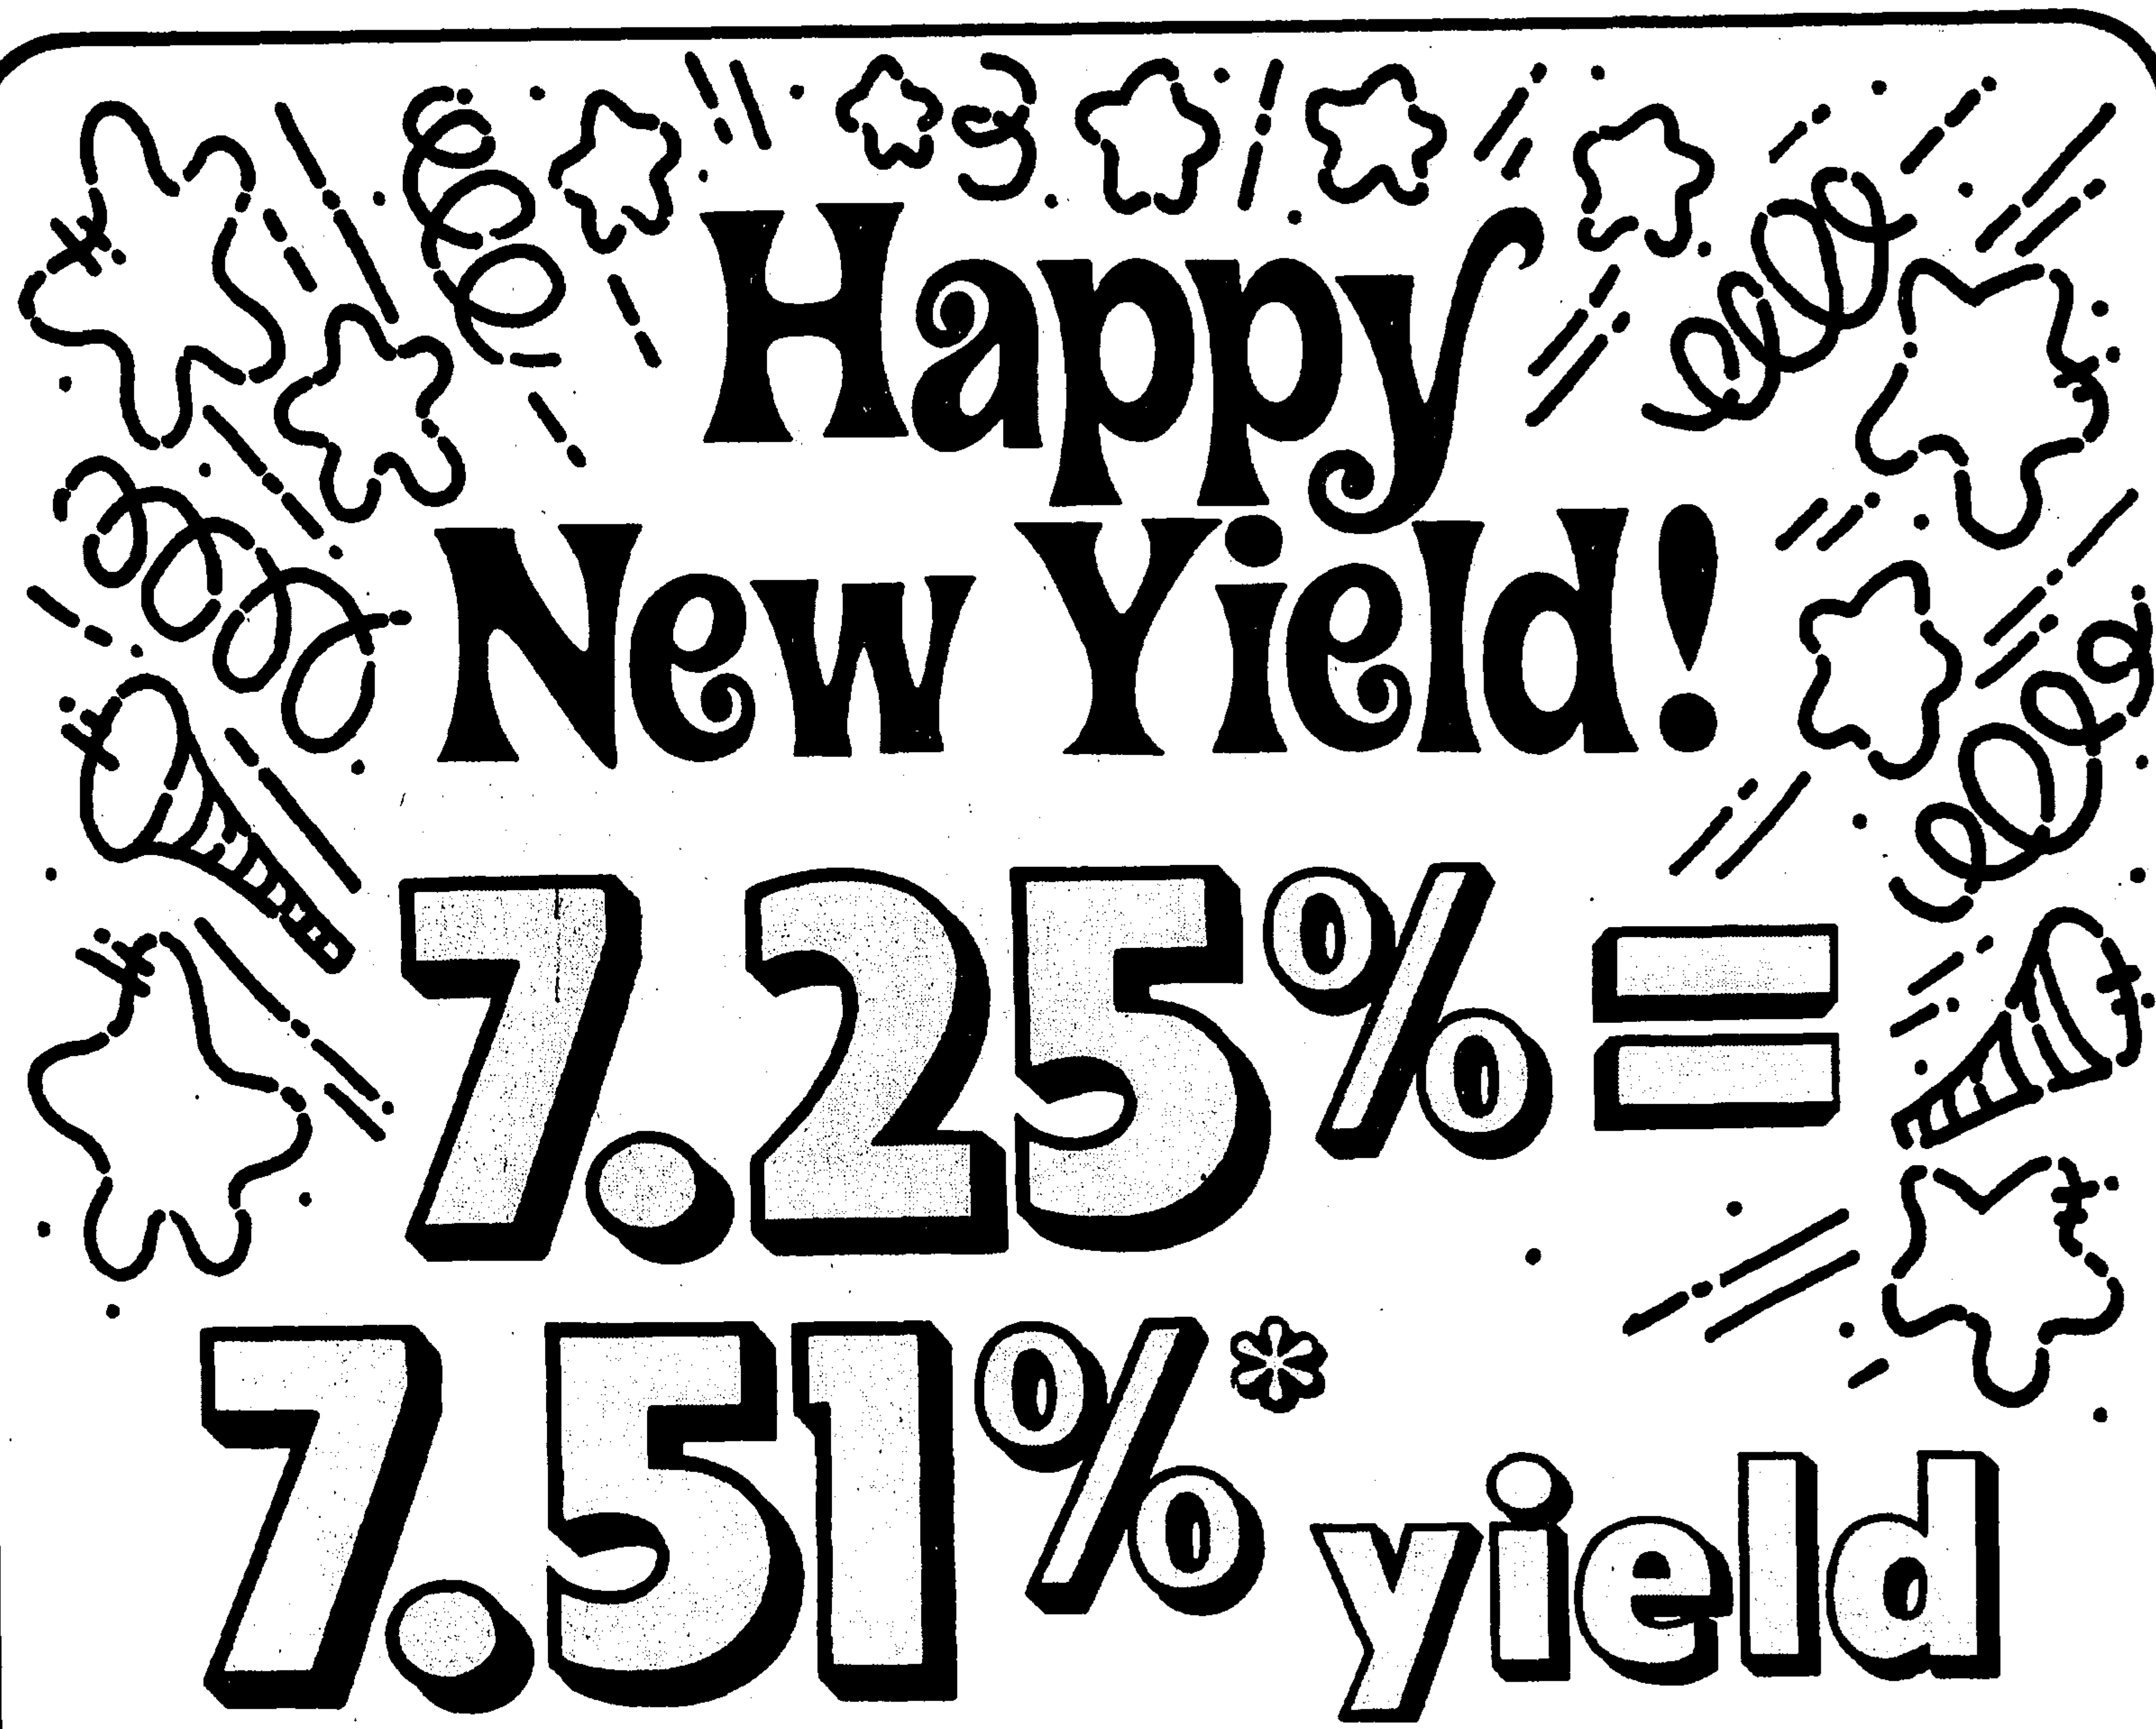

• That noncommercial television gets rid of many of the stuffed shirts involved with guiding the destinies of its stations, and aims for wider public appeal to go with its educational and cultural programming.

Something new in music awards

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new set of awards is coming up in 1974. These are the American Music Awards, honoring artists and music selected by public vote as the best in the fields of pop, soul and country music. ABC will telecast the results on Feb. 19 in a 90-minute program originating in Hollywood. Five awards in each division.

JAN. 31 IS the date for the telecast of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," sponsored by NBC by Xerox Corporation and starring Cicely Tyson in this two-hour fictional drama of a Negro whose 110 years span the period from slavery to the modern civil rights movement.

Actress hopes to break 'chauvinist barrier'

Dramatic series Joanna's goal in '74

by DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — Women's Lib has made giant strides in almost everything. About the only thing we don't have now is a woman heavyweight champ.

And, oh, yes, there's one thing more. We don't have a woman starring in a TV dramatic series. But that may come. In fact, if Joanna Pettet and the powers-that-are agree, she'll be the first.

You may have seen the pilot she did for ABC called Pioneer Woman. It was very good and could become a winner, if and when the network agrees to put it on regularly.

At the moment, women on regular TV series are confined, for some chauvinistic reason, to comedy shows. There isn't a drama that has a woman star. Joanna would like to be the first.

"I THINK MORE things are coming for women on TV," says the tall, beautiful blonde. "Kathleen Nolan of the Screen Actors Guild is starting a movement in that direction, too."

When you think about it she's right. Why shouldn't there be a series with a woman star? And why shouldn't there be more movies revolving around women, too? There are very few of those these days, either.

She'd like to have her own series, for reasons other than feminism. She likes to work hard.

"And I like being regimented," she says. "When I was a kid I liked going to school. I like having something I must do. That's why I'd like a series — I'd like to know that there is something I have to do every single day."

The last time I talked with Joanna Pettet it was in Paris when she was beginning her career in a film called "Night of the Generals." At that time she said she planned to make Europe her headquarters.

"I TRIED IT FOR a while," she says, "but I had to go where the work was and that brought me back to the U.S. for 'Blue,' which was a bomb. But I was here and I worked more and more here."

Then she met and married Alex Cord and they have settled here. At first, she says, she didn't like it. She had "that proud New York thing," and she looked down her proud nose at anyone who wasn't a stage actor. She says she's learned that that is nonsense, that there are some fine film actors, and now she's happy here.

She and Alex bought a 40-year-old house and she's still fixing it up. It was originally owned by Eugene O'Neill.

"Maybe his ghost has rubbed off on Alex," Joanna says, "because he's written a novel in the house, under his real name, Alex Viespi. It's in the hands of a literary agent now. I think it's a beautiful book but I'm prejudiced."

D'Antoni to produce three video specials

NEW YORK (UPI) — Phil D'Antoni, Academy Award-winning motion picture producer of such as "The French Connection" and "Bullitt," is to produce three 90-minute video properties for NBC. Two will be pilots for possible series during the 1974-75 and 1975-76 season; the third will be a made-for-television movie for 1974-75.

No bank can offer you more. So our bank won't offer you less than...

7 1/4%

Now that the Federal Government has set the highest legal bank interest at 7 1/4% on all four-year certificates of deposit for $1,000, that's exactly what we will pay you. Because that's exactly what your money deserves — the highest possible bank interest rate it can get. Anywhere. A rate that's guaranteed — not subject to any upward or downward fluctuations. And, if you prefer, we'll send you regular monthly interest checks.

Of course, 7 1/4% isn't quite as impressive as some of our previous offers on four-year certificates of deposit. But it is the most we can legally do for you at the moment. And all our other savings plans offer you the highest bank interest rates allowable. Because, basically, our bank figures the most is the very least we should ever offer.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Lead important in modern play

One of the many developments for the better in modern play is that defenders think more carefully about what card to lead during the play.

Twenty-five years ago South would have had no trouble making his four spade contract against almost any defending players. He would win the heart lead with dummy's ace; draw trumps and lose the diamond finesse.

Some East players would lead back partner's suit. After that friendly play South would be able to discard two of his clubs on dummy's good diamonds and score an overtrick.

A better East player would see the need for a club shift and would automatically lead back the three spot. Fourth best was standard then; it is still standard now, but with exceptions.

This hand represents one of the exceptions.

East can see that his side needs to get three fast tricks to beat the four spade contract. If his partner holds ace-queen-10 of clubs, the jack lead is essential so that East can hold the lead and continue the suit. It doesn't appear likely, but it is possible. East has nothing to lose by leading the jack and any modern expert will make that play.

Hospitals put patient first

by BILLIE BACHHUBER
(Second of two parts)

FREE TELEPHONE makes hospital stay happier for Michael Loperence, Hanover Park, a patient at Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

Basic philosophy practiced at northwest suburban hospitals (Northwest Community, Lutheran General, Alexian Brothers and Holy Family) puts the patient first.

Those training and working in health professions now are people-oriented, not task-oriented as in the past. Encouraged to be empathetic with — not detached from — their patients, health care professionals now are better able to help patients deal with fears and anxieties often brought on by accident and illness. Patients are recovering faster and better with this kind of "caring," report local hospitals.

Attitudes of those working in health care are vital in helping patients and their families to cope with stresses and problems of illness. But local hospitals also are reaching out in both practical and esthetically satisfying ways to serve their patients . . . and to keep them as contented and happy as possible during their hospital stays.

TAKE FOOD, for example. Stale jokes about bad hospital meals still are bandied about the airwaves and in nightclubs. The jokes may be stale but not the meals prepared for northwest suburban hospital patients.

Dietary staff members create multiple meal choices attractively decorated and garnished for those patients allowed a general diet. Wine is served at specified times, or in some cases, with each evening meal if the doctor permits.

New parents are treated to a real "send off" at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Before they take home that new baby, parents enjoy a steak and champagne dinner — a "night out" — courtesy of the hospital, reports George Schulte, public relations director.

Another example of imaginative meal planning are special holiday menus. On Christmas day, patients feasted on rock cornish hen at Lutheran General Hospital, according to Mrs. Jen Rosenbrook, assistant public relations director. And for a "very reasonable price," Northwest Community Hospital served patients and their visitors a seven-course holiday meal on Christmas Day, said Ann Finney, public and patient relations person. Dietitians attempt to make meals a pleasure for patients, not a chore, added Robin Leach, public relations director at Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

MAKING THE patient's whole stay as pleasant as possible is the goal at local hospitals. Hospital personnel recognize that a person's surroundings affect his or her feelings. The psychology of color and design now used in hospital lobbies, waiting rooms, hallways and patients' rooms is designed to please and to soothe the senses . . . in contrast to the stark and sterile white of yesteryear. Too, many medical people have discarded their white uniforms for those with more colorful eye appeal.

Also to please the visual senses, area hospitals are displaying art about their institutions, rotating it for variety. Some works are for sale, and visitors, patients and staff members often purchase "favorites" for gifts or to take home. Gift shops and gift carts also are operated by volunteers for the convenience of patients and visitors.

Volunteers play a very important role helping to keep patients comfortable during hospital confinement. Their selfless service is valued equally by hospital personnel and patients, report hospital spokesmen.

AMONG CONCERTED efforts to please patients, volunteers deliver mail, magazines, flowers and newspapers. They greet and direct visitors at reception desks, "wheel" patients from admitting and upon departure, and to diagnostic testing centers and other destinations within the hospital. For example, volunteers visit with patients scheduled for x-rays, take them to that department and offer support to those waiting in x-ray or in emergency rooms. One of the "happiest" jobs for both volunteers and new parents is when the volunteer carries a new baby to the hospital door at departure time, noted Northwest's Mrs. Finney.

Rigid hospital rules are being relaxed for the benefit of patients and their families . . . especially in obstetric and pediatric departments, according to hospital sources. Visiting hours vary from regularly scheduled — but flexible — to open hours and overnight stays. For example, Lutheran General provides chair-beds for parents wishing to spend the night with a sick child, said Jen Rosenbrook.

"Most hospital rules are flexible under certain conditions," advises Robin Leach. This is especially true at holiday times and in times of great stress for families, she added.

HOSPITALS recognize that the comfort of religion may help patients and their families during the strain imposed by illness. In accordance with their hospital philosophy of "Human Ecology for the Total Human Being," Lutheran General conducts an extensive pastoral care program. Pastoral Care provides a "ministry" for people of all religious faiths and conducts a multi-faceted program of education and counseling that reaches into the community.

Alexian Brothers leads interfaith worship programs over closed TV, and both Alexian and Holy Family hospitals provide all services, comforts and rites of the Catholic church. The religious-based hospitals maintain chapels for their staff, patients and families.

At Northwest Community Hospital, a Catholic priest is available daily, patients may request comfort from the Ministerial Association, and patients' personal ministers are welcome at hospitals.

OTHER EFFORTS hospitals are making to keep patients happy and to help speed their recovery include such niceties as free TV and telephones. Hospitals permit patients to call with no extra charge within specified areas.

Some hospitals maintain barber and beautician services, or have them on call for patient requests.

Ways to save patients time and money also are a consideration at local hospitals. Making arrangements for professional home care, outpatient surgery and pre-surgery testing are examples. Testing can be scheduled at slack times to prevent waiting and to avoid hospitalization for the service. All four hospitals cite their social services departments for their "beyond the call of duty" aid to patients, and all encourage their entire staffs to dispense TLC (tender loving care) to that No. 1 person in the hospital, the patient.

TIME AND MONEY are saved hospital patients through the pre-surgical testing offered before they actually enter the hospital. It's another way area hospitals try to keep their patients happy.

Women considering college invited to session at Harper

More and more women are returning to college after marriage and child raising. For those considering this direction a women's program called "Back to School" is being held at Harper College from 1-3:30 p.m., Friday, Jan. 11, in room A242.

The session is designed to provide a setting in which women considering college can share common concerns about their competence, their acceptance by faculty and other students and obstacles revolving around family responsibilities.

"More and more women are returning to the college campus today to complete work toward a degree, to prepare for a career, or even to learn a new career," commented Doe Heintschel, coordinator of women's programs.

"MANY OF THESE women have real hesitations about how they will be able to compete after several years' absence from an academic environment. Others worry about how they will be able to keep up with their normal family responsibilities and do well in school. Others just don't know where to begin — whom to call to find out needed information."

The afternoon will also provide opportunity to gather information about registration and admission procedures, testing and counseling services.

Registrations for the workshop, part of the "Expanding Horizons" series for women, are being accepted at 397-3000, Ext. 301, before 2 p.m. Child care is available at $2 per mother if prior arrangements are made.

The outlook for 1974

American family in trouble

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

Item: Father of five skips and starts a new nest with his mistress and their child 3,000 miles away. Without benefit of divorce, without any new marriage license.

Item: Mother of nine leave home, taking two young children under five. To bill and coo in a new nest with her lover. No divorce, no new marriage.

Add to these items: People breaking up marriages and families legally, through divorce. Approximately four of every 10 couples married in 1973 will not live happily ever after. They will divorce after, on the average, seven years of conjugal bliss and bitterness.

Marriage dissolution could be the No. 1 subject on the family front in 1974 and perhaps the No. 1 subject of the decade.

That point was made by numerous authorities launching new U.S. Senate subcommittee hearings on "American Families: Trends and Pressures." The hearings, under the chairmanship of Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., will move to the front burner in 1974.

THE INSTITUTION of legalized marriage, what's more, is being questioned by young persons. Cohabiting without a marriage license is a growing trend on college campuses — so much so that social scientists at Cornell University's College of Human Ecology now put out a Cohabitation Research Newsletter, reporting on studies on that subject at colleges nationwide.

Research in this area cannot be as exacting as research in physics. But it is evident that many students on the trial marriage trail are themselves progeny of the soured marriages of their parents. They have seen the toll of marriage on the rocks, they have tasted its bitter harvest — bickering, hurt and hate. They are not going to seal a conjugal deal themselves unless they can be reasonably sure it will work out. In the interim, cohabitation on campus or off. It stems from a search for an emotional mooring — a distrust of marriage.

IN THE YEAR ahead, inflation and the energy crisis will affect families that don't break up. The Census Bureau estimates there are 46.3 million husband-wife families and 8.1 million of some other type. The latter category includes 6.6 million families headed by a female.

The Census Bureau defines a family as a group of two or more related persons who live together in a house or apartment. Two out of every three of the husband-wife families have children or a relative living with them.

Inflation continuing will mean families having increasing difficulty even robbing Peter to pay Paul. It will mean further taking in of the belt and it will mean more and more mothers out of the home working to help pay the bills. Most mothers who work are helping pay bills and otherwise provide for their families, including in some cases, dependent parents.

Federal agencies estimate over 40 per cent of all wives are in the labor force. Among those with children under six years of age, 30 per cent are working outside the home — making adequate daycare facilities a No. 1 priority on the family front again in the year 1974 and every year thereafter until enough are established.

THE ENERGY CRISIS, cramping vacation and other pleasure driving, may inject more togetherness on homefronts everywhere — especially on weekends. For families accustomed to being on wheels much of the time, for family members used to going separate and distant ways, the new togetherness may be a plus or a minus. Either it will make the family stronger-discovering one another's company as something pleasant. Or — it will make the family weaker, exposing sources of friction and leading to arguments and, perhaps, eventual breakdown of communication.

The energy crisis carries the seeds of financial disaster for some families. If a fuel-dependent industry must shut down, paychecks stop. In an energy-dependent society such as America has become, there are solid signs many paychecks will be disrupted in the new year.

Dr. Urie Bronfenbrenner, a professor of human development and family studies, College of Human Ecology, Cornell University, doesn't see much to cheer about on the family front. He told the subcommittee on children and youth:

"THE SITUATION is especially critical for the families of black Americans. Of all black children, over half (53 per cent) live in families below the poverty line; the corresponding figure for whites is 11 per cent.

"Of all black children, almost half (44 per cent) have mothers who are in the labor force. The corresponding figure for whites is about a quarter — 26 per cent.

"Of all black children, over 30 per cent live in single parent families; the corresponding figure for whites is seven per cent.

"The census does not provide comparable information for other groups living under duress, such as American Indians, Mexican Americans, whites living in Appalachia and so on. If and when such data becomes available, they are likely to show similar trends."

All isn't rosy with intact families, the well-off economically ones — black or white. Dr. Bronfenbrenner, considered by his peers the nation's No. 1 authority on the family, said:

"AMONG THESE FAMILIES, research shows parents are spending less time in activity with their children." A trend is to children's hotels, places where well-off parents may park their children when they want a week in the sun or a month at sea.

The authority sees the family needing all kinds of help — from the neighborhood, from the world of work, and from social and political institutions at the local, state and national level.

"The family," he said, "is the most humane, efficient and economical system for 'making human beings' known to man."

(United Press International)

AT A TRADITIONAL Christmas coffee, which included punch and cookies, Northwest Suburban AOPi alumnae entertained college-age sisters and their mothers last week. Lisa Scarlata, a student at Northern Illinois, and her mother, Miriam Scarlata, Hoffman Estates, were among the guests. Diane Pelletiere, alum president, Palatine, and Alice Sesterhenn, member from Schaumburg, right, greeted the guests.

First WAC joins area OES chapter

Bonnie DeSot of Palatine, a WAC stationed at Fort Huachuca in Arizona, is the first member of the Armed Forces to be initiated into the Palatine Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. She was initiated in services Friday evening.

Daughter of Azelle DeSot, past matron of Palatine Chapter 585, Bonnie is a graduate of Fremd High School. She enlisted in the service in Elgin, received her basic training at Ft. McClellan, Ala., and her training as a dental hygienist at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex.

Kerosene or mineral spirits should loosen tub flowers

Dear Dorothy: The rubber nonslip flowers I stuck in the bottom of my bathtub a few years ago are slowly coming unstuck and disintegrating. Can you suggest what I might use to remove those still affixed to the tub, and to leave the tub clean and receptive to a new crop of nonslip flowers? — Helen Benson.

The Porcelain Enamel Institute recommends that a cloth be saturated with kerosene or mineral spirits paint thinner and laid over the flower area for about 25 minutes to loosen the adhesive backing. Then one should use a single-edge razor blade (in one of the holders sold in hardware stores) and scrape up the softened adhesive. Done carefully, with a slanting motion, it should come off and any metal marks can be removed with the gentle cleaners recommended for porcelain bathtubs. Should yours be one of the old porcelain-on-cast-iron tubs made before '64, there could be a bit of stain — but the tub at least would be clean and ready for a new crop of flowers.

Dear Dorothy: I'm curious about how jellied cranberry sauce is made. Do you know? — Susan Tuthill

For whole sauce, the berries are cooked with sugar and water until the skins

More help offered consumer

A consumer Complaint and Counseling Service — the first of its kind in Illinois — is being introduced by the Consumer Federation of Illinois (CFI).

According to attorney Gilbert Cornfield, CFI president, the service will be staffed by volunteer attorneys and senior law students who will investigate complaints and attempt to mediate disputes. If necessary, the attorneys would take legal action to obtain redress for consumers.

The service, Kramer hopes, will fill in where understaffed government agencies leave off and where stakes are too low for a private attorney to be hired. The attorneys will be looking for patterns of consumer abuse which they hope to reform through systematic litigation.

The service is scheduled to begin limited operation March 1, reaching its full capacity by April 1. Further information may be obtained from CFI's executive director, Woody Holm, at 427-6828.

BANKAMERICARD HAS taken the initiative in trying to solve the consumer problem of dissatisfaction with merchandise or services purchased with a credit card.

The problem is that the consumer has no lever on the merchant to gain redress; if he withholds payment for the item, it is the credit card company he is not paying, and they traditionally have taken a position of non-responsibility in consumer disputes.

The Federal Trade Commission has been studying this situation and has proposed a new rule that would forbid credit card issuers from disclaiming responsibility for their client merchants.

In the meantime, however, BankAmericard is offering to mediate disputes between consumers and merchants over credit card purchases.

Consumers who have not been able to settle a credit card purchase dispute with a merchant may call BankAmericard at 732-8000.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1974, creditors will be required to disclose whether finance charge refunds will be given if a consumer pays off a debt before the contract deadline.

The consumer

by Monica Wilch

Creditors will have to provide this information before a contract is signed, according to requirements of the Federal Reserve System (FRS). For example: If the cash price of an item is $100 and the finance charge for a year is $20, the consumer normally signs an obligation to pay $120 in 12 monthly installments of $10 each.

If the consumer repays the obligation in full before the maturity deadline, he may or may not receive a refund on a portion of the $20 finance charge. That decision is made by the creditor. If the creditor will not make a refund, he must tell the consumer before the obligation is signed.

The FRS already requires creditors who do make refunds to explain to consumers the method of the refund.

pop. For jellied sauce, the berries are cooked twice, once with water, then the strained puree is cooked again with hot liquid sugar and water.

Dear Dorothy: I have a simple problem but can't solve it. These always seem to be milk stains on the furniture. I think I've washed them off but, no, they appear again when dry. — Pat Simons.

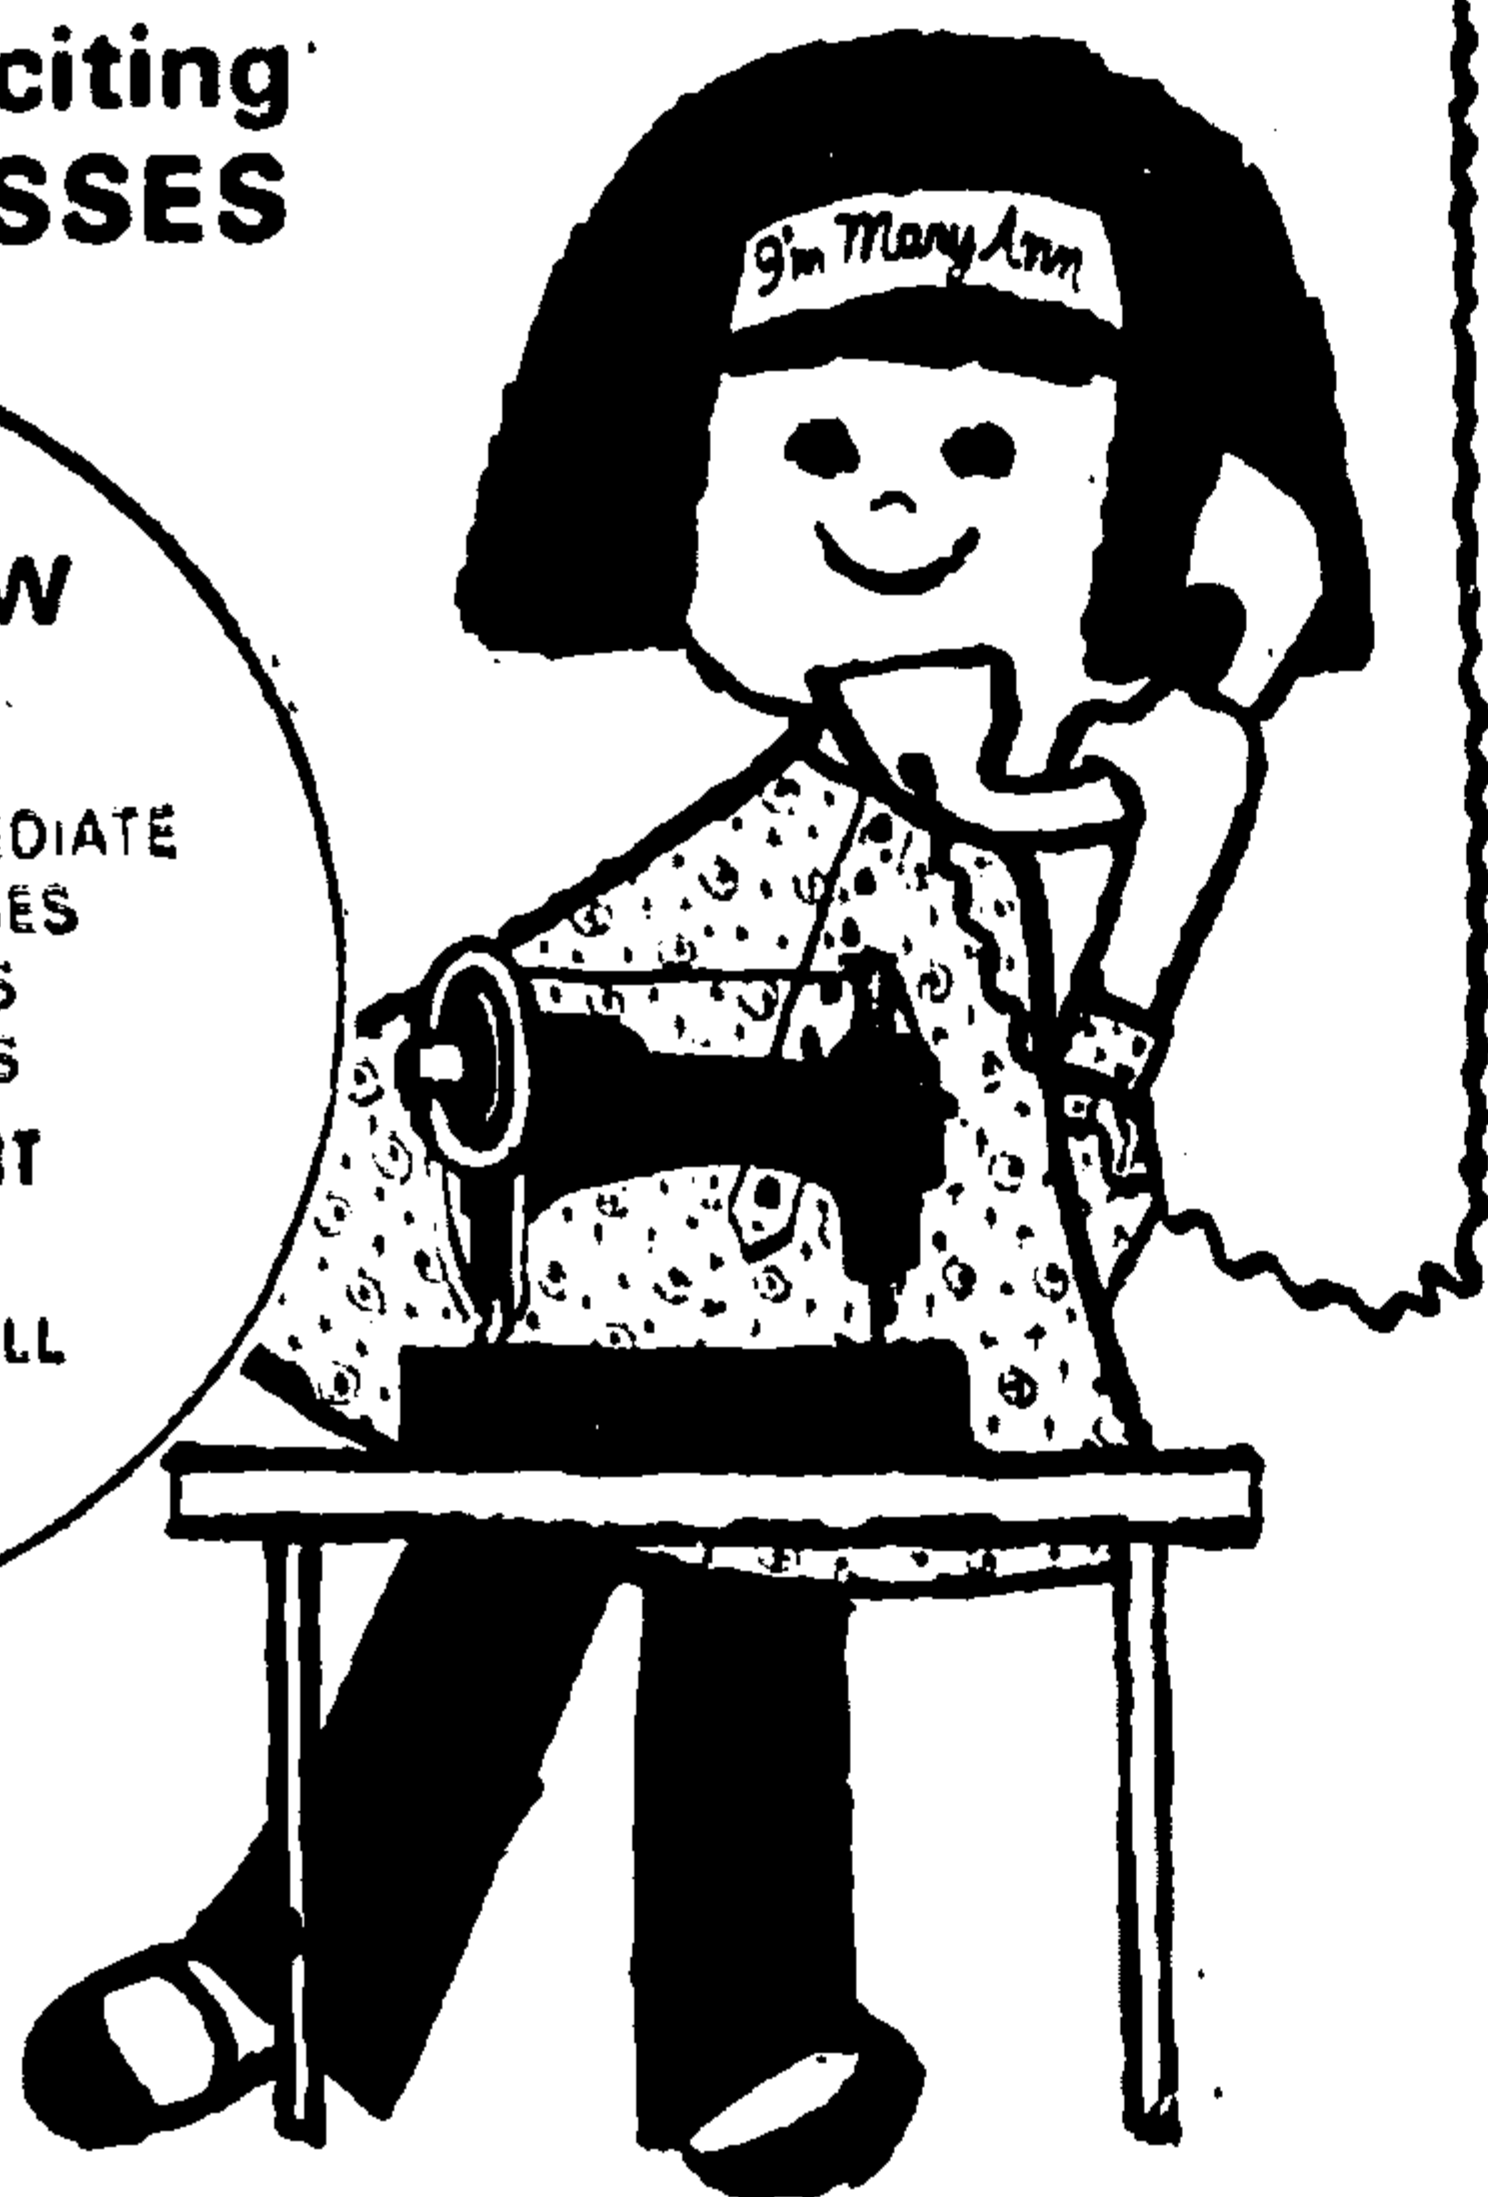

Try wiping the stains gently with 0000 steel wool, then polishing with a waxy rag.

Jerry Baker's 'Houseplants' appeals mainly to his fans

"Make Friends with Your Houseplants," 93 pages, $1.95, Simon and Schuster softcover, is one in the series of 12 "Make Friends" handbooks of Jerry Baker, the TV gardener.

Designed to appeal to his fans, Jerry's houseplant book is a basic primer for beginners. The ground rules for planting — how to pot and report, how to water, how to slip, how much light and heat to provide — are covered in this frothy little guide.

"Mr. Grow-it-All" gives tips on caring for the familiar favorites like poinsettia, azalea, begonia, geranium, cyclamen, African violet. Lots of whimsical cartoons seek to put Jerry's message across that gardening is fun.

The Jerry Baker phenomenon was spawned by a need for a TV personality aligned with the gardening industry. He first appeared on local television in Detroit, nicknamed himself "Mr. Grow-it-All" and dressed up in a kelly green suit and derby.

WHILE TV VIEWERS debated whether to take him seriously, many at the same time found him offbeat, humorous and entertaining. He is seen in Chicago on "Kennedy and Company" and the "Dinah Shore Show." Off-camera, Baker is a marketing and promotion consultant. His first full-time job after high school

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good graduation was on the vice and crime squad of the city of Detroit police force. Baker was put in charge of precinct gardens, of all things. He moonlighted for a seed company, calling on farmers. Later he worked as a marketing and promotion man for Kresge's garden centers. His bestseller, "Plants Are Like People," brought him to national attention. It was a chemical company that dubbed him "Master Gardener."

If you'd enjoy reading about Grandma Putt and all of Jerry's cutesy friends — like Phyllis Philodendron — and if it is a revelation to read that cactus is a plant of the desert, this may well be YOUR book.

I'M BEING charitable by simply saying that this book has basic information: "Check your plants every day. Never allow them to wilt." And "Don't let any of your plants get frostbitten from pressing their noses against a windowpane." Or "Don't ever use any leaf polish. Plants breathe through their leaves, so don't plug up their little noses."

If you like Jerry Baker, you'll like his book. Enough said.

It's quiet again.

The holiday guests have gone, the last of the turkey has been eaten, the presents are put away, the toys are broken in — or broken, the tree is back in boxes for another year and the cookies have all disappeared. Life around the house has settled into a customary routine of school, work, meetings, housework.

Now there is time to reflect and plan for 1974.

It's easy to check humidity level

If the air in your home does not contain enough moisture during the heating season you may feel cold and uncomfortable — even at 75 degrees. Installation of a power humidifier can solve the problem.

Use this convenient chart to find the indoor relative humidity when you know the outdoor relative humidity and the outdoor temperature. Radio and TV stations report the outdoor readings you need. Locate outdoor relative humidity at left of chart and outdoor temperature at bottom. Indoor relative humidity is where the vertical and horizontal columns meet. The chart is based on outdoor air being brought into the home and heated to 72 degrees.

What should the indoor relative humidity be, then? That depends on outside temperatures, as indicated in the table.

Good lighting eases study

The hours of study required to negotiate pitfalls on the road to graduation are the bane of every student's existence. One way to relieve the burden is to make sure the study area is properly illuminated, providing a comfortable atmosphere conducive to effective scholarship.

The eyes, the task and the light contribute to the overall concept of sight. Of these, light is easiest to control. Good lighting will always make seeing easier, even when the other factors are inadequate.

High quality light does not mean expensive lighting fixtures. It is light which is free from glare, annoying contrasts and disturbing shadows. Study lamps should provide a wide light distribution without direct or reflected glare over the entire working area, upward and outward illumination and the recommended level of light.

The Better Light Better Sight Bureau suggests using a 200-watt bulb with a lumen rating of 3,710 for all study lamps to provide the proper amount of light.

For ideal placement, the study lamp should be about 12 inches from the front of the desk and 18 inches to the side opposite your working hand so that it doesn't cast a shadow on your work.

Shades for study lamps should have white or near white lining and should be fairly dense, although not opaque. The bottom edge should be at eye level, about 15 inches above the desk top.

General room lighting helps avoid lighting differences and make the task lighting more comfortable for the student. Lamps providing poor diffusion and no upward light, such as high intensity, gooseneck and bullet lamps, should be avoided in the study area.

You can rate your study area to see if it is properly arranged to make homework lighter. Once you can answer yes to all these questions, the rest is up to you.

1. Is light spread over the entire working surface?

2. Is the work area free of shadows from your hands and body?
3. Is the bulb and under shade brightness blocked from direct vision?
4. Do you have a light-colored, non-glossy desk surface?
5. Is there a light colored back wall in front of you?
6. Is some light thrown up on the walls and ceiling?
7. Is there general lighting somewhere else in the room?

V.I.P.'s for a weekend? It's great, couple says

Nearly everyone wonders at one time or another what it would be like to be V.I.P.s — Very Important People — for a while.

Mildred and Bob Gormley of Arlington Heights just found out — and they can tell you, they like it!

The Gormleys were the first residents of Greenbrier Apartments in Arlington Heights to receive a free V.I.P. Weekend at the newly opened North Shore Hilton hotel in Skokie.

Ismil Management Company of Skokie has started a new policy of expressing its thanks to five-year residents of the suburban apartment colonies it manages with free weekend gift packages at the North Shore Hilton.

The Gormleys were picked up by the hotel's limousine early on a Saturday afternoon and whisked off to the spanking new North Shore Hilton in Skokie, part of the 18-acre Concourse commercial complex.

They were welcomed at the door by hotel manager Ralph Nogal who handed them free tickets for the evening's performance at the Mill Run Theatre, featuring entertainer Paul Anka.

In their room, they found complimentary champagne and promptly enjoyed a toast to start their stay at the hotel.

Gormley is manager of reservation planning for United Air Lines in the airline's Elk Grove Village headquarters. He transferred here 17 years ago. The couple recently signed another two-year lease at Greenbrier, and have plans to retire to California in about nine years.

Being in the airline business comes naturally to Gormley, who was an aircraft radio operator in the U.S. Navy during his three and one-half years of service during World War II.

The Gormleys were served lunch in the hotel's rustic Waterfront Pub. The beamed poles, rough sawn paneling, and exotic decor reminded Mildred a little of Hawaii, her favorite vacation spot.

The hotel staff took them for a grand tour which included a ride on the glass-windowed outdoor elevator with its panoramic view of Old Orchard Shopping Center and Westmoreland Country Club.

Early in the evening, their chauffeur-driven limousine took them to the Mill Run Theatre in Niles for the concert program by Paul Anka.

Back at the hotel, they enjoyed a huge after-theatre dinner in the Hilton's rooftop Beef Barron restaurant with its night-time view of the lights of the suburbs. Soft dinner music by a guitar group, and dancing, added to the evening's enjoyment.

A final nightcap on the revolving carousel topped off the evening, which for Mildred and Bob Gormley was a delightful and memorable time.

MILDRED AND BOB Gormley are welcomed to the North Shore Hilton by hotel manager Ralph Nogal, who presents tickets for the evening's entertainment.

Firms break ground for inventory building

Harrington, Tideman, O'Leary & Company (real estate agents), in joint venture with J. L. Williams & Co. (builders), recently broke ground for the largest inventory building in an industrial park in Itasca, according to Daniel J. O'Leary, president of Harrington, Tideman, O'Leary & Company.

Measuring nearly 135,000 square feet, the inventory building is situated on more than 217,000 square feet of land with additional space available in the new 85-acre Itasca I-90 Center For Industry industrial park.

The one-story steel frame structure itself can be divided into two separate units measuring nearly 71,000 square feet and 64,000 square feet.

Offered for lease, the plant has eight recessed truck docks with levelers. Bays measure 25 by 40 feet with a 21½-foot clear stacking height throughout the entire plant. Floors are six-inch reinforced concrete and there is fluorescent lighting.

Other plant features include a concrete foundation with decorative concrete walls, metal deck, built up asphalt and gravel roof over one-inch rigid insulation and sprinklered.

All office space will be finished to tenant requirements, and will be furnished with weather air conditioning, fluorescent lighting and asbestos floor covering, as well as private toilet facilities built to specifications.

Land around the building provides for 93 parking spaces for cars, with future expansion of 61 parking spaces. Parking areas are asphalt on a stone base, with concrete walks, aprons and approaches. A landscaping allowance is included. Rail also is available.

The site is located on Ardmore Avenue in the Itasca I-90 Center For Industry, which is adjacent to the intersection of I-90 and New Thorndale Avenue, a four-way cloverleaf. New Thorndale and this cloverleaf will be the future Elgin-O'Hare Expressway.

Rail service is provided by the Milwaukee Road (Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company).

The first tenant to break ground recently was the Michelin Corporation, international manufacturer of Michelin tire products.

"When completed, Itasca I-90 Center For Industry will represent a total investment of $20 million. It is the only industrial park with frontage on I-90 and railroad service within more than a five-mile radius," O'Leary explained.

Itasca I-90 Center For Industry is just 15 minutes from O'Hare International Airport, 29 minutes from Chicago's Loop and just south of Woodfield Mall.

End hot water rationing

When you turn on a faucet, 80 per cent of the time it's hot water you want.

Does your family always have enough when it's needed — or do you have to ration it among bathers, dishwashing, laundering or housecleaning at certain times of the day or on certain days of the week?

Many families put up with the inconvenience of hot water rationing for years mainly because it doesn't occur to them to replace the heater. It's still working perfectly well, isn't it? The fact is, however, that even a well-functioning heater is "obsolete" if the family's water needs have outgrown its capacity.

Just a few years ago, the average water heater being installed was 20 or 30-gallon. Today it's at least 40, to keep pace with the family's increased water usage. Americans are using about 60 per cent more water today than they did 10 years ago. It's predicted the present use will double in the next five years, so a family buying a heater today would be wise to get one big enough to handle the anticipated increase as well as its present needs.

Tank capacity isn't the only factor in the heater's output. The best quality is the fast recovery type, which refers to the rate at which hot water is replenished as it's being used. Since your water heater is just about your hardest working appliance, it's wise to buy a top-quality product.

Zuan attends ERA conference

Robert L. Zuan, president of Homefinders Realtors, has just returned to the home office in Palatine from a two-day meeting with fellow ERA brokers in Kansas City.

ERA — or Electronic Realty Associates — is a nationwide network of real estate brokers which facilitates the movement of persons from one section of the country to another with a minimum of time lost in house hunting and home shopping.

Through the use of electronic transmitting and receiving equipment, ERA provides "living room" shopping for those seeking residences elsewhere. The moves are normally caused by company transfers.

Zuan and his fellow realtors from the Midwest met Dec. 13-14 to share ideas on the hiring and training of personnel, multi-office problems, project management, employee relocation, and coordinating the ERA operation in general. They also exchanged policy manuals and promotional material.

Homefinders maintains offices in Palatine, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Schaumburg, Streamwood, Buffalo Grove and Antioch.

Le ronde building features 60-foot circular courtyard

Imagine the snow flurries whipping through the air as you drive your car into the 80-car ground level parking lot under the new Le ronde office building at 950 Lee St. in Des Plaines. Now, you walk quickly into the lobby area and up to a warm, green oasis.

You're in the central garden-like circular courtyard of the three-story Le ronde building. Surrounding you are beautiful flowers, hanging live plants as well as hanging seats suspended by chains. This is the setting to look forward to when the Le ronde office building opens for occupancy in the spring.

Designed by architects Erickson & Stevens, this unique steel, wood and concrete building features a free-standing glass elevator surrounded by the 60-foot circular courtyard. Offices on the upper floor of Le ronde overlook this garden setting from a circular balcony. Interior windows of these offices and those on the courtyard level have vertical louvered drapes providing a uniform appearance.

Four plexiglass skylights form the central core of the dome, 45-feet up adding daylight to the courtyard setting below. These skylights are surrounded by unusual rough sawed beams and decking.

Built on concrete columns, the approximately 30,000 sq. ft. office building includes open-ground floor parking for 80 cars. The exterior of the building is finished in buff fluted blocks, creating a horizontal shadowing effect on the structure.

All offices in the building will be reached by elevator or a monumental staircase. These offices will be finished to fit the needs of each tenant. Among the features of the Le ronde are wall-to-wall carpeting, accoustical drop ceilings, air conditioning and daily maintenance services. The all-electric building will feature the latest in temperature and humidity control.

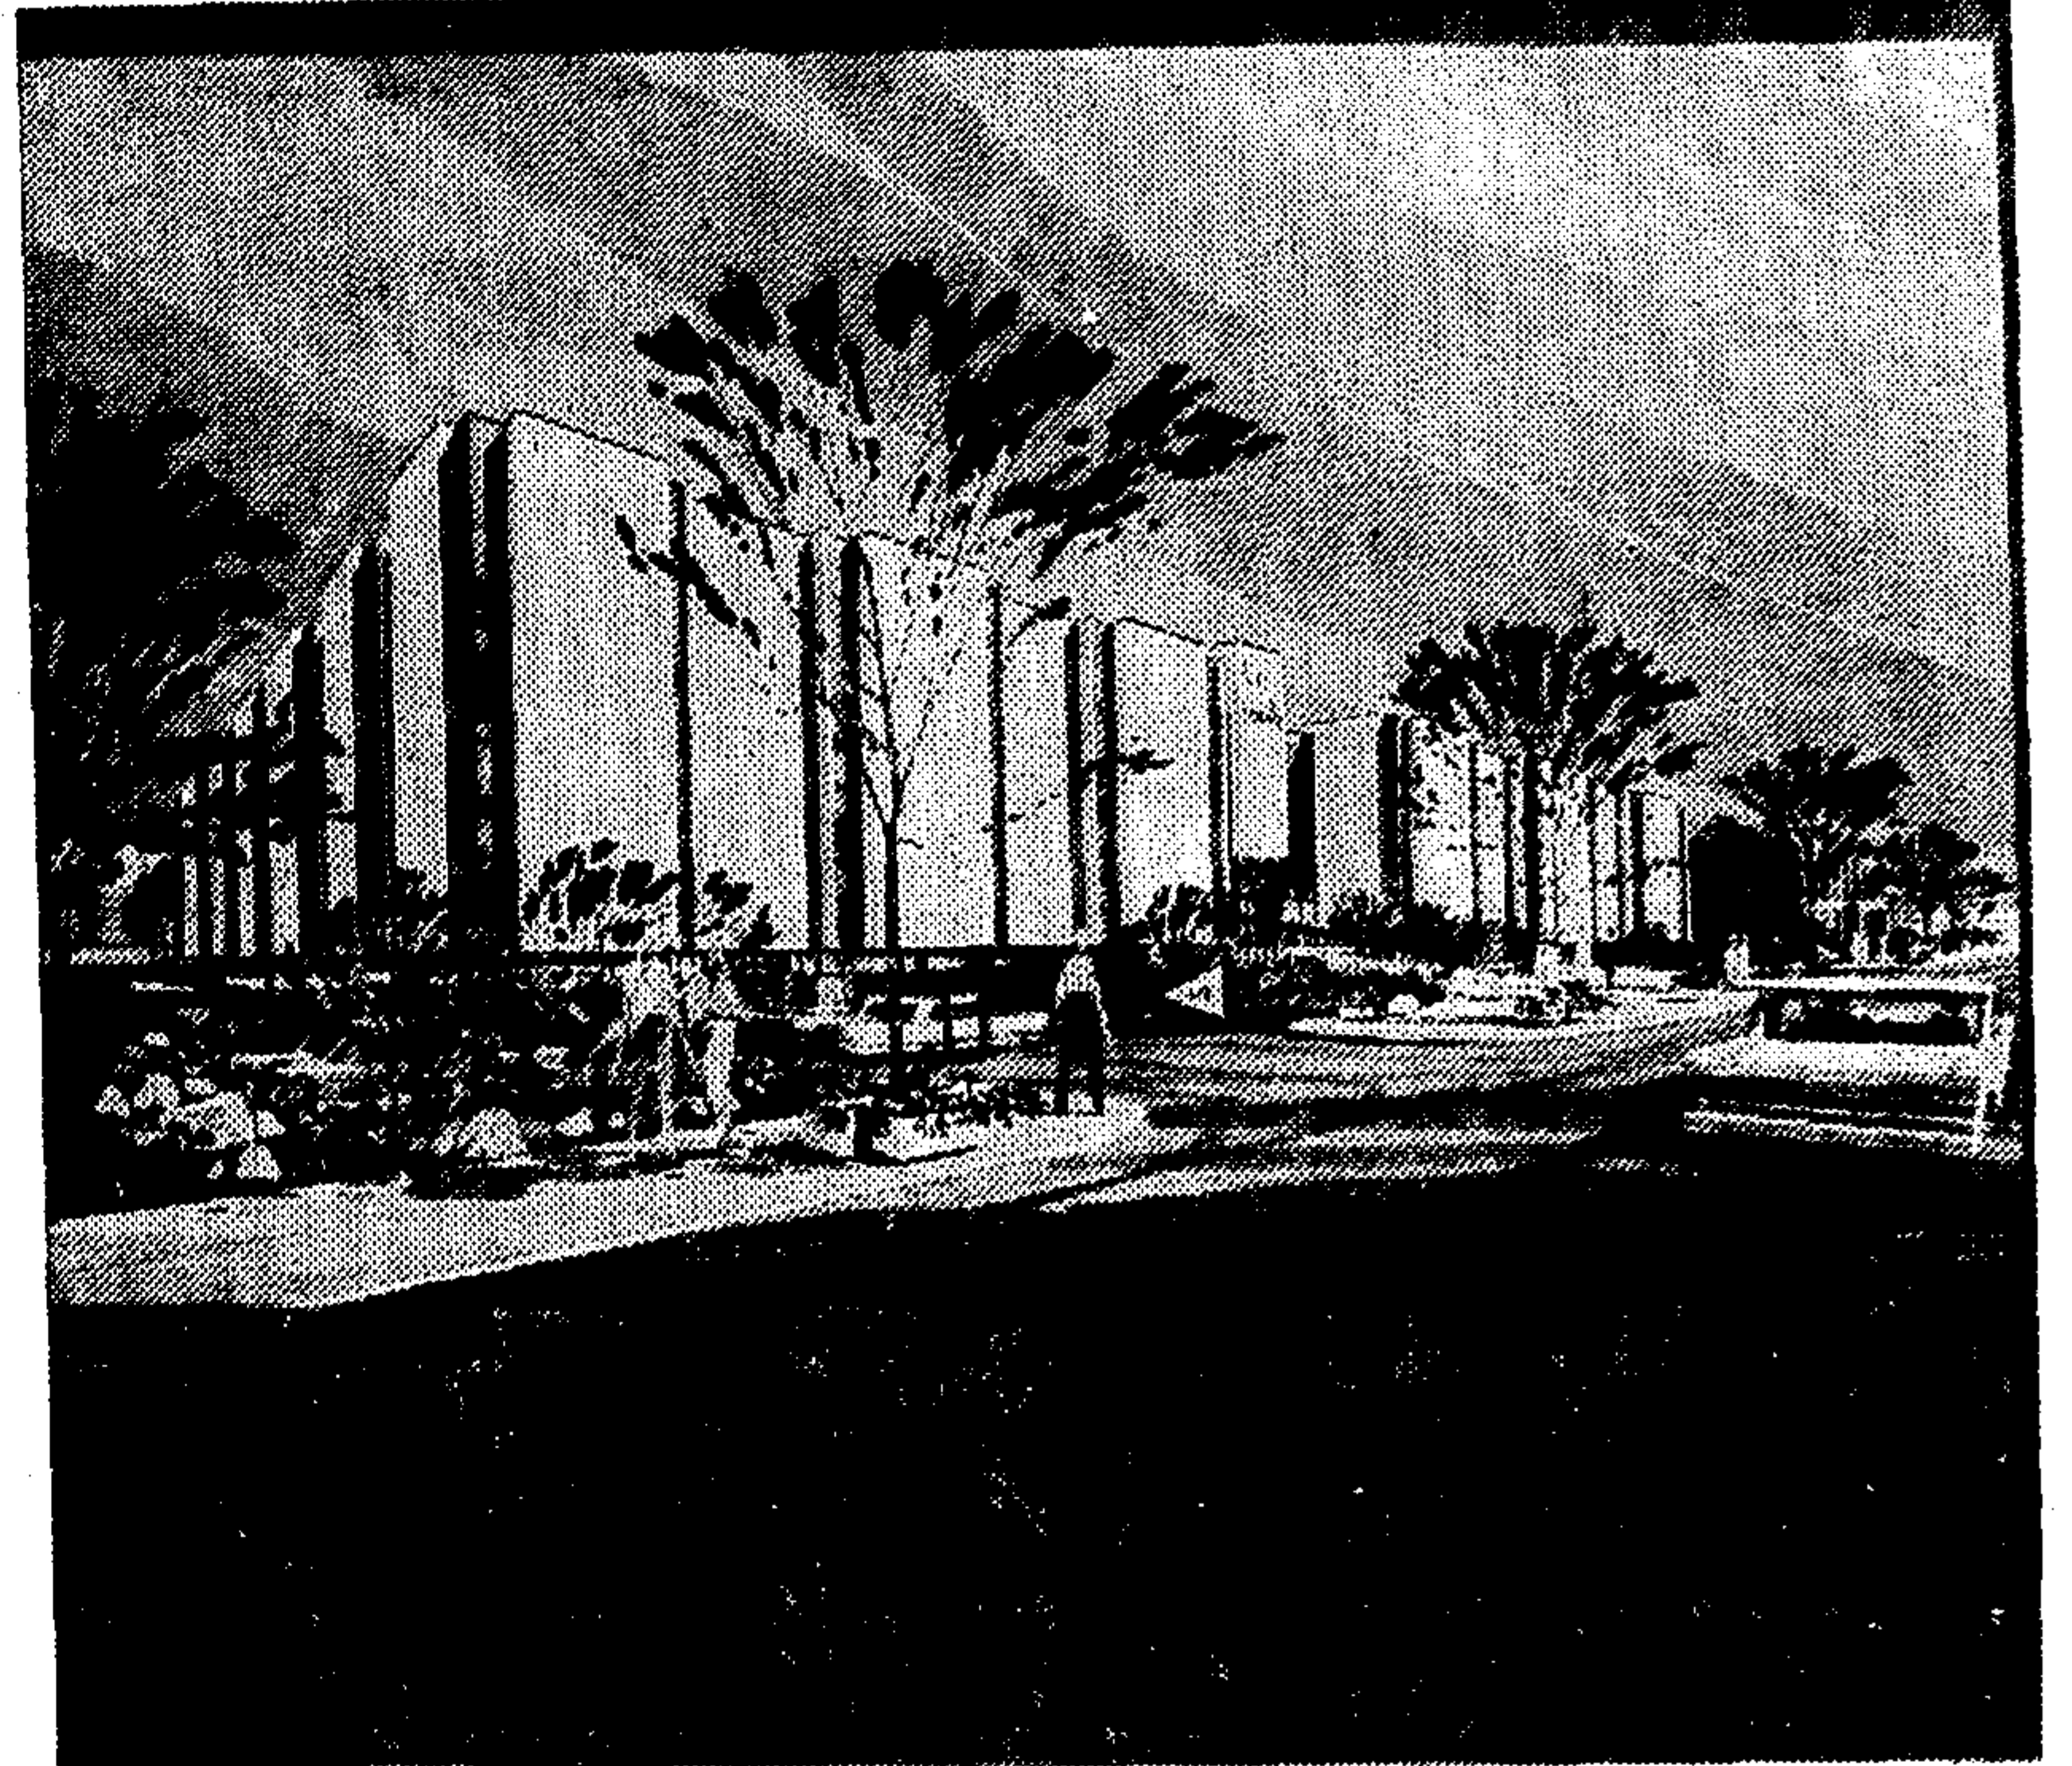

Le ronde is located a few blocks from the business center of Des Plaines as well as the Chicago and North Western commuter station. It is just minutes from O'Hare International Airport, many restaurants and hotels as well as industrial parks. It offers quick access to major highways including the Northwest and Tri-State Tollways.

Acting as leasing and management agents for Le ronde is the Commercial-Investment Division of Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors in Des Plaines.

Purchases lot

Hewlett-Packard Co. of Palo Alto, Calif. has purchased from Kapitol Magnetic Corp. of Chicago a lot in Rolling Meadows Industrial Center, Unit 1, consisting of 8.8497 acres for approximately $1 million.

It is understood that Hewlett-Packard plans to construct an office building on the site that is at the cloverleaf of Route 53 and the I-90 (Rockford) Tollway. It has approximately 580 feet of frontage on the tollway.

LE RONDE OFFICE building under construction in Des Plaines features a central garden-like circular courtyard.

Builder cites opportunities in '74 housing industry

Problems faced by the housing industry in 1974 will result in opportunities for the well-established and well-financed builder, who offers well-conceived developments.

Ned Simon, president of The Simon/R-G Group, Inc., reported this optimistic outlook in looking ahead to the coming year — a year he concedes is loaded with "ifs." His firm presently is developing Atrium, $25 million planned community of townhomes and condominium apartments in Elmhurst, and Spring Mill, contemporary townhomes in Hoffman Estates.

The tight mortgage market, high interest rates, increasing costs and shortages of some materials will continue to be factors in the housing market, Simon acknowledged.

"Some builders are holding off project starts, reducing sales staffs and curtailing some marketing efforts," Simon said. "But we are moving ahead as fast as possible on planned communities in Arlington Heights and Northbrook, and actively are exploring three additional developments in the Chicago area. We also are adding personnel in our marketing department."

Plentiful mortgage money at moderate interest rates, good supplies of all building materials, with reliable delivery schedules, and stabilized land and construction costs would be ideal, Simon agreed.

"But in tight times, a developer with staying power can benefit in several ways," he said. "Capable personnel are available because of others' staff reductions. The competition for well-situated land parcels is less intense. So is the competition for sales because fewer units are being built and some developers temporarily may be out of the market."

"Most important, by continuing to build, a developer with sufficient financial backing will have housing available for immediate sale when the market inevitably strengthens — as we expect it will before late 1974."

Developers will continue to face challenges in the coming year, Simon said. In the Chicago area, there will be no significant increases in the mortgage money supply — unless the state's usury limit is changed. Costs will continue to increase; some construction pay scales scheduled to increase in 1974 already have been negotiated. Land will be more costly, primarily because of higher carrying charges for money tied up in land purchase.

Expenditures related to ecology and contributions of cash or land demanded of developers by municipalities will add increasingly to the prices of individual housing units — up to several thousand dollars in some locations. These include lump-sum donations for school, park or other community-service purposes, and "such specific demands as buying a new fire engine or helping pay for a new village hall," Simon said.

"These 'in-front' outlays are demanded despite the fact that as they are built, homes in a new development are subjected to real estate taxes to pay for tax-supported services."

Taking all these increases into consideration, Simon foresees an 8 to 10 percent increase in housing costs in the Chicago area in 1974. Accordingly, he pointed out, qualified buyers should try to decide on making a home purchase as soon as they can.

"Despite problems, the demand for housing continues to exist," Simon said. "Housing developers in the Chicago area will conduct a lot of business in 1974 — and we expect to enjoy an increasing share of it, with sales of at least 90 units each in Atrium and Spring Mill.

"Purchase of a home continues to be one of the best possible hedges against inflation. Although finances are tight and money expensive, builders like the Simon organization that have been active in the housing market for years continue to have sources of mortgage funds for their buyers."

"Builders without long-established lines of mortgage credit and the re-sale market for homes will be the most adversely affected by the tight money market."

"Considering continuing increases in the real expenses for land, labor and materials, and the fact that decreases in interest rates cannot be expected," Simon said, "today's housing prices will be remembered in the foreseeable future as the bargains of 'the good old days.'"

The only handicap to hiring me is not knowing where to find me.

You won't find guys like me selling pencils on street corners. We're skilled, able-bodied workers. We're industrial designers, Salespeople, Secretaries, Managers, Accountants, Technicians. Blue collar and white collar.

Unfortunately, though, too many of us are unemployed.

And the irony of it is, it's not that men and women like yourself don't want to hire us. It's simply that you don't know how to go about it.

Every state in this country has a

If you are interested in tapping your state's supply of hard-working, capable men and women, write to your State Director of Vocational Rehabilitation. His office is located in your state capital.

Bureau offers advice on bathroom planning

Today's bathroom is a far cry from the sterile-looking, utilitarian place of not too many years ago. Its decor is planned as carefully as that of any other room in the house, and it's designed as a place to relax as well as bathe and perform other personal functions.

In planning a new bathroom, it's important to keep quality as well as appearance in mind. "Cheap" fixtures and other equipment look almost as good as quality ones when they're new — but they soon show signs of wear both in appearance and in function.

Remember, your bathroom equipment takes a lot of hard use and is expected to last many years, so it pays to buy the best. You get more for your money in the long run.

Here are some tips for planning your next bathroom from the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

Make sure it's big enough. Just a little more space will give you room enough for a more luxurious tub and a twin-bowl counter-top lavatory that will double the room's utility and quadruple its look of elegance.

Get the best water closet available, a siphon jet. It's quietest, has the best flushing action and is easiest to keep clean. Off-the-floor types make cleaning the bathroom easier.

Don't cut corners on the quality of your faucets or shower equipment. The cheapies have parts that often corrode when they come in contact with water and lose their luster fast.

Don't skimp on the size and quality of the medicine cabinet. It's wonderful to have enough room for all your toiletries.

Visit a plumbing contractor's store to see what's available in fixtures, faucets, accessories and floor and wall coverings. Ask him for the colorful and informative literature available from manufacturers. It will help you select equipment with which you'll enjoy living for a long time to come.

KEEP IT CLEAN

We know how you feel. Can't wait to get into your nice warm house on a bitter cold day. But for some unknown reason, your house isn't quite so warm as you anticipate. So off you go, into the kitchen, to turn on the gas range or oven, to heat your poor little house like a teapot. Well, don't do it. Drink a cup of hot tea instead. Then, go see why your heating system is not operating at maximum efficiency. First of all, check the furnace filter. If it's clogged and dirty, your hard-working furnace doesn't have a chance. Think of a dirty filter as a gag over the mouth of your furnace. See what we mean? Change it—or clean it—NOW. Then, make a resolution to housekeep your furnace filter several times each winter. You'll be far more comfortable, your furnace will work harder, easier...and best of all, you'll be doing your part to help conserve precious natural fuel.

There really is an end of the rainbow.

Buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. It's a practical way to put hard cash at the end of the rainbow.

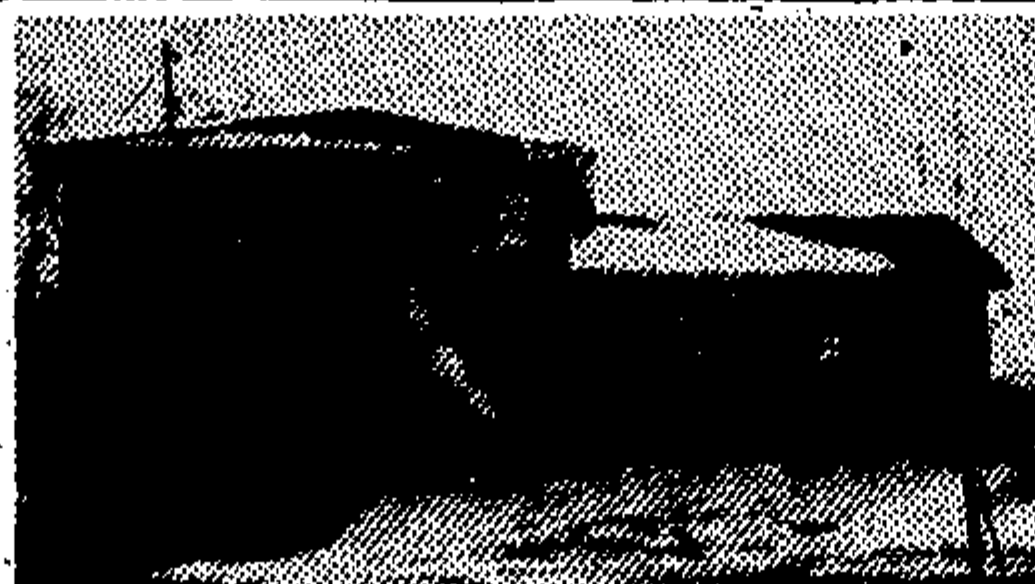

Now U.S. Bonds pay 6 1/2% interest when held to maturity of 6 years, 10 months, 42 the first years. Bonds are redeemable if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Booklets explain Put color in your fire softened water

Four booklets on the advantages of softened water are available free from the National Quality Water Committee. They are:

1. "Soft Water & Soap: A Solution to the Pollution Revolution." The booklet discusses the problems caused by hard water and the pollution problems attributed to phosphate detergents. It points out that soap is an excellent substitute for detergents when used with softened water. Ask for A-25.

2. "The Right Way to Wash Your Hair." The advantages of shampooing your hair often and the right way to do it are discussed. The booklets says that softened water is best for the scalp, and will give you more beautiful hair. Ask for A-23.

3. "Quality Water — Your First Step to a Cleaner Wash." The booklet points out that many homemakers tend to concentrate on the soap or detergent they use to launder their clothes, ignoring the quality of the water, which is all-important. Softened water will produce a cleaner wash and save on soap and detergent, too. Ask for A-21.

COOPERATIVE BLOOD REPLACEMENT PLAN
477-7500

For those who are lucky enough to have a fireplace, there are a few things you can do to make the evening more colorful says James E. Schuster, horticulturist at the DuPage County Cooperative Extension Service office in Wheaton.

Treat pine cones, kindling wood or tightly rolled newspaper with one of the following suggested chemicals for a little color change. Copper sulphate will give a green color — calcium chloride will give an orange color — while copper chloride will give a blue color. For a purple flame, try potassium chloride and try lithium chloride for a carmine colored flame.

A definite warning must be remembered at all times; use these chemicals only in well-ventilated fireplaces. These fumes are toxic, warns Schuster.

Other warnings which add to using these chemicals safely are:

- 1) Keep chemicals out of reach of pets and children.
- 2) Never use chlorates, nitrates or potassium permanganate by themselves or with another compound.

3) Buy only what can be used immediately — avoid storing the chemicals (it takes one pound of chemical to one gallon of water)

4) Treat products outside, while wearing rubber gloves, and don't spill the solutions.

5) Chemicals should be dissolved in plastic pails since metal ones can be ruined. Use a separate container for each solution.

6) Submerge the material being treated in the chemical solution for 24 hours.

7) Drain over container and then dry on newspapers. Burn the newspapers later.

If these warnings are followed, one can have a safe but colorful fireplace for the winter holidays, says Schuster.

Again, use only in smokeless, well-ventilated fireplaces as the fumes are deadly.

Fuel-saving advice for homeowners available from University of Illinois

For homeowners wanting to use less fuel, help meet the energy crisis and make their homes more comfortable, five non-technical publications are available from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Prepared and published by the UIUC Small Homes Council-Building Research Council, they are:

- "Living With the Energy Crisis"
- "Insulation in the Home"
- "Heating the Home"
- "Fuels and Burners"
- "Chimneys and Fireplaces"

The circulars are 25 cents each from Small Homes Council-Building Research Council, University of Illinois, Champaign, 61820. They are part of a series of non-technical circulars for homeowners and planners, and the complete set is $4.50.

"Living With the Energy Crisis" has a 68-point checklist of cost-cutting suggestions, and charts presenting a simplified way for homeowners to calculate heat savings from various amounts of insulation and window protection.

Among the suggestions:

Install storm sash early in the heating season. Insulate ceilings and walls. Install a storm door and weatherstrip both storm door and inside door. Caulk around window and door frames.

Have heating system checked, adjusted and cleaned. Close fireplace damper when fireplace is not in use. Shut off spare rooms not in use. Each 1 degree Fahrenheit lower room thermostat setting can save 2 to 3 per cent in fuel.

Night thermostat setback of 10 degrees may save 7 per cent of fuel in poorly insulated homes, but much less in insulated homes.

The circular points out that basement heat losses usually are ignored. Basement walls also should be insulated and storm sash installed on windows. Crawl space walls may be insulated or insulation placed between joists under the floor.

"Insulation in the Home" tells how as much as half the fuel can be saved for some houses.

Fifty per cent is the saving estimated for a typical two-story frame house with wood or shingle siding to which tight storm windows and doors, 4 inches of insulation between ceiling joists and 3 5/8 inches between wall studs is applied.

Facts about insulation and fuel saving, many from years of careful research at UIUC, are presented in this non-technical circular. It has a table showing reductions in fuel consumption possible in eight typical types of construction for one- or two-story homes.

Benefits of insulation pointed out include greater comfort by making wall and window surfaces warmer, reduced drafts and more uniform heat, money saved by reduced fuel needs and a smaller heating plant or less load on existing equipment, and cleaner walls and ceilings because dust and dirt do not gather on warm surfaces as on cold.

Good insulation will not attract insects and mice, will not form a fire hazard, will not absorb moisture and get soggy and will not deteriorate or settle, the circular explains.

Types of insulation include flexible blankets or batts of mineral wool made of slag, glass or rock; fill-type insulation poured or blown into place, and reflective insulation involving metal foil or a foil surface and insulating boards.

"Heating the Home" tells about various heating systems — warm air, hot water, electric — the different kinds of installations and how they work.

"Fuels and Burners" tells about various heat sources — oil and gas burners, liquefied petroleum, electricity, coal — and has a table for comparing costs.

"Chimneys and Fireplaces" has information about construction and maintenance, including air circulating fireplaces which are much more efficient heat producers than ordinary fireplaces.

CONSUMER CORNER

Contrary to popular belief, jiggling your thermostat up and down does not make your heating system more efficient! Turning it up to 80 degrees does not send instant warmth to a cold room. Leave it alone! Set your thermostat at the temperature your family finds most comfortable, and forget it. If your furnace is operating properly, the thermostat will automatically turn itself on and off when the temperature goes above or below the temperature you indicate.

If your heating system doesn't seem to be operating properly, don't be a Mr. Fix-It. This is one problem that demands experienced professional help. Call your utility company or heating company. You'll save money... and just as important, you'll conserve precious fuel, as well.

Snake Hollow

Poverty, ignorance, hopelessness—this town has it all; and nobody seems to mind much, including the inhabitants ...

by TOM TIEDE

SNAKE HOLLOW, Tenn. — Somebody asked Harold Mashburn the other day what he thought about the resignation of Spiro Agnew and he said he didn't think much about it at all. He didn't know the man had quit, for one thing, and, for another, he never heard of anybody named Spiro Agnew.

"Vice President? No, I didn't know him."

While lamentable, the ignorance is understandable. Harold Mashburn has other things to think about than politics. Twenty-seven years old, married, children, he is jobless, broke, unskilled, futureless and living here. In this isolated mountain community, under conditions more suitable for cattle.

Mashburn must worry about simpler problems. His teeth are rotting, his children are ill-clothed, he lives in a shack that leans with the wind.

Watergate? The energy crisis? War again in the Middle East? While much of America concerns itself with the alarming complexities of events this winter, Mashburn must worry about simpler problems. His teeth are rotting, his children are ill-clothed, he lives in a shack that leans with the wind. As Tennessee temperatures begin to dip, he cannot worry about San Clemente so much as the prospect of his family using outdoor plumbing in a freeze.

AND HE IS NOT alone. Snake Hollow is a brief valley between a mountain and a ridge in northeastern Tennessee, resembling nothing so much as Snuffy Smith country without the gags, and perhaps 200 people live here in fundamental privation. Dog dung lies on broken porches, windows are patched with cardboard, there is a one-room schoolhouse heated by an ancient coal stove. Nobody starves, says a resident, but otherwise there isn't much optimism.

Nobody starves, says a resident, but otherwise there isn't much optimism ...

Ironically, Snake Hollow was once part of the major complexities with which much of America concerns itself. During the ballyhooed War on Poverty of the '60s, Appalachian communities such as this were front-page news, as citizens and authorities alike pledged to bring all U.S. citizens into 20th-century affluence.

Unfortunately, the attention was short-lived. Poverty cannot compete with Watergate for the public interest. Says a spokesman for the Federal Office of Economic Opportunity:

"Our fight has faded. Helping the poor is no longer chic."

At least it is no longer high priority. The OEO itself has been massively wounded by official neglect (President Nixon proposed its disbandment two years ago) and has no more than a year to live. Other poverty programs are suffering almost equally; in Tennessee, virtually unnoticed among the welter of other depressing world news, it has been announced that up to 40,000 people are due to be chopped from the welfare rolls, among them 2,800 poor and disabled children being cut from day care and special education classes.

IT'S NOT THAT poor people are being entirely forgotten. The Health, Education and Welfare Department says that taxpayers still spend about $1.7 billion a month to assist 14.7 million underprivileged or afflicted U.S. citizens (most of them — 11 million people — classified as elderly, blind, disabled or children). And it's not that progress hasn't been made; in 1960, according to state figures, 33 per cent of Tennessee's population was considered poor, while today the total is only 21 per cent.

But the poverty focus is just not there anymore. Partly because the United States has turned to other emergencies such as corruption on high and alarming fuel shortages. But also because, as the OEO spokesman says: "I think we all overstated the poverty case in the 1960s. We indicated that with a little bit of razedazzle we'd wipe it out forever. It just can't be done so simply."

"We ain't like outsiders say," grumps a Snake Hollow man. "We get along all right here."

One reason it can't, it has been learned, is that often times the poor themselves resist help. As right here in Snake Hollow. Pride knows no economic level and the mountain people resent the snooping and alterations that accompany bureaucratic assistance. Indeed, the backlash has been precisely predictable: "We ain't like outsiders say," grumps a Snake Hollow man, "we get along all right here."

ACTUALLY, in some ways the people of Snake Hollow (they are a copper-colored, inbred group called Mulungeons, origin unknown) do get along. That is to say they manage. They help each other, they insist on certain rules of conduct, a few have managed to get steady jobs and build sturdy homes. Also, their land is lovely. And as for being backward, resident Gillis Harvey says:

"Sometimes I think there's too much learning. I've got TV, but it's confusing. The President says one thing, the Congress says another, and, well, I get so I don't know who to believe."

Yet the general situation here, that of people living from hand to mouth, is no less deplorable in 1973 than it was in 1963. Hancock, the county surrounding Snake Hollow, is the poorest in the state; authorities believe that of 7,000 county residents 4,200 earn less than $4,300 a year and live in substandard homes. And Snake Hollowites have it even worse: Residents say large families live here with no work, no welfare — and considering the diminishing profile of the poor they may have no hope either.

Hope? For poor people that is very often something others make possible. And this winter as problems escalate everywhere, there seems to be a shortage of it at all levels.

"Used to be a lot of people come in here and look around," says Curtis Bell, age 74, leaning on a pair of crutches. "Now they all stay in Washington, I guess. Can't blame them. From what I hear it may be things are almost as bad there these days as they are here."

Racking up extra storage space

No house has enough storage space. If you are building or remodeling you can plan extra storage before the work is completed. If you are living in an older home and have no plans to remodel then finding new storage space may be a problem.

All storage is a personal matter. It differs from family to family. The right approach to solving the problem is to start by determining what you must store, then determine the best way to do it. Make an inventory so you know whether it's books, linen, clothes, shoes or tools that need extra facilities. Determine in what parts of the house these various items should be stored.

After this you can begin to sort out the solutions.

IN MANY INSTANCES simple rearranging of existing facilities may be all that is needed. Most closets are poorly organized. This also is true of many cabinets.

Will a few extra shelves help? Make them adjustable so they can be rearranged from time to time. Maybe drawers or trays instead of shelves will do more to help.

How about an extra rod for hanging clothes? Short items or children's clothes can be hung from a rod placed closer to the floor than the ceiling, or placed in a waist-high area.

There are dozens of gadgets on the market to make your storage easier. You can find rods that pull out or fold away, special hardware for hats, special racks for almost anything.

YOUR KITCHEN cabinets can offer more space with some of these gadgets. Special hooks and racks can make them more efficient. You can hang an extra drawer on the underside of a wall cabinet. The drawer is lightweight, comes complete with easy-to-install drawer guides.

Find spots out of the main traffic areas in which to place extra storage facilities. Consider wall spaces in out-of-the-way places. Shelves or cabinets can be installed in corners. They can be hung high enough so that there is still room for furniture below. Book shelves can be installed on the sides of a doorway and even above it.

That window against which you can't put anything anyway can offer space. Place shelves below it. Use a low chest, place cushions on it and you have a window seat.

MOVE FURNITURE around to make better use of wall space. If there are paintings or photographs on the wall, consider whether moving them might make the space available for shelves.

Some free-standing storage units serve as furniture. Wall to ceiling (or almost that high) cabinets can be used as room dividers, turning a large room into two smaller ones and creating a storage wall where there was none before.

You can buy or build multi-storage units to go on a single wall. These units are designed to house hi-fi equipment, a television set, records and books. Arrange shelves so that every part of the unit is used for the items that best fit it or it will become a junk collector.

Veterans' news

GI home loan has advantages

Q — What are some of the advantages of a Veterans Administration GI home loan?

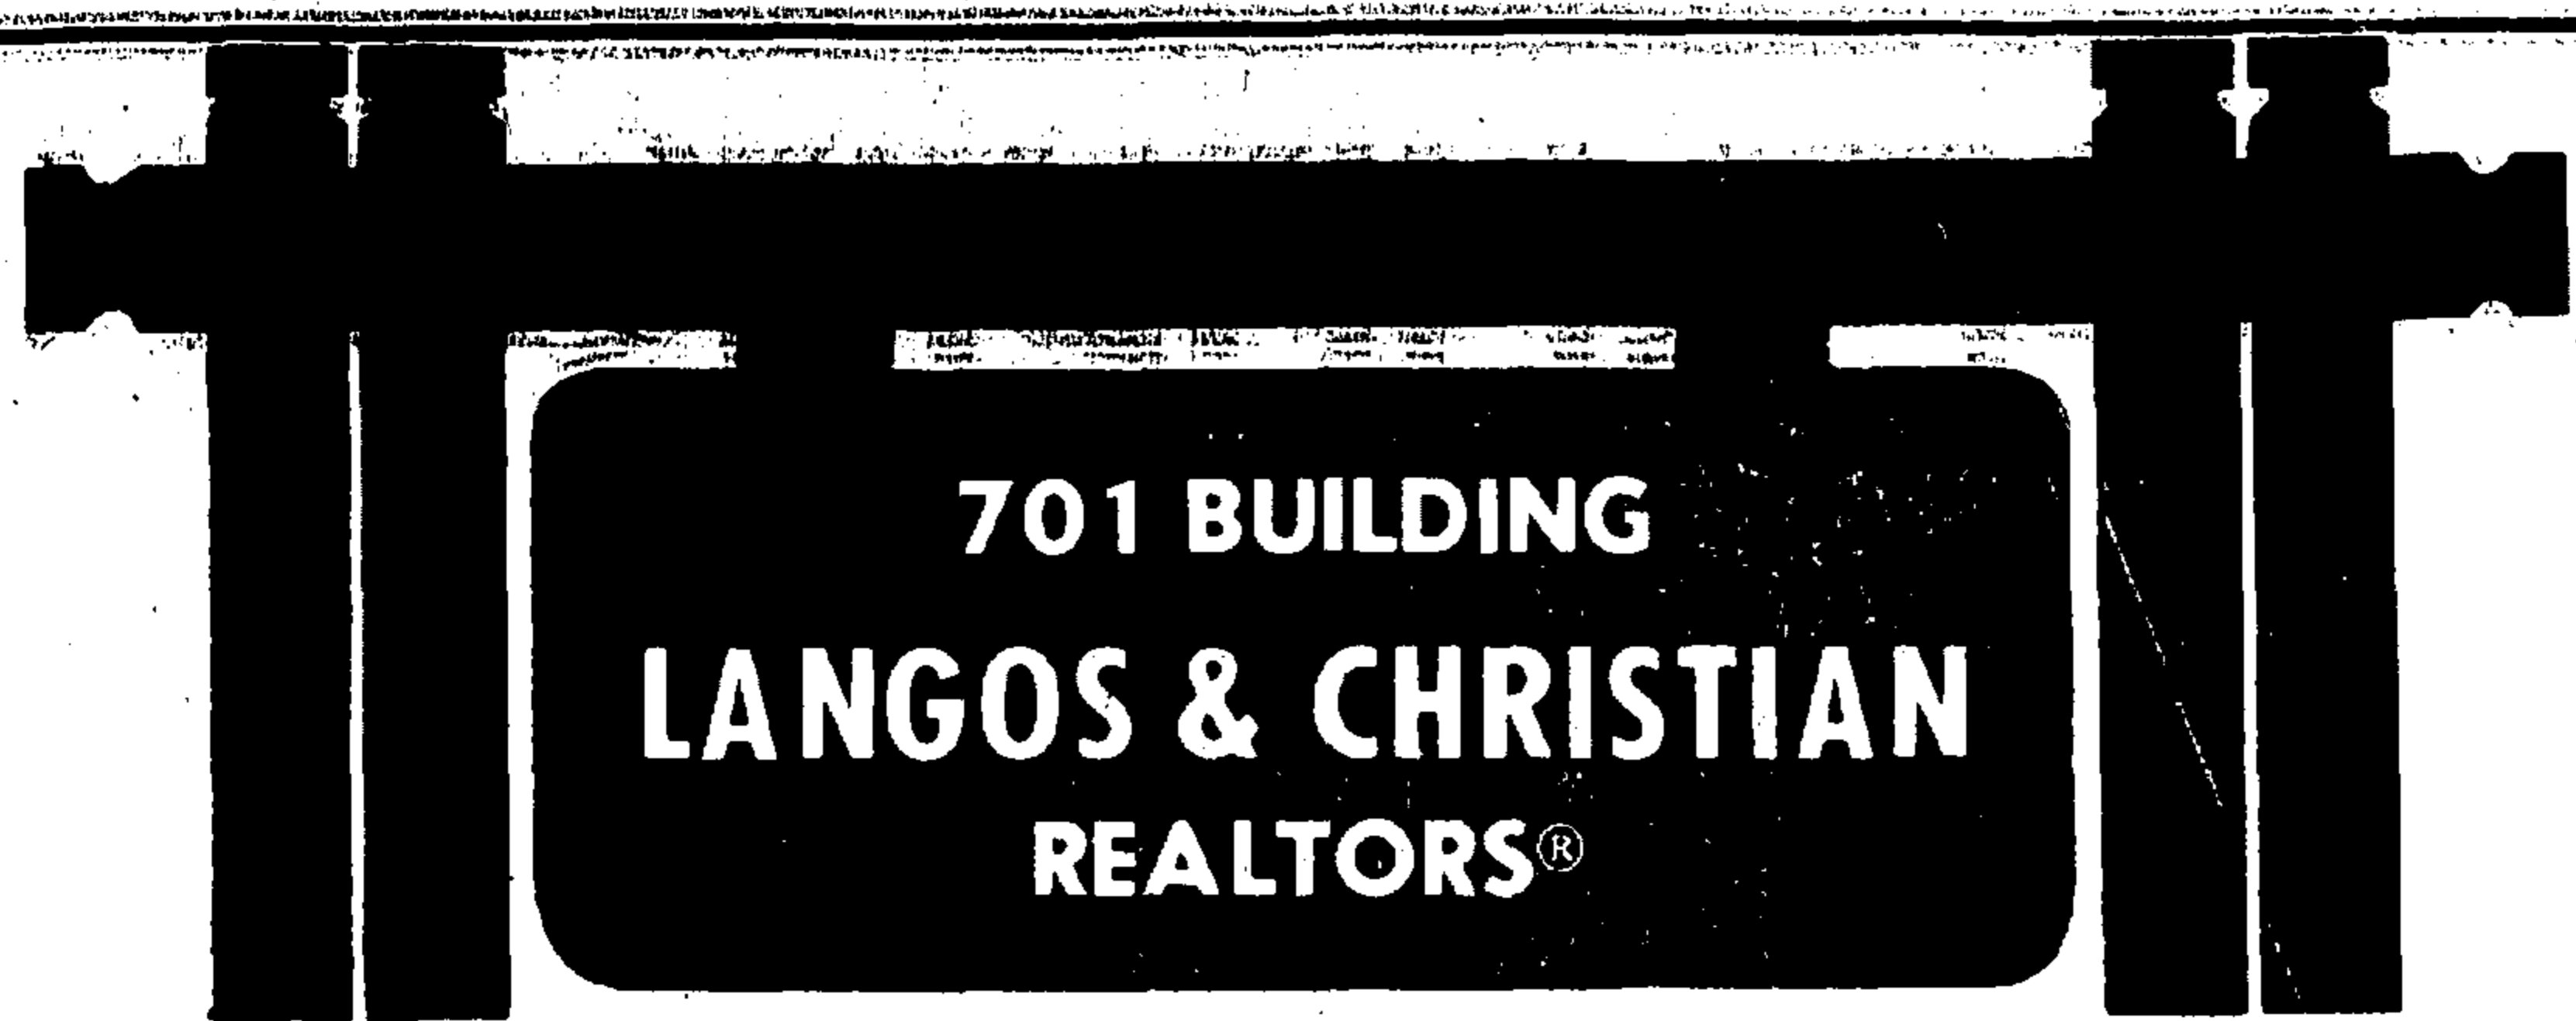

A — VA guarantees 60 per cent up to a maximum of $12,500 of such loans, no down payment required usually, the agency appraises the house to determine its reasonable value and there usually is a long repayment period.

Q — I was honorably discharged last month after three years of military duty, none of it in Vietnam. Am I eligible for education benefits?

A — Yes. Any veteran separated after Jan. 31, 1955, with an other than dishonorable discharge after at least 181 days of active duty, has eligibility for eight years or until May 31, 1974, whichever is later. Geographic location of service has no bearing on eligibility.

Q — Rather than write to the Veterans Administration to give my change of address, can't I do it by phone?

A — Yes, but you should be prepared to provide as much identifying information as possible, such as claim and/or social security number, date and place of birth, etc.

How to keep drains clear

Plumbing contractors get more calls to unplug drains and clogged water closets than for any other service. Yet most such stoppages can be avoided with just a little care.

For example, if you pour a kettle of boiling water down the kitchen sink every day, this will help to keep the drain clear. Large food particles, coffee grounds and grease should never be washed down the drain.

In the bathroom, stoppages in the water closet are the most frequent problem. The water closet never should be used to dispose of trash. And if the lid is kept closed, the chances of anything's falling in accidentally are lessened.

A booklet that contains dozens of tips on plumbing maintenance — including how to clear clogged pipes, what to do about noisy plumbing, how to prolong the life of your water heater — is available for 30 cents plus an eight-cent stamp. Write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Lincoln begins in-the-home counseling

In-the-home savings counseling is the latest innovation by Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Association of Berwyn.

Effective Jan. 1, selected officers and staff members of the $145-million institution will be available for appointment in the home or office of prospective savers.

President Frank J. Kinst feels this type of institutional outreach falls in line with stepped-up customer service. He explained:

"Most important family decisions are made in the home. People are more at ease in familiar surroundings. And what is a more important household decision than a well-conceived program of thrift."

Kinst noted the prime inspiration for the program stemmed from the many shut-ins who are not able to come in to Lincoln for a discussion.

Visiting Lincoln officers will be able to answer questions of various family members and advise the many types of accounts, maturities and interest rates available.

Lincoln Federal, now in its 58th year, previously pioneered in-the-field closings, 48-hour loan commitments, one-and two-visit loan processing.

Among Lincoln's community activities have been the provision of meeting rooms for 80 to 100 neighborhood groups monthly, and the annual month-long visit of Santa and his animal friends which concluded Christmas Eve.

Larwin appoints Pero

Jaime A. Pero has been appointed director of engineering of the Single Family Housing Division, Illinois Region of The Larwin Group, Inc.

In making the announcement, Samuel Korn, president of Larwin's Illinois Homebuilding Region, said Pero will be responsible for technical matters related to all phases of site development, including communications with municipal officials, quality control in land development, new property investigation and coordination of engineering costs and specifications.

Immediately prior to joining Larwin-Illinois, Pero was a division engineer with the Larwin corporate offices in Beverly Hills, Calif., and assisted the engineering department on a consulting basis.

Before joining The Larwin Group, Pero had acquired more than 15 years' experience in land development and municipal works consulting, construction and managing for national and international entities.

Pero received his bachelor of science degree in Bolivia, South America, and continued his studies at the University of California at Berkeley.

"Pero's experience and background," said Korn, "coincide with the requirements of his new position and I am confident that his association with Larwin-Illinois will help us appreciably toward achieving our goals."

11-cent airmail card to be out tomorrow

by BERNADINE M. RECHNER

The U.S. Postal Service has released the design of an 11-cent airmail postal card to be issued tomorrow, Jan. 4, at State College, Pa.

First-day ceremonies will be held in connection with the opening of a new postal station in the new building of the American Philatelic Society.

The eagle indicia was designed by David G. Foote, manager of design services for the Postal Service.

Requests for first day cancellations should be sent to Postmaster, State College, Pa. 16801, enclosing the proper remittance, which is the cost of the card itself.

RECAPING the 1973 U.S. stamp releases — let's again conduct an informal, unscientific survey on the best-liked and the least-liked U.S. issues of the past year:

- Jan. 12 — The $1 Eugene O'Neill coil stamp
- Jan. 26 — The 8-cent Special Stamp for Someone Special (LOVE)
- Feb. 16 — 8-cent American Revolution Bicentennial (Pamphleteer)
- Feb. 23 — 8-cent George Gershwin
- April 13 — 8-cent American Revolution Bicentennial (Posting a Broadside)
- April 23 — 8-cent Copernicus
- April 30 — Ten 8-cent Postal People
- May 8 — 8-cent Harry S. Truman Commemorative
- June 22 — 8-cent American Revolution Bicentennial (Post Rider)
- June 27 — 21-cent A. P. Giannini
- July 4 — Four 8-cent Boston Tea Party
- July 10 — Four Electronics issues (8-cent, 8-cent, 11-cent and 15-cent denominations)
- Aug. 13 — 8-cent Robinson Jeffers
- Aug. 27 — 8-cent Lyndon B. Johnson commemorative
- Sept. 10 — 8-cent Henry O. Tanner

Stamp notes

- Sept. 20 — 8-cent Willa Cather
  - Sept. 28 — 8-cent American Revolution Bicentennial (Drummer)
  - Oct. 5 — 8-cent Rural America (Angus Cattle)
  - Nov. 7 — Two 8-cent Christmas issues (needlepoint tree and the Raphael Madonna and Child)
- For the purposes of our Curiosity Survey No. 3 we will confine the voting to the above list of adhesive stamps released by the U.S. Postal Service during 1973. Send your vote for the best-liked issue and the least-liked issue to Stamp Notes, Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.
- For simplification, the Electronics issue of four stamps, the ten Postal People stamps and the Boston Tea Party block of four will count as one stamp each.

There are several items of postal stationery issued by the U.S. Postal Service during 1973, as well as the above listed adhesives, and three souvenir cards. Stationery included:

- Feb. 10 — 15-cent Ballooning Aerogramme
  - Sept. 14 — 8-cent replica of the first postal card
  - Dec. 16 — 8-cent single and the 16-cent double reply paid postal cards honoring Samuel Adams
- The three souvenir cards honored IBRA '73 in May; APEX '73 in July and POLSKA '73 in August through Sept. 2.

Also released during the past year were a series of high value tagged stamps for which there was no conventional first-day cancellations. They were released April 3 in an expansion of the Postal Service phosphor tagging program and included the 20-cent, 25-cent (in two forms — Paul Revere coil and the Frederick Douglass sheet stamp), 30-cent, 40-cent, 50-cent, $1 and $5 regular issues.

Pennies nearly priced out of the copper market

Because of the rising price of copper, the Treasury Department has asked Congress to grant standby authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to change the present copper alloy of the one-cent piece to an aluminum alloy.

Upon approval of the legislation and determination by the Secretary of the Treasury that the use of copper in the cent is no longer practical, the Mint would go into production of aluminum one-cent pieces. Tests are presently being conducted on seven different alloys to determine which will achieve a quality 95 per cent aluminum alloy cent.

IT WOULD TAKE at least three months to produce and secure enough of the alloy to begin full production. Until the Mint's supply of bronze is exhausted, copper cents would continue to be produced.

Current law requires the cent to contain 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent zinc. This past year the price of copper has more than doubled, and in recent weeks the price has exceeded $1 per pound compared with a 50 cents a pound price last January.

With copper prices fluctuating around $1 per pound, the metal cost of a one-cent piece is approximately 0.7 cents. Manufacturing and transportation expenses amount to roughly 0.2 cents for each piece, making the total cost of a copper-bronze coin nine-tenths of its face value.

In a recently completed study, aluminum alloy proved to be the most practical alternative to bronze. It is durable, corrosion resistant and has proved to be an acceptable coin metal in 36 countries of the free world.

THE CHANGE from copper to aluminum currently selling at 30 cents a pound, would result in a $40 million savings in a year — a savings that would be returned to general treasury funds to the benefit of all taxpayers. A 50 per cent energy saving in cent strips production and transportation would be an added advantage during the current crisis.

Whether or not this would necessitate a design change is yet to be determined. But if all goes as planned, Lincoln would remain the central feature.

Our Five Lincoln Cents
The Lincoln cent has changed compositions four times since 1909. From 1909 to 1943 it contained 95 per cent copper, 2.5 per cent zinc and 2.5 per cent tin,

Collecting coins

by Mort Reed

In 1943 it was changed to zinc coated steel; in 1944 it was 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent zinc, and in 1959 it reverted back to a combination of 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent tin and zinc. The proposed aluminum cent will make the fifth change for the most popular of our general circulation coins.

A bit of good news...

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK — After weeks of gloomy developments the nation recently got a bit of good business news.

Most important, it was disclosed that the United States had a thumping $2.24 billion balance of payments surplus in the third quarter. Combined with the steady improvement in the payments balance in the current quarter, this is enough to wipe out the deficit of the first half of the year and insure a favorable balance for the whole year in sharp contrast with last year's $9.8 billion deficit.

The great significance of this is that it forecasts both a strong dollar and probably a continuing good demand for American goods abroad.

AND THE international Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said in Paris that, in its considered opinion, the Arab oil embargo could not seriously harm the economy of the United States. The OECD said the United States could readily absorb a 15 per cent reduction in total consumption of energy.

But the fuel crisis continued to wreak much hardship.

Many more layoffs were announced in the airline industry. The airline pilots considered, then abandoned a proposal to call a Christmas strike to protest what they believed was discriminatory treatment of the airlines in fuel allocations. The pilots said they may strike after Feb. 1.

Truckers participated in more highway blockages and stoppages to protest the high price of diesel fuel, and there were scattered acts of violence against truckers who refused to join the stoppages. The huge Teamsters' Union announced it would demand renegotiation of its current nationwide contract. The union said many of its members are "going broke" under the contract's existing terms because of price inflation.

Energy czar William Simon asked Americans to limit themselves voluntarily to 10 gallons of gasoline a week and asked gas station proprietors to limit sales to 10 gallons.

A NEW auction of oil exploration leases in the Gulf of Mexico brought the Interior Department $1.49 billion in bonuses and many major oil companies announced vastly expanded exploration and exploratory drilling budgets for 1974.

The gas station proprietors and retail heating oil dealers who have been squeezed so far by the energy crisis were promised some relief when the government announced price rises of 2.3 per cent in both fuels in February, primarily to help the retailers.

The Gallup Poll said it found ordinary Americans are taking the fuel shortages in stride and many people favor even stricter controls.

A government official warned the electric utility industry that it must convert totally to coal or nuclear power; it cannot hope to use oil or gas as a fuel in the future.

A controversy developed over to the extent Simon should use experts recruited from the oil companies in planning and carrying out a national energy program. Simon said that while he would be dependent on the oil companies for technical help he was determined the oil men should not have a decisive voice in policy-making.

NINE ELECTRIC utility companies and Pratt & Whitney division of United Aircraft Corp. announced they will spend $12 million to develop fuel cells capable of producing 26,000 kilowatts of power by chemical reaction from hydrogen or natural gas.

Christmas shopping finally picked up to the predicted gain of 8 to 10 per cent from last year. The growth rate of personal income was disclosed to have slowed in November for the third consecutive month but still it was up from last year by a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $8.7 billion.

Housing starts were revealed to have spurred a surprising 3.8 per cent in November. The experts said they frankly were puzzled by the rise.

The Bell System reported an 11.7 per cent profit rise for three months ended Nov. 30. General Mills also reported big sales and profit gains for the quarter closing the end of November, but Westinghouse Electric said its fourth quarter profits will be only half those of a year ago. Eastern Airlines said its deficit for the first 11 months was $44.7 million.

Lockheed Aircraft Corp., rescued in 1972 by a $250 million federal loan guaranty, said it was again in serious financial trouble. Lockheed said it would not be able to meet its cash requirements in the new year. Management said it was seeking a merger to solve the problem but did not name the proposed partner.

Aluminum Co. of America announced a three-for-two split in common stock, its first stock split in 18 years.

GENERAL MOTORS and Ford were found innocent by a federal court of price fixing in the sale of fleet cars.

The federal court of appeals upheld a $150,000-a-day contempt fine against International Business Machine Corp. for failure to furnish some 1,200 documents in connection with the Justice Department anti-trust suit. IBM contended some of the documents involved a privileged lawyer-client relationship. IBM said it will appeal to the Supreme Court.

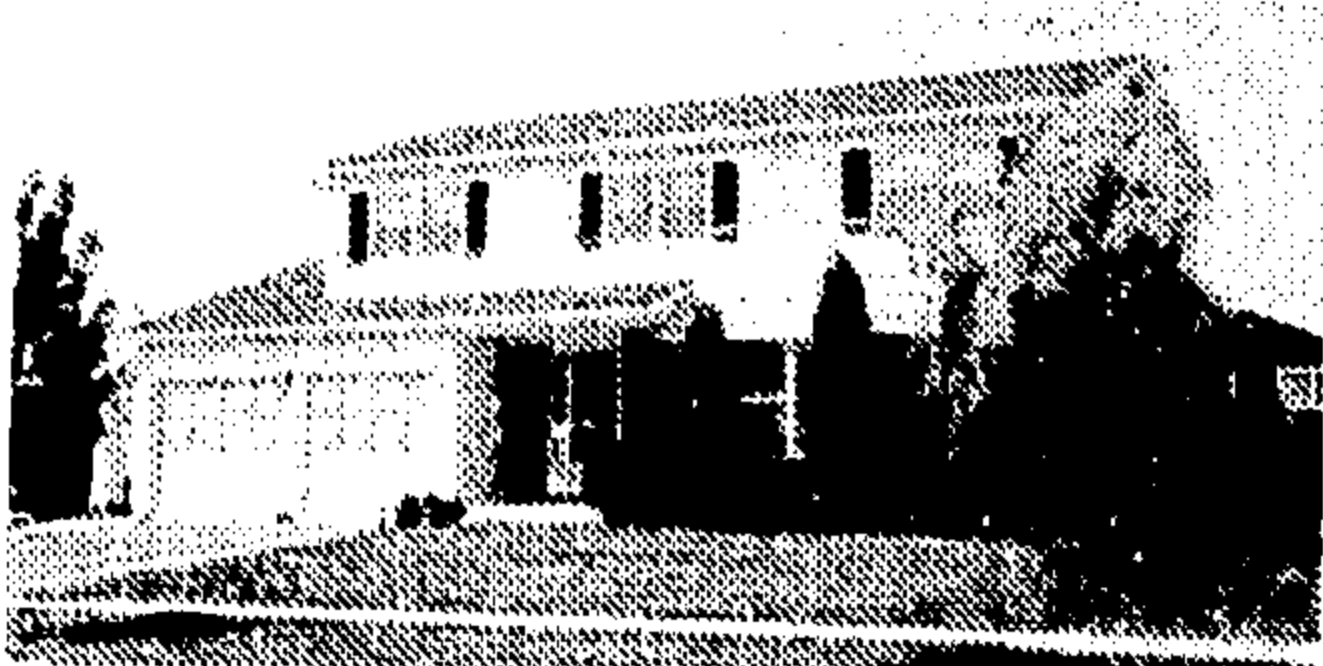

Curtiss-Wright Corp. quit the fight to buy control of Airco Inc., leaving the field to British Oxygen Ltd.

Chrysler raised the average price of its 1974 cars by $193 and American Motors announced a $150-a-car boost.

Secretariat, grid playoffs top 1973 stories

SECRETARIAT'S visit to Arlington Park received a unanimous vote from the sports department as the top individual story of 1973.

Paul Logan

Was it a good year?

When you look back on 1973, political and financial turmoil first come to mind. However, the sting of those daily stories was lessened somewhat by happenings in sports.

Paging through the sports department's huge newspaper file renewed those thrilling moments when Watergate was splashed from the mind by swimming achievements in the state meet late last winter.

When Secretariat strutted before a packed Arlington Park that warm day in June, it sent a cloud of dust to briefly cover up the memory of how much it cost to buy a steak or if we'd have to eat horsemeat.

The thrilling and chilly fall Mid-Suburban Super Bowl made some area sportsmen forget about the problems of the Vice President as well as the danger of a bigger war growing out of the Middle East fighting.

And the shocking end to a proud Arlington Heights American Legion baseball program occupied some people's minds instead of the energy crisis as the winter of '73 began.

Was it a good year for area sports happenings? Yes, I think so.

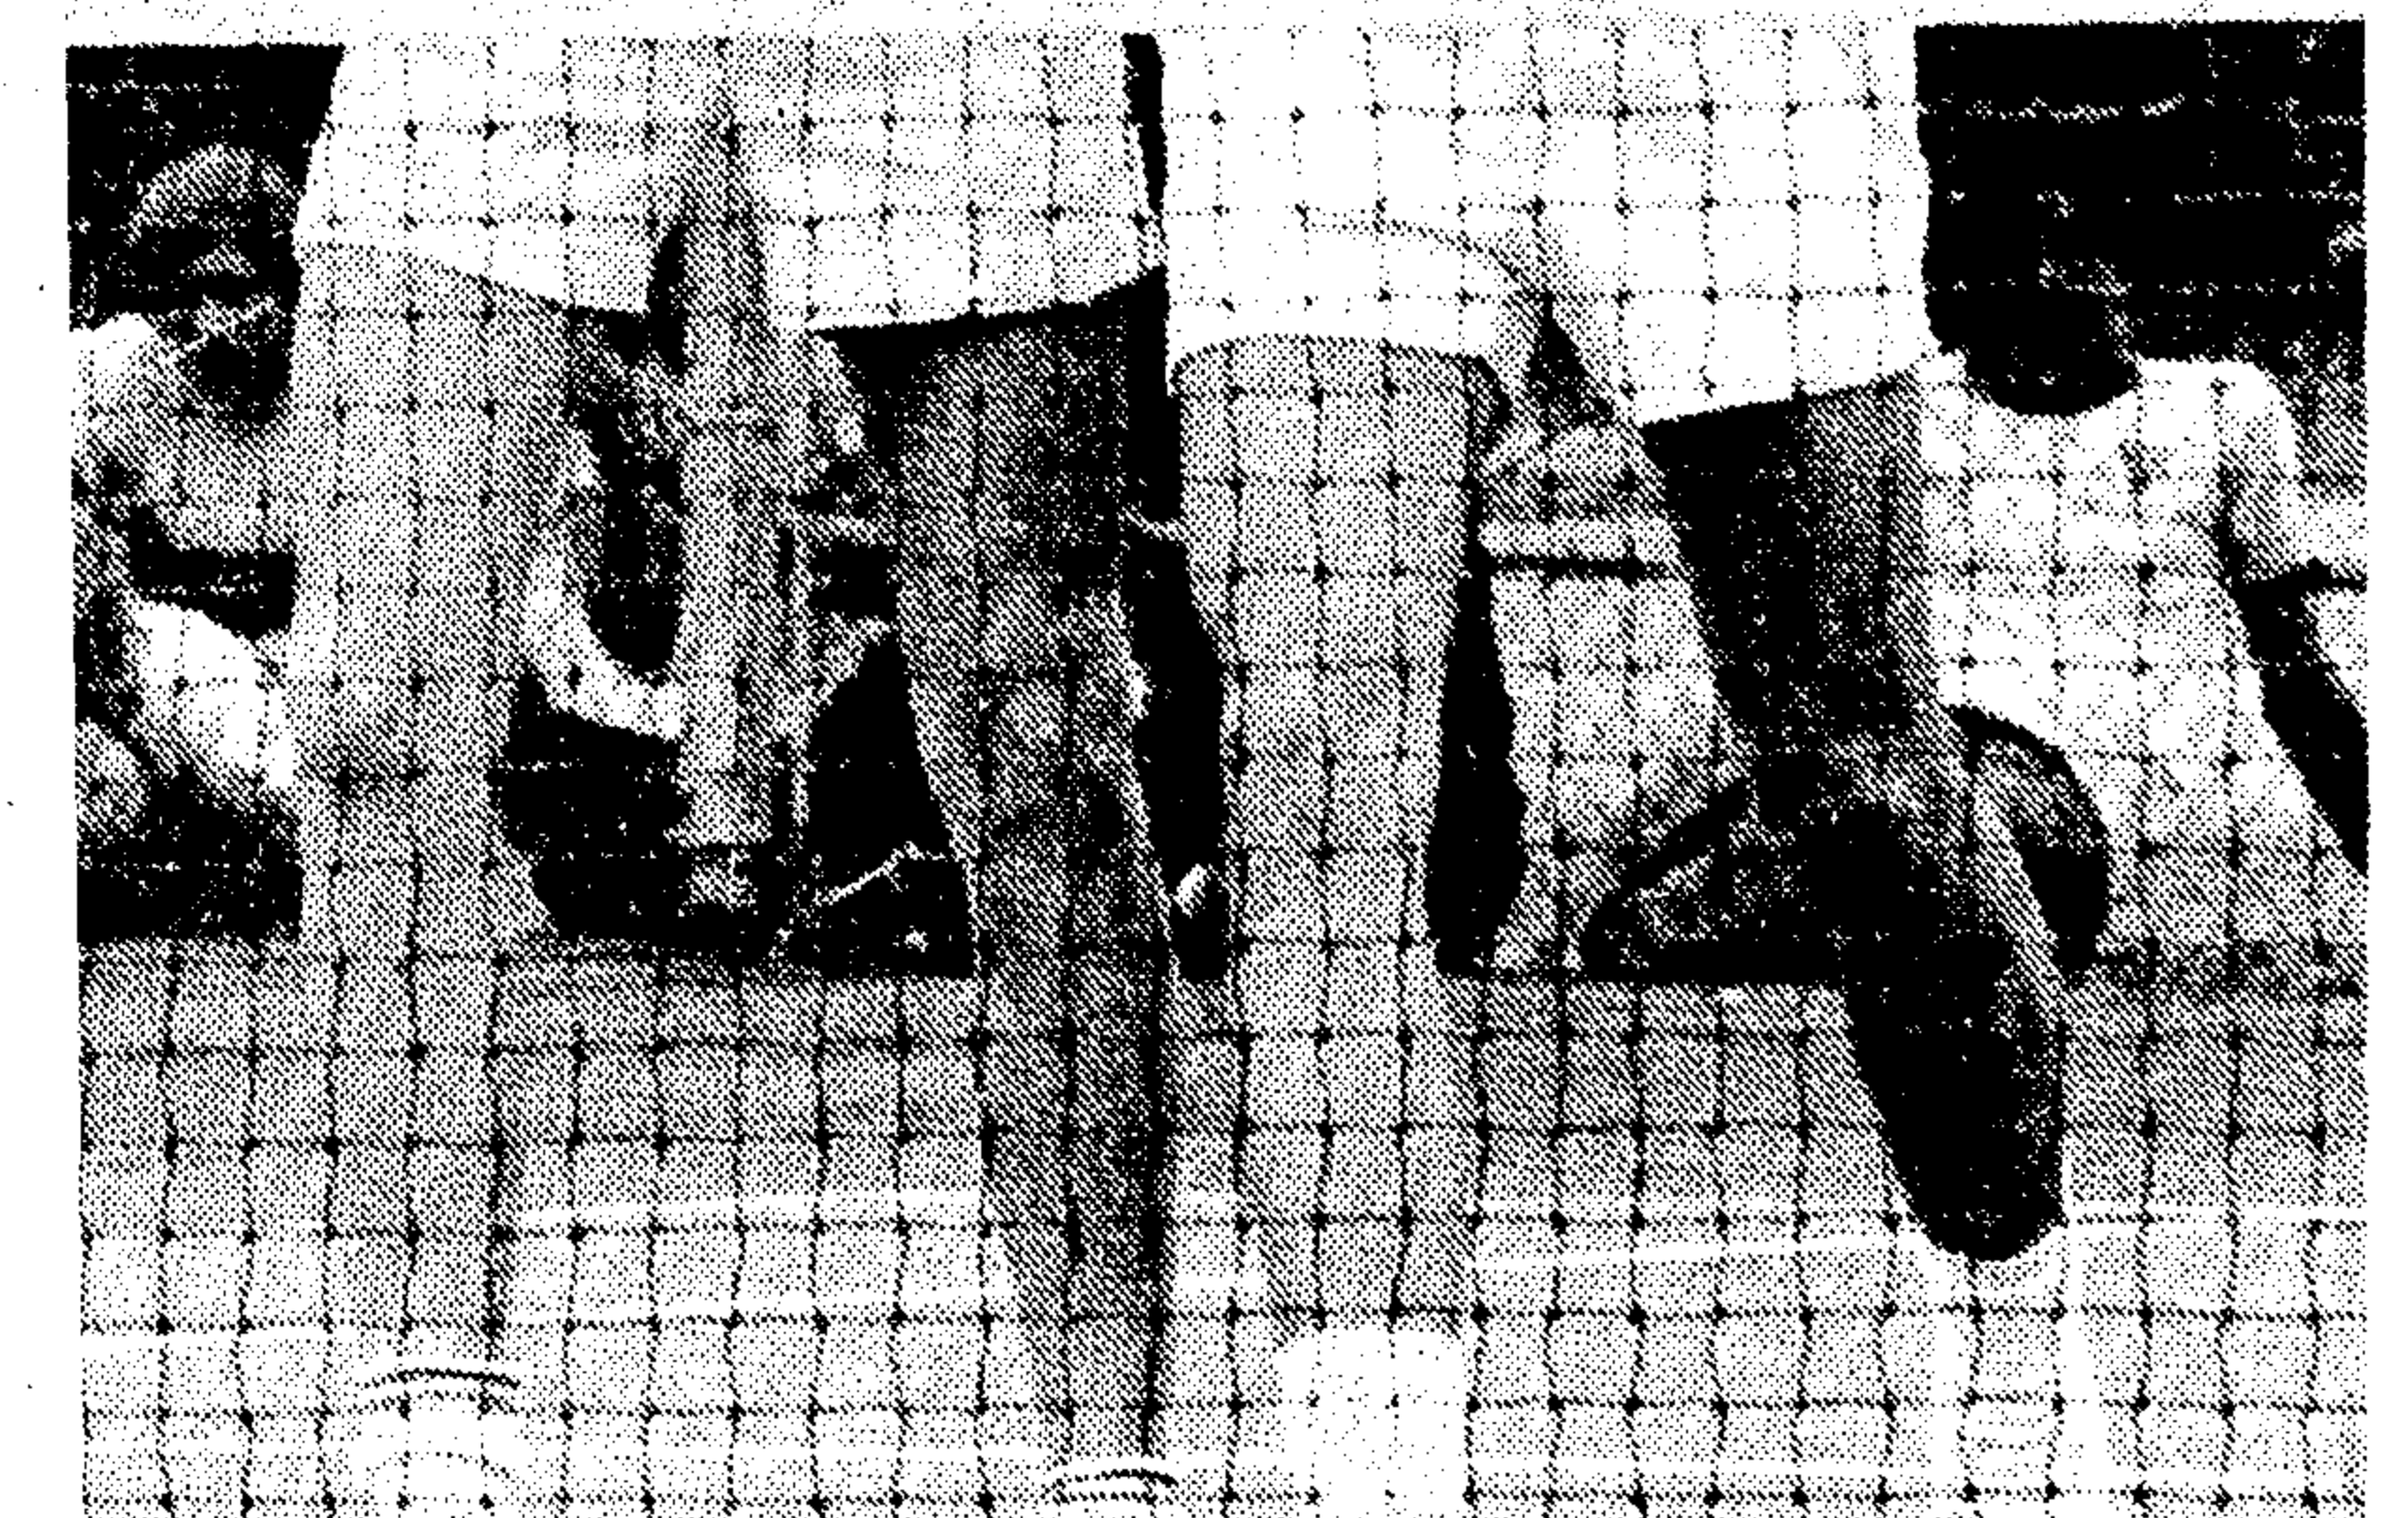

Was it a great year? Maybe, maybe not.

In each sport there were stars, both individual and team. It is for this reason that the annual "Top 20 Stories of the Year" page has been changed to a top 10 for individuals and a like number for team or organizational type achievements.

The cream of sports spectaculars that happened around here were passed along to the sports staff. Their votes determined which were the top stories in each class.

The results appear below. Here's hoping they bring back some great memories to you as they did for us.

Happy New Year!

ONE OF THE FEW state titles by the area was recorded by Arlington's doubles tennis team of Jim Merkel and Jon Paczkowski.

Top 10 individual stories:

(1.) SECRETARIAT GALLOPS IN AREA

A crowd of 41,233 bettors and non-bettors alike crammed Arlington Park race track in June to see "Super Horse" — Secretariat. Easily outdistancing his three would-be challengers, the chestnut thoroughbred romped to victory as the happy throng went hysterical. It was an historic occasion. A happening.

Tom Porter

(2.) FOX FLASHES TO 1ST

Rick Fox, Prospect High School's brilliant sprinter, became the first Mid-Suburban League state champion in swimming with his flashy 50-yard freestyle swim. His 21.6 was just off the state mark (21.5). "I was on 'Cloud Nine,'" said Rick.

(3.) RECORD RUN AT PROSPECT

Craig Virgin, inspired by a roaring capacity crowd at Prospect High School's football stadium, set a national record for the two-mile run of 8:40.9. Competing at the Second Annual International Prep Track and Field Invitational, the high school senior from Lebanon broke the old mark of super runner Steve Prefontaine (8:41.6 in 1969). "I'm glad I could do it today at your meet," said Craig. So were the 8,000 who watched the historic event.

(4.) GODAWA'S THE BEST

Rolling Meadows' Mike Godawa became "Mr. Gymnastics" at the state meet last March with his impressive victory in the all-around competition. The steady junior strongboy averaged a sparkling 8.24 in his five events. "I knew I could win the all-around this season," said Mike, who proved what a strong combination confidence and ability are.

(5.) PORTER GOES WITH ILLINI

took the head coaching job at the University of Illinois. The Huskies' former head man led his young men to two straight state team titles ('71, '72).

(6.) KRONFORD'S GREATEST

Forest View's John Kronford was paid a high compliment after his final varsity football game. "There's no doubt about it, he's a great back," said his head coach, Fred Lussow. John had to be the greatest for he eclipsed the Mid-Suburban League's all-time career rushing record of Conant's Jim McGraw in just two seasons, 1650 to 1603.

(7.) REBSAMEN — NATIONAL CHAMP

Trudi Rebsamen of Prospect High School enjoyed the finest track season of any area youngster, culminating with her National Amateur Athletic Union sponsored Junior Olympics championship at the University of Michigan. This 15-year-old won the gold medal, the 440-yard dash and as a member of the 440-yard relay team.

(8.) SIEMIANOWSKI STARS

Gymnasts are perfectionists. Elk Grove's Bob Siemianowski is no exception. "I didn't do my best," he said after turning in a near perfect 9.0 on the side horse for the state title. "But then I guess I'm never really satisfied with myself."

(9.) HOROWITZ — MAT CHAMP

"When you can't eat, you've got to just put your mind on something else," said Jack Horowitz, Maine North's 98-pound wrestler. This Norseman took his food frustration out on the opposition, winning 34 of 36 matches and the state title. He became the first state champion in the young history of his school.

(10.) SALERNO — SWIM STAR

"It's nice," said St. Viator's Mike Salerno, referring to his standing on the victory pyramid after winning the state backstroke title. "But it would have been nicer if I'd have had a good time." Despite being slowed by a cold, he became the first Lion swimmer to ever win at the state meet.

INDIVIDUALS

- Hersey's Mark Zakula becomes all-time MSL total offense leader.
- St. Viator's Ralph Bosch named to All-American grid team.
- Arlington's Bob Walther retires — Mid-Suburban's winningest coach (36-11-2).
- Rolling Meadows' John Sloan eclipses 60-foot shot put barrier.
- Local food store employee — Pat Cassidy — rides bike to California.
- Inverness Tom Origer named owner of Fire football team.

TEAM

- Harper takes second straight Region IV wrestling trophy.
- Fremd's cross country team wins MSL, district and sectional titles.
- Forest View captures first MSL baseball crown.
- Conant shocks powerful East Leyden in basketball.
- Four area gymnasts — Bob Siemianowski, Scott Phillips, Geoff Rieder and John Golbeck — named to All-American team.
- Arlington tennis team's MSL undefeated, untied record now 68 straight.
- St. Viator's swim team wins first district title.

Top 10 'team' stories:

(1.) PRINCIPALS OKAY PLAYOFFS

"It's a step in the right direction," said one area football coach after hearing that the state's principals had voted overwhelmingly (400 to 200) in favor of playoffs. The system — which will crown state football champions instead of having a mythical title determine it — will begin next fall.

(2.) LEGION PROGRAM ENDS

An internal squabble in Arlington Heights Merle-Guild Post 208 has forced the termination of participation in the local summer legion baseball program. This meant an end to 18 years of coaching by Lloyd Meyer.

(3.) HERSEY WINS SUPER BOWL

"We came a long way, didn't we?" said Joe Gliwa, who ended some personal frustration when his Hersey football team captured its first Super Bowl game after two years of failure. The Huskies defeated Elk Grove, 30-16, for the Mid-Suburban League title.

(3.) HUSKIES' 2ND CUP

Winning in all three seasons, John Hersey High School captured its second straight Paddock Cup — symbol of Mid-Suburban League varsity sports supremacy. The Huskie coaches of Athletic Director Dick Kinneman have dominated MSL sports the past two years since Arlington had won four straight cups.

(5.) CARDS TAKE TITLE

Jim Merkel and Jon Paczkowski of Arlington High School won the Illinois state prep doubles championship. It was the first time since 1965 that any local players captured the No. 1 trophy. Merkel, a senior, and Paczkowski, a junior, beat Highland Park by a pair of 6-4 scores for the title. The win was all the more impressive because Paczkowski had been ill with the flu several days.

(6.) ELK GROVE 2ND IN STATE

Perennial powerhouse Hinsdale Central naturally was first again, but Elk Grove was a close second. The Grenadiers of Coach Fred Gaines led the Mid-Suburban League's top trio in placing 2-3-4.

(6.) HERSEY STOPS STREAK

Hersey repaid an old debt for another Arlington school when it snapped the 49-meet win streak by Hinsdale Central. The Huskies won 151.56 to 148.17. Earlier in the Red Devils' streak, they ended Arlington High's 60-meet mark.

(8.) ELK GROVE SETS MARK

Picking up where two Super Bowl powerhouse teams left off, a good Elk Grove football team won its first three games for a winning streak of 17. Coach Don Schnake's team lost its shot for an 18th win, but managed to set an area mark in consecutive victories.

(9.) WEST IN OVERTIME

Maine West's football team became the first area participant in an overtime game. The Warriors needed two overtimes to dramatically defeat Maine South, 21-14. They shared the honor of being involved in a tiebreaker along with two teams from downstate.

(10.) BUFFALO GROVE — STATE SOFTBALL CHAMPS

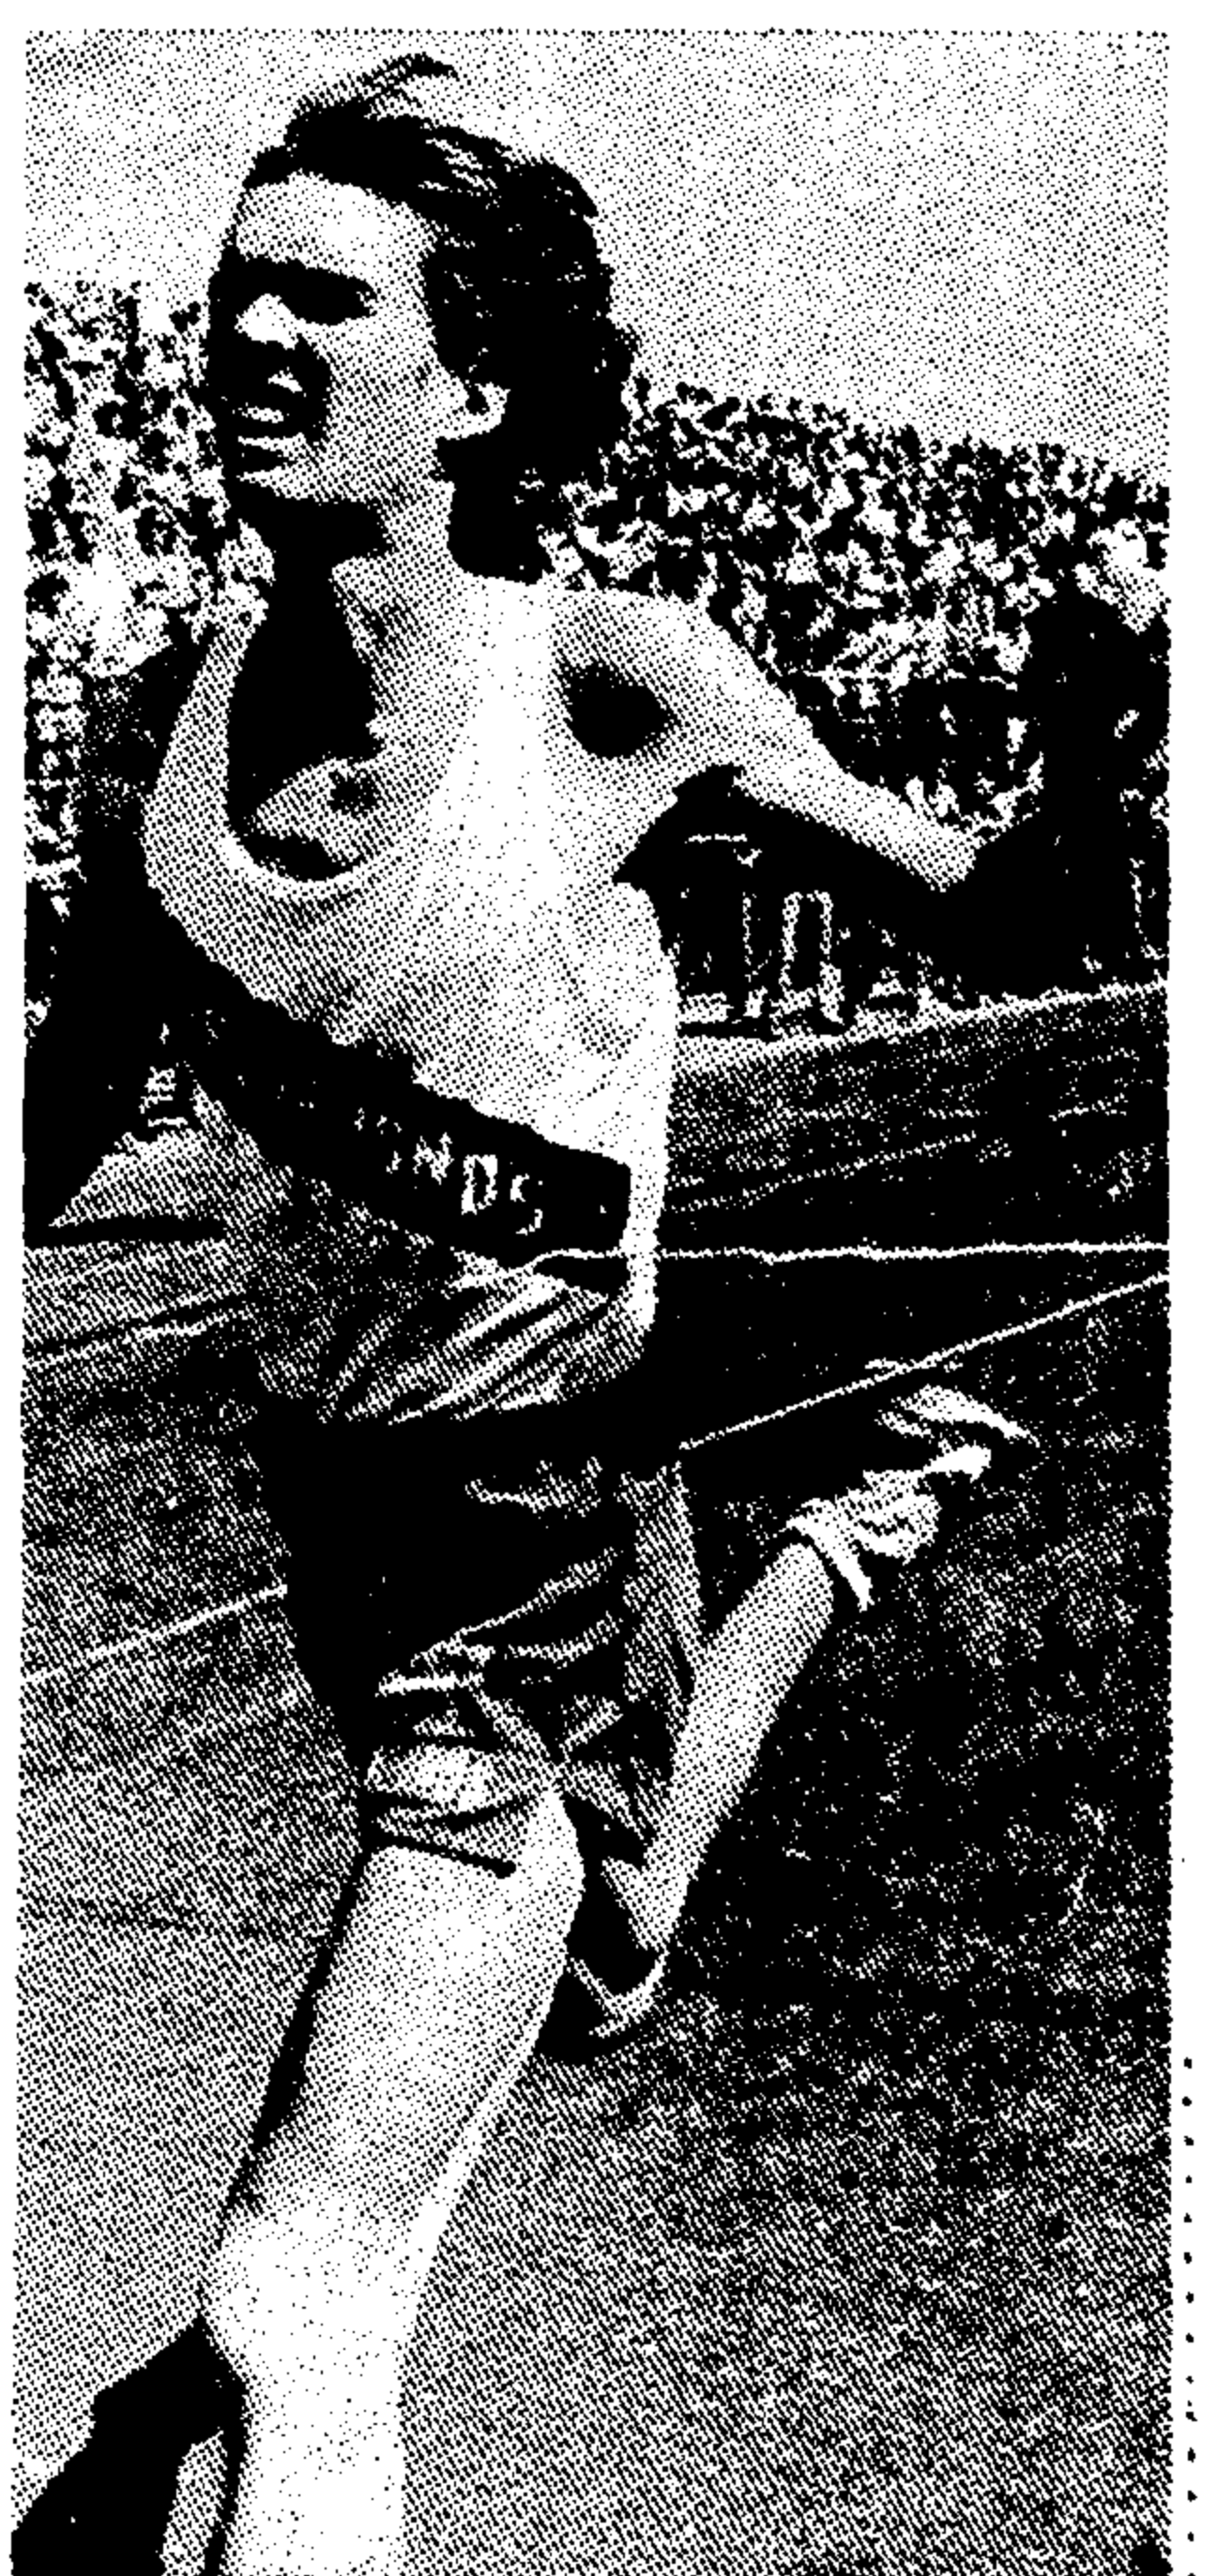

The Buffalo Grove Bruins captured the state 16-inch softball title at Des Plaines with an 11-6 victory over Berwyn. The Bruins raced out to a 6-1 lead after three innings and coasted to their first state championship.

MIKE GODAWA, Rolling Meadows' superb all-around gymnast, demonstrates his state championship form.

Prospect's Rick Fox soars to first state swim title ever by a Mid-Suburban League athlete.

CRAIG VIRGIN breaks the tape in his national two-mile record run at Prospect High School.

Hoffman hockey loss on review

Glenbard South defeated Hoffman Estates, 6-5, in a recent West Suburban High School Hockey League game, although the game will be reviewed by the league board.

The Hoffman team loaned back-up goalie Paul South to the Glenbard South team when their net-minder failed to show. The Hawks led 3-2 midway through the game, but Glenbard South poured it on to win.

Goal scorers for Hoffman were Bob Payson, Tim Harkness, Brian Schumel, Joe Ciccia, and Dan Weiss.

The Hawks are now 5-6 in National Division play, 5½ games behind unbeaten, division-leading Addison Trail. Their next league game is scheduled for 6 p.m. Jan. 5 against Downers Grove North at the Downers Grove Ice Arena.

Energy Shortage Needs A Vacation

It has been brought to our attention that camping can conserve energy. Gasoline is not our only energy problem. Research tells us that the average American household uses about 23 kilowatt hours of electricity and 6 therms of natural gas a day.

Your recreational vehicle uses only 5 kilowatt hours of electricity and less than half a therm of LP gas a day. Most families have 2 or more cars that total around 300 miles per week; a family on a camping vacation uses only one car. Most vacations are spent no farther than 300 miles from home.

The family that camps saves close to 80% over the amount of energy they normally consume at home.

There are many fine camping areas close to home and things of interest to see. Throughout this column Freund Campers Inc. will keep you informed about camping areas, points of interest, and answer questions relating to camping - campers - accessories - service problems, etc.

If you have any questions - let us hear from you.

Meet Wilfred Hetzel: hero of the freak shot circuit

by JOAN RYAN

Wilfred Hetzel, who bills himself as "The Freak Shot Specialist," was the half-time entertainment at a junior high faculty basketball game in Olney, Md., recently.

WILFRED HETZEL

It was hardly an ideal audience. Hordes of kids were migrating back and forth to the coke machine and the donut stand. Knots of self-conscious cheerleaders were combing their hair and rustling their pom poms. The younger set was playing chase in the halls, oblivious to the faculty game, much less the half-time entertainment.

But Wilfred Hetzel had two things going for him, not the least of which was his startlingly unathletic appearance. He really looks like a Wilfred Hetzel, and that got the youngsters' attention right away.

A shimmer of laughter surfaced as Hetzel shuffled up to the foul line, his body bent under the weight of the basketball. He is 63 years old, but he doesn't look his age. He looks much older.

His basketball shorts billowed pathetically around his toothpick legs; his shins were badly bruised and scarred. Each knobby knee was patched with two enormous band-aids, now peeling and grubby. Black socks had begun to withdraw into his white hightop shoes. He ran one slightly shaking hand through his thinning white hair, carefully brushed in a military crew cut, and took aim.

Swish. Swish. One after another, his underhand free throws fell silently through the hoop. That was the second thing Wilfred Hetzel had going for him: he produced what he said he would pro-

When the final shot, a drop kick from 30 feet out, sank, the kids cheered wildly. Wilfred Hetzel, a crepe-skinned old timer, was their hero.

Hetzel has spent the better part of four decades stumping the country to perform for just such hard-to-win audiences. He has appeared in 48 states, mapping out a schedule as he goes. Always prepared, he wears his uniform under his clothing, hustling to make as many as three appearances in one day. His usual fee is around $40.

"I missed the Metro in Wilmington, Del., this morning, trying to make Riverdale, Md.," he said ruefully. "I was standing on the center platform and they didn't open the doors on that side."

In some ways, life has treated Wilfred Hetzel with the same disrespect as Wilmington's Metroliner. As a teenager in Melrose, Minn., he was taunted by his basketball teammates (they stole his uniform twice) and was cut from the team despite his free throwing accuracy. When he bragged that he had completed 98 out of 100, no one in Melrose believed him.

Rejected by his team and his town, he became a loner. He perfected his narrow art, adding the trick shots to break the monotony. Eventually he held more than 27 records in trick shooting: 144 straight on one foot; 35 straight bounce bank shots; 92 out of 100 on one foot and blindfolded.

That last record put him in Ripley's "Believe It or Not." "I'm going to tell you a secret," he said, leaning closer to me. "The Ripley people said I did it one handed too, and that's not correct. I've never told anyone before because I didn't want people to lose faith in 'Believe It or Not!'"

Despite Mr. Ripley's small goof, Wilfred Hetzel remains virtually unbelievable. He admitted to only two appearances on the court as a team player. In the first, he drew two technical fouls for not checking in; the other time, he was sent in to shoot two free throws. "I only made one," the record holder said, sounding only a trifle crushed.

Now retired and living in Arlington, Va., Hetzel, a bachelor, devotes full time to barnstorming the high school circuit. But times have changed. "I had to eliminate my 70 foot over-the-rafters shot because my sciatica bothers me," he said, rubbing his shoulder. "And some of the longer bounce shots had to go when I had part of my lung removed for TB. But I keep busy," Hetzel said with a smile. "I keep busy."

Midwest Boat Show coming Feb. 15-24

The Fifth Annual Midwest Boat Show will be held from Feb. 15 through 24 at the Arlington Park Exposition Center, Edward P. Hansen, president of the show, announced today.

The first boat show to be held in this area in 1974, the event is expected to attract more than 90,000 visitors during its 10-day run at the 125,000-square-foot exhibition area, according to Hansen.

"Boating buffs and outdoor aficionados will get a head start this year in previewing the latest in recreational equipment for the 1974 season," he said.

More than 100 exhibitors from the Midwest including many from the Central Marine Chamber of Commerce will display the finest in pleasure boats, houseboats, sailboats, ice boats, canoes and rowboats, inflatable and plastic rafts, pontoon cruisers, paddle boats, cabin cruisers, and boating accessories, he added.

He pointed out that upwards of 46,000,000 persons participated in recreational boating last year and spent more than 3 billion 900 million dollars for new and used boats, motors, accessories, safety equipment, fuel and related items.

Some of the most popular items on display, besides skis and fishing equipment, will be compasses and speedometers, ship-to-shore radios, safety lights, spotlights, depth finders, air horns, and fish locators.

Fishermen will be looking for outriggers, downriggers and fish detection gear. For the adventurous there will be underwater diving and photography equipment, Hansen said.

There are more than 9,200,000 pleasure craft of all types afloat on U. S. waters, Hansen reported, which are broken down as follows: 5,400,000 outboard boats in use with 7,400,000 outboard motors; 690,000 sailboats; 2,400,000 rowboats, canoes, dinghies, prams and other miscellaneous craft; and 700,000 inboard motor boats. In addition there are 3,790,000 boat trailers and 5,900 marinas, boat yards and yacht clubs in the United States.

Families are expected to attend the Show from the north, northwest and western Chicago suburban areas as well as from throughout northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa, and northern Indiana, Hansen said.

A variety of door prizes, ranging from an all-expense paid trip to Disney World to resort trips to other cities, will be given to lucky registrants.

The annual nautical fashion show, and other daily activities, will be special added attractions.

The Arlington Park Exhibition Center is located near the Northwest Tollway (U.S. 90) and Routes 53 and 14 and is easily accessible from all sections of Chicagoland. The Center is serviced by the North Western Railroad.

Ask these 5 questions where you save. If they answer "no" to any of them, here's an Easy-Way-Out.

On your next visit to your bank or savings and loan, make a point of asking these five questions.

If you get one "no" answer, you should be saving at First Federal.

We have an Easy-Way-Out if withdrawing your money presents a problem.

It's First Federal's painless new way to move your money from your present bank or savings and loan into a high-paying First Federal account. With our Easy-Way-Out, you just give us your name, address and phone number and let First Federal handle the details. It's that easy.

First, ask these questions.

1 Do you pay the highest interest rates on both Savings Certificates and Passbook accounts?

☐ YES ☐ NO By law, banks can't. While some savings and loans won't. First Federal, on the other hand, pays the highest available interest rates on all accounts—5¼% on Passbook, up to 7½% on Certificates.

2 Will you pay me 7½% interest on a Savings Certificate?

☐ YES ☐ NO Again by law, banks are limited to 7¼%. Some savings and loans don't even match bank rates.

At First Federal, 4-year, $1,000 Saver's Certificates now pay 7½%. And earn a full 7.9% annually when interest is left to compound.

If you see higher advertised rates, here's why: (1) a minimum deposit of $100,000 or more is required. (2) The account isn't insured.

3 Is $1,000 your minimum deposit to earn 7½% interest?

☐ YES ☐ NO A lot of savings institutions have a $5,000 minimum on higher-paying Certificates. Not First Federal. Any account, even 7½% Certificates, can be opened with $1,000. While just $1.00 opens a 3-month, 5¾% Certificate.

4 Can I handle all of my business at more than one location?

☐ YES ☐ NO Very few banks or savings and loans have more than one full-service location. First Federal has three. So you can handle all of your savings business at any of three convenient locations.

5 Can you offer my money the security of one of the state's largest financial institutions?

☐ YES ☐ NO At First Federal your money is backed by the full assets of the state's largest savings and loan. In fact, of the three largest financial institutions in Illinois, measured by savings deposits, there are two banks and First Federal.

Take Either Easy-Way-Out.

A substantial interest penalty is required for early withdrawal of Saver's Certificates.

Her homemade bread has nourishing bonus

by LOIS SEILER

If you're resolved to begin the new year right by preparing nourishing foods for your family, you can start with the staff of life — bread! A wheat germ bread is a favorite of Rev. and Mrs. Carl A. Kalkwarf, who find that nutritional foods are an asset in providing them with the energy needed for their full schedule.

In the two years since the Lord of Life Lutheran Church was founded in Schaumburg and Rev. Kalkwarf assumed his duties as minister, the congregation has grown by leaps and bounds and a sanctuary was built.

During this period, Faythe Kalkwarf's main concern has been helping her husband. She does the church's secretarial work, plays the organ for services, directs the choir and participates in Bible study groups. While these activities may sound demanding enough, energetic Faythe doesn't stop there. Because music has always been a vital part of her life, she teaches piano and organ and is a member of West Suburban Illinois State Music Teachers' Association.

"I like to keep busy," Faythe explained, so she also finds time for bread baking, cooking special meals and entertaining friends in the congregation and numerous out-of-town guests.

Without going to extremes, Faythe emphasizes health foods and tries to eliminate refined sugars and white flour from their diet. Sweets are minimized, while cereal-type foods such as granola and sunflower seed cookies have become more prominent in meal planning.

She worked on both a bread recipe and a pancake recipe, substituting honey for sugar and wheat germ for a portion of the flour. Both are nutritional as well as tasty. If time is a factor, the amount of yeast in the bread recipe may be doubled to hasten the rising process and it will turn out just as well, according to Faythe. Or the dough may be refrigerated before the first rising and baked the next day.

THE WHEAT GERM is undistinguishable in the pancake recipe, but the nourishment is there. Faythe always includes blueberries in the batter, which she and her husband pick in Indiana in the summer months and freeze in quantity. The pancakes are thick, light and cake-like in texture and always tender.

Rice Krispies and dates are included among the ingredients of another of Faythe's specialties, Strawberry Cookies.

However, these cookies are not especially designed for their nutritional value, but primarily as a decorative touch to a cookie assortment.

The mixture is formed into the shape of strawberries and rolled in red colored sugar. Leaves are made with decorator frosting. These cookies will freeze nicely according to Faythe.

The Kalkwarfs have three children: a son, Jon, who is a freshman at Carthage College, two married daughters, Mrs. Gerald (Betty) Baldner of Elkader, Iowa, and Mrs. Fredrick (Karen) Villonen of Buffalo, New York, and three grandchildren.

WHEAT GERM BREAD

2½ cups warm water
1 package dry yeast
2 tablespoons honey
½ cup instant nonfat dry milk
1/3 cup cooking oil
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup raw or toasted wheat germ
6¼ cups unbleached flour
Pour warm water into a large mixer bowl. Sprinkle yeast on top and allow to soften. Add honey, dry milk, oil, salt, wheat germ and 3 cups flour. Beat three minutes at medium speed of mixer. Add remaining flour, mixing by hand. When you can hold your hand on the dough for 30 seconds without having the dough stick to your hand, you have enough flour. Turn onto floured surface and knead two minutes.

Place in a warm, oiled bowl, turning once to coat dough with oil. Cover with plastic wrap and set in a warm place to rise until double, about one hour.

Punch down and form into loaves. You may use 3 pans, size 7½ by 3½ inches, or 2 pans, size 8½ by 4½ inches. Brush loaves lightly with oil, cover loosely with plastic wrap, and let rise until double, about 45 minutes. Bake in a 375 degree oven 35 to 40 minutes. Brush with oil or butter after baking.

If you are in a hurry, you may double the amount of yeast and the bread will turn out just as well. Or dough may be refrigerated before the first rising and baked the next day.

BLUEBERRY WHEAT GERM PANCAKES

1½ cups sour milk or buttermilk
1 egg
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 tablespoon honey
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup toasted wheat germ
1 cup frozen, fresh or canned blueberries, well-drained
Mix sour milk, egg, oil and honey together. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda and salt into liquid ingredients. Add wheat germ and blend well. Fold in berries. (If frozen berries are used, do not defrost them or they will turn the batter blue.)

Use about ¼ cup batter per pancake and bake on a hot griddle, turning once. Yield: about 16 pancakes.

STRAWBERRY COOKIES

1 tablespoon butter
2 eggs

1 cup granulated sugar
1 pound chopped dates
3 cups Rice Krispies
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of salt
Red sugar
Prepared cake and cookie decorator green frosting

Melt butter in skillet. Add eggs and sugar which have been beaten together until light and fluffy. Over low heat, stir rapidly but do not boil. Add chopped dates and cook until thick. Cool slightly. Then add Rice Krispies, nuts, vanilla and salt.

Form into the shape of strawberries with your hands. Roll in red sugar. Form leaves using leaf tip with decorator frosting. When firm, store cookies in lightly-covered container with waxed paper between the layers. Makes about 50.

CHUCK'S MEAT MARKET

1205 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights
Rt. 83 at Hintz Rd. 537-1144

Although the average cost of ground beef remained stable last week, other meat prices showed substantial increases. Average price for pork chops reflected the largest increase since Dec. 21, 13 cents. A 10-cent increase in the cost of bacon was noted along with a four-cent increase for ocean perch fillets. Whole fryer chicken decreased five cents, according to the survey on Friday.

American processed cheese decreased three cents in the same period, but the price of margarine rose five cents.

Lettuce, which declined 12 cents, should be a good buy this week. Except for a three-cent decline in celery, other fruit and vegetable prices remained fairly stable.

Because of the holiday, prices from four area supermarkets were obtained on Dec. 28 rather than on Monday. Recorded prices indicate the average cost of products.

Hot and hearty dishes warm cold winter days

On wintry days a hearty and hot beef dish is always welcome. Preparing these, I invariably use a heavy Dutch oven for cooking and beer as an ingredient.

The Dutch oven is ideal for browning and possesses a heavy lid for long cooking over low heat which produces a fine product. Beer has the values of increasing flavor, especially in beef and pork, and also serves the important role of tenderizing.

Two classic recipes are European in origin, one Belgian, the other German. The first is Boeuf à la Flamande or more often served in American restaurants as Carbonnades à la Flamande.

To serve eight or for two meals since this dish seems to gain flavor on reheating, buy four pounds of first-cut beef brisket, eye of round or lean chuck. In the latter two cases you'll need the beef to be at least an inch thick. Cut beef into 16 pieces.

In the Dutch oven brown 4 cups sliced onions in 4 tablespoons butter. Reserve onions and brown the meat on all sides in the same butter. When meat is browned, sprinkle with flour, add the cooked onions, 2 cups beer, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 bay leaves, ½ teaspoon thyme, and 3 tablespoons minced parsley. Cover and cook over low heat or in a low oven for 3 hours until meat is very tender. Serve with a baked or oven-browned potato and a green vegetable.

THE GERMAN dish, termed Munich Beef, requires marination which lengthens preparation time. To serve six, purchase 3 pounds lean round or rump steak and cut it into two-inch cubes. Put into a glass or enameled pan and cover with a marinade made by mixing 3 cups beef, 1 cup minced onions, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper. Marinate overnight.

When ready to cook, remove meat and save the marinade. Melt 3 tablespoons drippings or shortening in the Dutch oven and brown meat cubes on all sides.

Now add the reserved marinade and 2 carrots, scraped and sliced. Cover and cook over low heat or in a low oven for 2½ hours. When meat is tender remove to a hot platter. Add to the gravy 1 tablespoon of flour mixed with a little water, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind, 2 tablespoons currant jelly, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Continue cooking and stirring until added ingredients are well blended into gravy (about 5 minutes), then pour over meat and serve very hot.

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carloti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $60,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING to McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Moonlighting policemen do it mostly for profit

by TOM VON MALDER

In Wheeling, some are pumping gas. In Mount Prospect, they are standing around in department stores, while in Buffalo Grove, they are walking through construction sites.

They all are moonlighting policemen, whether their after-hours employment is arranged through their respective police departments or on their own. Mostly, they are working for extra money, although some feel jobs such as department store detective are good training for their police career.

All three departments permit policemen to work extra jobs and, although departmental regulations vary, each insists that the extra job not interfere with their police duties.

Lt. Ronald Nelson estimates that 5 of 25 men in the Wheeling Police Department have outside part-time jobs. He said he knows of three who pump gas and two who drive cement trucks for a local construction firm.

For any "police-related, guard-type duty," Nelson said an outside employer must contract for a policeman's service with the Village of Wheeling. He said this is done so that the policeman's regular pension and similar benefits and insurance will still cover him while he is on outside guard duty.

THE GUARD CATEGORY of jobs covers department stores, rock concerts, circuses, Christmas duty at the post office and the like.

"We contemplated forbidding all outside jobs," Nelson said, "but we felt it would be unfair." Rules were drawn up after other area departments' policies were investigated. These rules were then approved by the policemen.

As in Buffalo Grove and Mount Prospect, Wheeling policemen are forbidden to sell liquor or work in an establishment that does, including operations like bowling alleys with lounges. Wheeling police chief Peter Gutilla also must approve any outside job.

Nelson said Gutilla is "pretty liberal" about what jobs the men can take. Freshman policemen are "highly discouraged" from taking an outside job because it might interfere with their training, Nelson added.

IN MOUNT PROSPECT, the situation is more liberal. There is no hour limitation on outside jobs (such as the 20-hour limitation in Wheeling) and the police chief does not have to approve the job, although he is informed of the outside employment.

"It hasn't been a problem," Police Chief Bert Giddens said. "There is no order on hours yet."

Although the exact number of Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight was not available, one patrolman, who works part-time as a guard in a store at the Randhurst Shopping Center, guessed that about 90 per cent of the force at one time or another moonlights.

As in Wheeling, extra-hour assignments at sporting events, circuses and similar activities are handled on a first-come, first-serve basis with the employer hiring through the village. Department store guard duty is handled strictly between the employers and the

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Account Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Account Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of Pik-Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Cops moonlight — for the money

policemen, however.

Most Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight do so as a store detective, usually at Randhurst, because it is the biggest shopping center in the area. However, the policemen have worked at other stores, particularly when they first open and have not as yet hired their own full-time security force. The men either can wear their uniforms or act as undercover agents.

BUFFALO GROVE policemen pick up most of their extra jobs by guarding construction sites. The builders contract with the village for the men. Some men work at banks too.

Chief Harry Walsh, who does not have to approve such jobs, said he knows of no

FISH volunteers sought by group

FISH, a volunteer service organization, is seeking volunteers to provide transportation, hot meals or babysitting services to those who need them.

The local FISH organization, serving Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights, recently has been handling an increased number of calls with a dwindling number of volunteers.

Persons who are interested in donating one day a month or more should call 382-2300 or write to THE FISH, Box 158, Prospect Heights, Ill. 60070.

Burglars 'catch' $700 in fishing gear

Burglars went fishing over the weekend in Buffalo Grove. Their "catch" included $700 worth of fishing equipment and a suitcase from a storage locker in the basement of 655 Grove Dr., police said.

The "tackled" equipment was owned by Arthur R. Brady, of that address. Burglars also took some tools belonging to Edward J. Huetson, 645 Grove Dr. The tools were in a workshop area near the boiler room, police added.

one in the department who has a non-guard-type of job, such as working in a gas station.

All of the policemen who moonlight and talked with The Herald admitted they do it mainly for the money, particularly at holiday time. "It pays for Christmas. It makes it a lot easier and a lot happier," as one man put it.

One policeman said he is down to being a store guard one day a week, although he had worked more when he had his children's medical and educational bills to pay for. The extra cash appears welcome in times of financial stress.

Yet a couple of men said they felt acting as a store detective helps them sharpen their investigative techniques and awareness. All agreed that being a policeman, however, is first.

Man, 22, severely burned in motel fire

A 22-year-old Wheeling man was seriously burned Tuesday morning at the Wishing Well Motel, 397 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Police said Howard Fallat, 1409 S. Wolf Rd., suffered second- and third-degree burns over 30 to 40 per cent of his body.

Fallat was in fair condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital, where he had been taken by Wheeling firemen.

An investigation of the 1:38 a.m. fire still is being conducted, according to police. They said Gary E. Firek, whose parents live at 445 Lauren Ln., Buffalo Grove, was with Fallat in the motel room when the fire occurred. However, police said Firek could remember nothing other than the two allegedly drank a bottle of whiskey earlier.

Firemen said a mattress was the only property burned and the fire had been put out before an ambulance was called. No fire equipment was called to the scene.

Police said a container of lighter fluid and a cigarette lighter were found next to the bed.

Firek was not injured.

School district names science coordinator

John Cerman, a former Geneva high school science instructor, has been named the science coordinator for School Dist. 21.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Cerman will work with science teachers in the district, instructing them in new methods of teaching science and provide materials.

Hired at a salary of $15,000 by the school board last week, Cerman will begin his duties immediately.

Two school buses off Monday, Tuesday

Parents of children riding two School Dist. 96 buses to and from St. Mary's School in Buffalo Grove will have to provide other transportation Monday, Jan. 7 and Tuesday, Jan. 8.

Because Dist. 96 classes will not resume until next Wednesday, Jan. 9, buses No. 141 and 142 will not be running those two days.

Bus service to St. Mary's School will resume Wednesday.

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carotti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING TO McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Cost of sidewalk 27.6 per cent under estimate

The last chapter in the saga of the Wolf Road sidewalk is about to be completed and for property owners along the 6,000-foot stretch it is a happy ending.

Now that all the invoices are in, city officials have learned that the cost of the project, which runs along the west side of Wolf between Central Road and Princeton Street, came in 27.6 per cent lower than original estimates.

The six property owners who, with the city, are paying for the sidewalk, will receive revised assessment bills if the council approves the measure at its Jan. 7 meeting.

"This is really a nice present," City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach said yesterday. "Usually when people receive revised bills the cost goes up, not down."

THE ESTIMATED cost of the sidewalk installation was $33,778.95; the new total is $24,456.03. City Engineer Robert Bowen said the savings came because the city hauled fill for the sidewalks from other projects. Although part of the work was contracted out, some of it was done by Public Works Department crews, affording an additional savings, he said.

Assistant City Comptroller John Raycraft said reprocessed bills are being prepared now. The largest property owner along the street will save more than $3,000 on the new bill. M. L. Moehling, 395 N. Eighth Ave., will be assessed for $7,888.15 compared with an original cost of $10,480.

Other bills will be sent to William Tagge, 1416 Ashland Ave., $1,604 (compared with $2,216); Sylvia Tagge and George Gniot, 1416 Ashland Ave., $1,056 (compared with $1,459); Harold Kunkel, 575 Berkshire Lane, $865 ($1,194); Joseph Miller, Fontana, Wis., $2,262 ($3,124); Pierce Wynn, Lincolnwood, $572 ($790) and $514 ($710); and Phillips Petroleum Co., $1,025 ($1,416).

THE SIDEWALK, completed in November, was a controversial topic for nearly two years. Parents of children attending Cumberland and Chippewa schools protested that their children did not have a safe route to school because of the lack of sidewalks along Wolf Road.

After aldermanic arguing on whether the sidewalk would be a waste of money, the council approved a "short form assessment" to finance the project in the summer of 1972.

A gravel path was laid last winter along the east side of the road to provide a temporary path for children. At that time Bowen told the council winter weather wouldn't allow for a fill to be put down on the west side where the sidewalk was eventually laid.

The gravel sidewalk still is there. According to Bowen it will remain until the property is developed. "Someday that area will be improved by whoever develops it. Then they will probably put in a more permanent sidewalk," he said.

Soft drink machine taken from station

Thieves stole a soft drink vending machine from outside a Brunswick Shell station, 2100 Touhy Ave., Des Plaines, police said.

The machine, worth $300, contained an unknown amount of change and cans of soft drinks.

Police said the thieves struck while the station was closed for the New Year holidays.

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Account Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Account Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectability on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE of the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

Vote coming for new Maryville school building?

by LUISA GINETTI

A referendum to raise additional money to build the new Maryville school on the Maryville Academy grounds may be in the offing for voters in Dist. 26.

The money would be used to improve the five-acre land parcel at the academy, on River Road north of Central Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township. The land has been deemed unsuitable for building by the Illinois Capital Development Board.

Dist. 26 Supt. John Fridlund said the ICDB has estimated the cost of improving the land at almost $70,000. "It would be difficult for us to pay anything like that with the current funds unless we cut back drastically in other areas," Fridlund said a referendum to raise the money may be one alternative if the school board decides to stick with the selection of the Maryville site.

"The question facing us now is whether or not the expense of improving the land merits keeping the site as our choice," Fridlund said yesterday.

THE IDEA OF HOLDING a referendum to raise money to improve the site has also been suggested by Karen Zuck, a member of the Citizens' Action Committee, which reviewed and proposed selection of the academy site.

"I don't know of any other alternatives as far as other sites are concerned because the committee checked out every available piece of property," Mrs. Zuck said yesterday. "I think all that is needed is to replace the fill at the site to make it suitable for building and I foresee a referendum to raise the money because I don't think the board has the funds."

Mrs. Zuck said she is irritated that the board failed to discuss the problem at its last meeting even though board members were aware of the ICDB's opinion of the land site. "It seems to be one thing after another with this. It's almost like they don't want to build the school there even though it's the best site for a school."

IDYLL NIPPER, another member of the Citizens' Action Committee, would not comment on the ICDB's memorandum on the site until she has read the report and seen the engineer's study of the soil.

"I'm sure the committee will meet again and reevaluate the situation," Miss Nipper says. "We are limited in our choice of sites because of the cost of land and we have already ruled out the junior high site (which was originally chosen as the building site) because of a lack of space and a need for a retention basin there."

Miss Nipper says she hopes the school board will have complete information on the matter available at its meeting Tuesday night.

Fridlund said the matter will receive high priority at the board meeting but he did not know what action, if any, would be taken in terms of solving the problem.

THE NEW MARYVILLE school is to be built with $800,000 in state funds from the ICDB. Of that amount, $75,000 has been earmarked for land purchase. No amount of the state allocation has been set aside for land improvement.

The new school was to be ready for use by September, but due to delays in site selection, district officials said this deadline will be impossible to meet.

The local scene

Nursing courses

Five new nursing refresher courses will be offered by MONACEP, (Maine-Oakton-Niles Adult and Continuing Education Program) when it starts its winter term Jan. 28.

The nursing courses are among more than 700 classes which MONACEP will offer during its winter term according to Alexander Kruzel, director of MONACEP. Other new classes available will be courses in biology, cartooning and animation, administration of criminal justice, dough art, literature of the Bible and industrial fasteners.

MONACEP catalogs were mailed to all residents of Maine and Niles townships as well as interested individuals in neighboring areas during the last week of December.

The nursing courses are open to practical or registered nurses who plan to return to active nursing or who wish to take required state examinations. Classes will be held at Oakton Community College, Maine South High School, Maine West High School and Niles West High School. Courses include medications training, hospital infection control, intravenous therapy, basic cardiology for nurses and management of nursing care.

For information about registration or courses offered by MONACEP, consult the MONACEP catalog for winter 1974 or call 696-3600.

What's next?

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of P.K. Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

PTA notes

The new PTO Board at Friendship Junior High School met recently to formulate plans for the remainder of the school year. Elected officers of the PTO are Maureen Cain, president; Gerry Francione, vice president; Patricia Spilotro, secretary, and Donald and Rosemary Argus, treasurer.

Preschool signups will open next week

Registration for a special preschool program for children in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will start next week at various locations throughout the district.

The program, sponsored by the Parents' Council on Early Education, will be for those children who will be 5 years old by Dec. 1, 1974. Fee for the two-month program, which will run in April and May, is $7 per child.

Taught by volunteer "teacher-moms," the preschool will stress language, socialization and motor skills, according to Nadia Underwood of the parents' council. The preschoolers will attend the school where they'll start kindergarten next year.

A COPY OF THE child's birth certificate and the fee should be brought to the registration, according to Mrs. Underwood. The schedule for registration is as follows:

- Preschoolers who will attend Grant Wood, Clearmont, Salt Creek, Ridge, Mark Hopkins and Rupley Schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd. on Jan. 8, starting at 8 p.m.

- Preschoolers who will attend Byrd and Cook schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Lively Junior High, 999 Leicester Rd. starting at 8 p.m. Jan. 9.

- Preschoolers who will attend Jay and Forest View Schools in Mount Prospect and Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights will register Jan. 7 at Holmes Junior High, 1900 W. Lomquist Blvd., Mount Prospect starting at 8 p.m.

- Preschoolers who will attend Frost School in Mount Prospect and Brentwood, Devonshire, Einstein, and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines will register at 8 p.m. Jan. 7 at Dempster Junior High, 420 Dempster St. in Mount Prospect.

History will tumble along with church

by JOHN MAES

The remnants of a long and diverse chronicle will tumble today when demolition work begins on the old St. Mary's Catholic Church building at Prairie and Pearson streets.

The building, which for most of its 50-year life served as a house of worship for St. Mary's congregation, is being razed to make way for a 236-car parking lot as part of city redevelopment plans.

It has been used for the past two years as a youth center since the parish community moved to the new church at 794 Pearson.

Built in the early 1920s, the structure first saw service as the Des Plaines Lanes bowling alley. Church services were being held at St. Mary's original Des Plaines location across the street — now being used as a parish rectory.

Mayor Herbert Behrel said he used to bowl at the old alley. "It was small, only about six lanes, but it also had four or five pool and billiard tables."

THE BOWLING ALLEY did a thriving business in the 1920s, but began to experience financial difficulties after the end of Prohibition.

The demise was due largely to a city ordinance forbidding the sale of liquor in an establishment a certain distance from a church. When the bowling alley bar closed, it was the beginning of the end.

The old bowling alley was to become the new St. Mary's when the financially-troubled owners sold out to the church for about $10,500, and founding pastor Rev. John Linden celebrated the first mass in the new church in 1936.

Father Linden, who died in 1947, first assumed pastorate of St. Mary's when services were held in a wooden frame mission at Thacker and Cora streets. The mission had been moved to Des Plaines several years before from Arlington Heights after being placed on two railroad flat-cars to make the journey.

Parishioners pitched in to give the old bowling alley an extensive face-lift and the St. Mary's congregation was provided with a house of worship double the size of their old church facility.

"I remember when they bought the bowling alley, the roof had to be raised eight feet for church use," said Anthony Dittmer of Des Plaines, a long-time St. Mary's parishioner.

PLANS ARE currently in the works, however, to provide the faithful of St. Mary's with a remembrance of the old church.

According to Fire Capt. David Wolf, chairman of the Des Plaines Bicentennial Committee, an area of the parking lot will be set aside to house the old church bell.

"We've been in touch with Des Plaines Mall Corp. officials who said when the steeple comes down, the bell will be preserved," he said. "A permanent outdoor monument will be established," as soon as the parking lot is complete.

"It will probably be a little park setting or something with the bell mounted on its original beams." He also said a plaque commemorating the church may be placed by the monument.

Wolf also said the church's priceless stained glass windows will either be re-acquired by the families who donated them to the parish or be put in the current St. Mary's.

Wolf said the windows are valuable because of the craftsmanship with which they were built. "That kind of leaded stained glass is a lost art. They don't make glass like that anymore, and their quality can't be reproduced."

Community Chest tops $40,000, but still short

More than $40,000 has been raised by the Des Plaines Community Chest, yet the local drive still is $15,000 short of the 1973 goal.

Officials are optimistic that the goal will be met as money, pledged on a weekly or quarterly basis, comes in.

The Community Chest "is doing a little better than last year at the same time," according to Madeline Holmes, executive secretary. She said the approximate dollar figure as of yesterday was $40,000, "but we received more money today that I haven't recorded yet."

The 1973 mail appeal brought in $11,206, more than the 1972 mailing, Mrs. Holmes said.

Campaign Chairman Raymond J. Slivka said private donations have averaged $10 a family. "We are very happy people are contributing as much as they are, especially because of the economic situation. I see their donations as a sign of optimism," he said.

MRS. HOLMES added that the Des Plaines schools have done "terrifically" this year. "Someone in the high school district had two free memberships in a tennis club. For every $12 donation, school personnel were given one chance for winning one of the tennis memberships," Mrs. Holmes said.

As a result, she said, both Maine West and Maine North contributed more than in 1972. Maine North's total was $685 and Maine West pulled in $716.

Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62 was another major contributor to the 1973 drive. The Des Plaines Education Assn., representing teachers, collected $2,700. Administration and classified personnel in the district raised $982.

Rosemont man killed crossing Mannheim

A Rosemont man was fatally injured as he tried to cross Mannheim Road and walked into the path of a passing auto.

He was identified as Jose De Santiago, 42, of 6026 Mannheim Rd. He was pronounced dead at Lutheran General Hospital about two hours after the accident occurred at 10:30 p.m. Monday.

According to police reports, De Santiago was crossing Mannheim just north of Higgins when he was struck by the auto driven by a Park Ridge man, James C. Karagas, 56, of 829 Hamlin.

Karagas was ticketed by police for failing to yield to avoid a pedestrian.

Mrs. Holmes said the Community Chest encourages companies to solicit employees and place them on a weekly, monthly or quarterly payroll deduction plan. Firms that cooperated in this area, she said, include Nugent Wenkus, Health Foods Inc., Butler Paper Co. and Valiquet. Another major contributor in the category was IBM Chicago O'Hare Club.

Because money comes in all year, the Community Chest drive never stops, Slivka said. "We have an all-out effort the last three months of the year, but this is a continuing drive that never really stops."

DONATIONS TO the Des Plaines Community Chest are tax deductible. Checks should be mailed to the Chest, P.O. Box 204, Des Plaines, Ill. 60017.

"We know there are still a lot of people who have not donated," said Mrs. Holmes. "If they give at work, they are helping our local effort. But if they didn't give at work we hope they will give here. All of the money donated locally stays here and is used for local agencies."

Thirteen agencies will share the local funds this year. They include the Salvation Army, Service Unit and Community Counseling Center, Des Plaines Girl Scouts, Northwest Homemaker Service, Des Plaines Boy Scouts, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, Northwest Suburban YMCA, Northwest Suburban Aid for the Retarded, Des Plaines Camp Fire Girls, Maine Township Mental Health Association, U.S.O. Inc., Des Plaines Police Boys Club and Northwest Suburban Day Care Center.

RESIDENTS AND businessmen who headed up areas of the 1973 drive include Jim Cass, president of Cass Ford; G. Rex Wilson, president of the Des Plaines National Bank; Mrs. L. E. Copeland, a director of the Northwest Cook County Girl Scout Council; Mrs. Judy Triphahn, president of the Junior Woman's Club of Des Plaines; Mrs. Richard Cameron, Church Women United; Robert A. Armstrong Jr., an attorney with Levander and MacDonald; Eldon Burk, Maine West High School; Tom Holsen, Maine North High School; Harold Harrison, Dist. 62 Des Plaines Education Association; William S. Walker, Dist. 62 administration and classified personnel; R. G. Ayres, Baird and Warner of Des Plaines; and Martin R. Schaefer, City of Des Plaines personnel administrator.

Des Plaines Community Chest President is Artist V. White of Universal Oil Products.

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carioti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING TO McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Holidays bring gifts to village depts., employees

by JERRY THOMAS

Gifts accepted by various departments of the Elk Grove Village government range from bottles of liquor to merchandise books, turkeys, hams and smaller items, according to a report released yesterday by Village Mgr. Charles Willis at the request of The Herald.

A few key men in the building and streets departments each received about $100 worth of Christmas gifts and some received gift certificates valued from $10 to $50.

The 57-member police force shared about $1,500 worth of Christmas gifts with each officer receiving about $25 worth of liquor, turkeys, hams and candy.

THE VILLAGE HAS no policy prohibiting gift acceptance by employees and elected officials. A policy statement, however, does require that all offers of gifts and gratuities worth more than $10 be reported by village employees to Willis for his review. Employees estimate the value of their own gifts on the forms.

Willis said yesterday that gift records kept by him are incomplete and he expects more will be returned to him for review and approval throughout January.

A memo circulated in November reminds all department heads "that under no circumstances should cash, checks, gift certificates and other forms of money be accepted."

Employees who reported accepting gift certificates may have violated that village rule. Willis said yesterday gift certificates are not allowed but employees may accept "merchandise certificates." He would not define the difference between the two and declined to elaborate on the rule.

Village Pres. Charles Zetek, said he did not turn in a gift records listing.

"I reported my gifts to the village manager verbally. I believe it's up to each trustee's individual judgment whether he wants to list the gifts he received or not," said Zetek.

TRUSTEES Nanci Vanderweel, Ted Staddler, and Mike Tosto listed approximately $50 worth of gifts from the Elk Grove Village Bank, Elk Grove Engineering Co., Centex and C. and B. Construction Co.

Trustees Ronald Chernick, Ed Kenma, and George Spees did not turn in gift records.

Willis reported he received about $80 worth of gifts from the same people as the trustees and the Palmisano Co. and Paddock Publications.

The item described by Willis coming from Paddock Publications is a desk calendar and notebook which is issued to all Paddock Publications reporters and which is given to numerous officials and businessmen each year.

JACK ANDREWS, foreman of the streets department, reported he received about $120 worth of gifts:

- A $50 gift certificate from Cutler Repaving Co. of Lawrence Kansas.
- Two bottles of liquor valued at $10 from E. and H. Utility.

- Four bottles of liquor and a ham from C. and B. Construction valued at $25, and a magazine subscription for $10.
- Flowers from the Elk Grove Village Park District valued at $5.

- Approximately $20 worth of cheeses, whiskey and candy.

Don Ciaglia, village engineer received:

- A $25 box of steaks from the C. and B. Construction Co.
- Two bottles of liquor valued at $10 from Nardull Construction Co.

- A bottle of liquor valued at $5 from J. Bria Construction Co.
- Corning Ware housewares valued at $15 from the Elk Grove Engineering Co.

- Six bottles of whiskey valued at $5 apiece from John Gullo Enterprises, Pagni Industries, Inland Robbins, Centex Builders and Welsch Novak and Dempsey.

- A turkey valued at $10 from Gullo.

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Account Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent rising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Account Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

Preschool signups will open next week

Registration for a special preschool program for children in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will start next week at various locations throughout the district.

The program, sponsored by the Parents' Council on Early Education, will be for those children who will be 5 years old by Dec. 1, 1974. Fee for the two-month program, which will run in April and May, is $7 per child.

Taught by volunteer "teacher-moms," the preschool will stress language, socialization and motor skills, according to Nadia Underwood of the parents' council. The preschoolers will attend the school where they'll start kindergarten next year.

A COPY OF THE child's birth certificate and the fee should be brought to the registration, according to Mrs. Underwood. The schedule for registration is as follows:

- Preschoolers who will attend Grant Wood, Clearmont, Salt Creek, Ridge, Mark Hopkins and Rupleys Schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd. on Jan. 8, starting at 8 p.m.

- Preschoolers who will attend Byrd and Cook schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Lively Junior High, 999 Leicester Rd. starting at 8 p.m. Jan. 9.

- Preschoolers who will attend Jay and Forest View Schools in Mount Prospect and Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights will register Jan. 7 at Holmes Junior High, 1900 W. Lomquist Blvd., Mount Prospect starting at 8 p.m.

Third youth charged in warehouse break-in

A 16-year-old Palatine Township youth has been charged with participating in the Dec. 9 break-in at the Montgomery Ward and Co. warehouse, 227 E. North-west Hwy., in Palatine.

The juvenile is the third arrested in a series of burglaries in Palatine, Elk Grove Village and Melrose Park in recent months. Another 16-year-old Palatine boy and 17-year-old Terry Reynolds, 242 N. Cady Dr., Palatine, were charged last week with a number of burglaries, including the Montgomery Ward warehouse break-in.

A juvenile court date will be assigned Jan. 9 for the juveniles. Reynolds is scheduled for a Jan. 17 appearance at the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Poem to be published

A poem by Richard Calisch, humanities division head at Elk Grove High School, will be part of an anthology, "Gallery Series Four/Poets," which will be published this spring. The poem, "Photo Album," first appeared in the Elk Grove High School humanities magazine.

Don't worry about toilet paper shortage; it's a hoax

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was, expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LETTNER, manager of Pik-Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 36 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Park district films to be shown tomorrow

Two movies sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District will be shown tomorrow afternoon for those children still on Christmas vacation.

"The Great McGonigle," starring W. C. Fields, and the Walt Disney movie "George," the story of a St. Bernard dog, will be the features shown.

The movies will start at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at Grant Wood School, 225 E. Elk Grove Blvd. Admission is 25 cents. Popcorn and candy will be available for purchase.

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carloti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

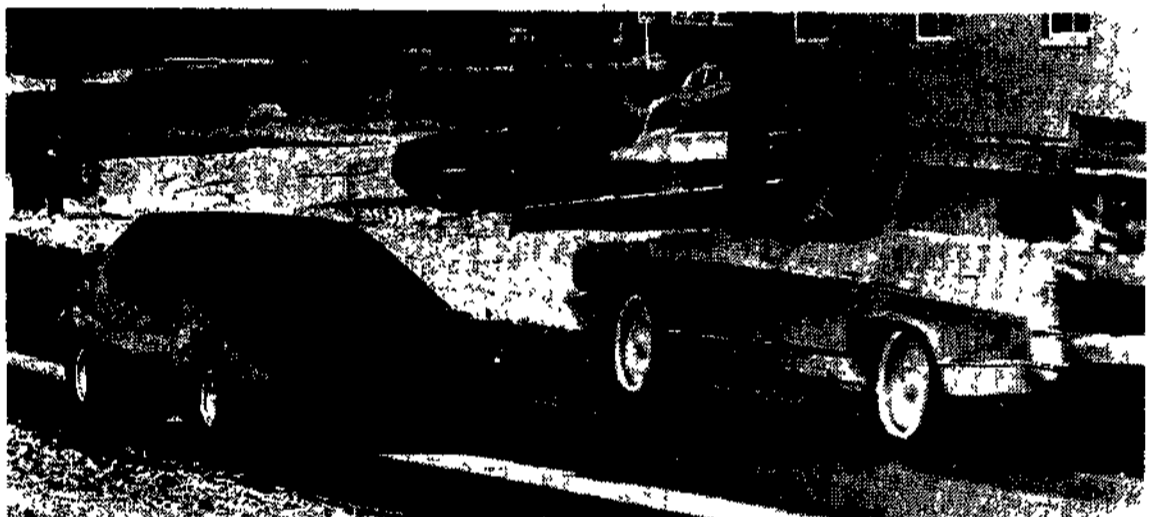

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING TO McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Director sought for emergency flood-relief plan

A civil defense director is being sought in Palatine to head a comprehensive emergency flood-relief program.

The director would coordinate the flood-relief efforts of all village departments, help educate homeowners so they could help themselves, and assist in establishing emergency flood relief teams throughout the village.

Palatine officials have interviewed one person with some expertise in the area, but no decision has been made on an appointment.

"If we can't find someone with expertise in the area, we will try to find a qualified individual who would be willing to take the task upon himself and educate himself," said Trustee Robert J. Guss Jr., chairman of the board's flood-control committee.

THE POSITION of the Civil Defense director is a voluntary one. The director will report to the village manager, who is officially head of civil defense.

Efforts to establish emergency flood relief teams throughout the village will start after the appointment of the Civil Defense director.

The emergency flood-relief teams will be trained in various flood relief techniques, first aid, traffic control and possibly firefighting so they could assist village employees and homeowners, said Guss.

PALATINE OFFICIALS will start meeting with homeowners groups soon to seek volunteers for the emergency flood teams.

"The idea is to get people involved. We have to have participation," said Guss.

For purposes of flood relief, the village will be divided into our areas with Palatine and Plum Grove roads as dividing lines.

The public works department will be responsible for storm and sanitary sewers, the creeks and the streets. Homeowners will be expected to help themselves.

IN AN EFFORT to educate homeowners of flood relief, the village's Flood and Clean Streams Committee is currently preparing a pamphlet. The pamphlet will discuss ways of handling both sanitary and storm sewer flooding and inform homeowners of precautionary measures like extending the downspouts, cleaning window wells and using sandbags. The pamphlet is expected to be ready for review by the village board this month.

A list of all Rent-Alls in the area who have pumps available has also been compiled. These pumps will be made available to homeowners during flood weather.

Proposed for the 1974-75 budget is the purchase of four 4-inch pumps for use by the village's public works department. Guss said the proposed pumps would be used to relieve flooding in large areas and would not be available for use in pumping out a homeowner's basement.

Auto sticker price rises after Jan. 14

Palatine residents will have to dig a little deeper in their pockets to get a vehicle sticker after Jan. 15.

The cost of 1974 vehicle stickers for passenger cars will increase $1 to $9 on Jan. 15. Vehicle stickers for senior citizens are free this year.

Vehicle stickers may be obtained at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St., between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and between 8:30 a.m. and noon on Saturday or by mail.

The 1974 vehicle stickers and licenses must be on cars by Feb. 15.

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Accounts Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Accounts Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE of the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

Or is there?

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of Pk-Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Cady Dr., Palatine, were charged last week with a number of burglaries, including the Montgomery Ward warehouse break-in.

A juvenile court date will be assigned Jan. 9 for the juveniles Reynolds is scheduled for a Jan. 17 appearance at the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING to McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

New ordinance may authorize tree removal

Rolling Meadows officials are considering passage of an ordinance to permit the city's forestry department to order the removal of diseased trees on private property.

The ordinance, being revised by a city council subcommittee, would allow the forestry department to make inspections on residents' property of trees believed to be infected. The committee is considering including in the ordinance a clause which would give authority to the forestry department to order diseased trees on private property removed within a specified time period.

It has not been decided who would pay for the removal of the tree. As originally proposed, the ordinance called for the homeowner to pay the entire cost of removing an infected tree. At the request of several aldermen, however, the ordinance may be changed to require the homeowner to pay only half the cost of removal, with the city funding the other half.

THE ORDINANCE has been requested by the public works forestry department in order to give the department direction on its scope of duty and authority.

The department maintains trees on public property.

The ordinance would also prohibit persons from planting, trimming or removing trees planted in city parkways unless they first obtain a permit from the city.

Certain types of trees, including Siberian elms, tree of heaven, willows and all evergreen trees would be prohibited from new planting in public parkways under terms also provided in the proposed ordinance.

The trees would be banned because of their susceptibility to disease and to avoid excessive growth of tree roots in sewer lines.

Toilet paper 'crisis' real?

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Account Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Account Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-supply pull came at the end of the week.

Don't worry about toilet paper shortage; it's a hoax

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of Pk-Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Lark, manager for A&P Food

Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Park district slates life saving classes

Junior and senior life saving swim classes will be offered beginning Wednesday by the Salt Creek Park District.

Classes will meet Wednesdays from 3:45 to 5:45 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. at the Arlington Park Towers indoor swimming pool. The Red Cross method of instruction will be used.

Who can afford college? The very rich...and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough

to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Caroti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Sixth ex-official pleads guilty to bribery count

by NANCY COWGER

Herbert C. Gibson yesterday joined five former colleagues on the Hoffman Estates Village Board in pleading guilty to federal bribery, conspiracy and tax charges in connection with a 1968 zoning payoff by a developer.

Gibson, 46, of 1816 Jamestown Circle, Hoffman Estates, admitted guilt to two charges of accepting bribes and one charge each of conspiracy and filing a false income tax return. He was originally indicted on 11 bribery counts as well as single conspiracy and tax charges.

A village trustee from 1965 to 1969, Gibson will be sentenced Feb. 26 by U. S. District Judge Frank McGarr.

He was indicted Oct. 26 along with two former Hoffman Estates mayors — Roy L. Jenkins and Edward F. Pinger — and former trustees Howard J. Noble, James L. Sloan and Gerard L. Meyer. Also indicted were Kaufman and Broad, Inc., described as the world's largest home-builder, and former State Rep. Bernard Peskin, an attorney for the developer.

The other five former officials have all pleaded guilty to a reduced number of charges. Kaufman and Broad pleaded no contest, in effect a guilty plea, and Peskin has pleaded innocent. He was attorney for the developer at the time some $200,000 was allegedly paid in bribes to the officials for approval of the Barrington Square subdivision.

THE HERALD has disclosed that additional federal indictments are expected some time this month in the continuing investigation of rezonings and other official acts by past village administrations in Hoffman Estates.

Peskin's attorney has filed motions to uncover evidence against him and to determine if any electronic eavesdropping devices such as wiretaps were used in the federal probe. Officials in the U. S. Attorney's office described the actions as "usual motions" for such a case.

Judge McGarr next month is scheduled to rule on them and next month to set a trial date.

For the charges to which Gibson pleaded guilty, he could be sentenced to a total of 18 years in a federal penitentiary and fined up to $40,000. However, four of the other former officials who have been sentenced already have received prison terms ranging from one to two years after pleading guilty to from two to seven charges.

THOSE FORMER officials who were sentenced will not start serving their terms until Jan. 14, when they are to surrender to U.S. marshals. They are Jenkins, mayor from 1965 to 1969, who pleaded guilty to seven charges and was sentenced to two years; Pinger, mayor from 1959 through 1965 and zoning board member from 1965 through 1970, who pleaded guilty to two counts and was sentenced to 18 months; and trustees Sloan and Noble, trustees from 1963 through 1971, who each pleaded guilty to two charges and were sentenced to one year apiece.

Meyer, village trustee from 1965 to 1969, pleaded guilty to four of 13 charges and will be sentenced Jan. 15. He did not plead guilty until Dec. 5, while the others pleaded guilty Nov. 9.

Snowmobiles, suits stolen; $10,000 loss

Snowmobiles and other merchandise worth nearly $10,000 was stolen from V & G Mower and Bike, 2902 N. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, police said yesterday.

The theft, which occurred between midnight and 3:15 a.m. Monday, included four snowmobiles, 58 snowmobile suits, helmets, gloves and oil, police added. Entry was gained by prying open a front door and a warehouse door.

a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

Parking problem blamed on post office

by PAT GERLACH

Disgruntled merchants in the south end of Hoffman Plaza Shopping Center blame a new branch post office building opened Monday for overcrowded parking conditions they contend is ruining business.

"I couldn't find a place to park when I came to open my store this morning," Dell Logsdon, manager of Twinbrook True Value Hardware, said Wednesday.

Logsdon and other businessmen say postal vehicles and employees' autos are being parked in the 55-car lot facing Higgins Road in front of their stores.

U. S. Postal Service officials are aware of parking problems which resulted in the shopping center this week and say they are trying to work things out.

"Our real estate department is working with the shopping center owners to clear up a misunderstanding about where postal parking spaces are designed," explained Robert Gray, of the Chicago post office regional office.

GRAY SAID Hoffman Estates postal officials were advised Monday to use a 25-space lot just south of the new 3,900-square-foot post office building for trucks.

"There is additional ramp space in back of the building we can use for carrier vehicles but employees have been told to use outer fringe areas of the shopping center lot," Gray said. Postal customers may park anywhere in the lot, he added.

Julius Greenberg, of the Hoffman Estates Currency Exchange, and Russell Scurto, operator of a barber shop in the center, estimate that construction as a result of center expansion has cut their businesses by about 20 per cent.

Expansion should be completed this spring, but the merchants doubt whether they will recoup losses completely.

"I figure I might be able to get between 10 and 15 per cent of the lost business back, but it's going to take a long time," Greenberg said.

But the merchants feel they will get nowhere at all unless customers have a place to park.

YESTERDAY'S EARLY-MORNING snow shower didn't help congested parking in the south end of Hoffman Plaza shopping center. Late merchants contend that the new branch post office has caused their problems.

Wilkening's arraignment scheduled for Jan. 14

Former Schaumburg Township Highway Comm. Ralph E. Wilkening will be arraigned on charges of bribery and official misconduct at 10 a.m., Jan. 14, before Chief Criminal Court Judge Joseph E. Powers.

Park district signup open

Persons interested in second session Hoffman Estates Park District programs may sign up at the Vogeley Administration Center, 650 W. Higgins Rd.

Openings are available for baton and modern jazz, which start Jan. 3; belly dancing, Jan. 9 and 10; guitar lessons and trim and tone, Jan. 7, and indoor tennis lessons, Jan. 12.

For further information call the park district office at 895-7500.

Bulls-Bucks tickets offered

Fifty tickets to the Jan. 12 Chicago-Bulls-Milwaukee Bucks basketball game will go on sale at 10 a.m. Monday at the Meineke Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg.

The Schaumburg Park District is selling the tickets for $5 each. Transportation to the game in Chicago will cost $1 per person.

The bus will leave from the community center about 6 p.m. Children under eight years of age must be accompanied by a parent.

Seven two-count indictments were returned last week by a Cook County grand jury charging Wilkening, 37, of Nerge Road, unincorporated Schaumburg Township, with accepting merchandise certificates from Cole Chemical Co., St. Louis.

If convicted, Wilkening could receive up to a one to three-year prison term and a maximum fine of $10,000 on each count, said Assistant State's Atty. Sol Frydman.

Frydman said eight Sears Merchandise certificates, ranging in value from $69 to $100, were mailed to Wilkening following purchases of road and weed control chemicals from Cole.

"We have determined that all of the certificates mailed to Wilkening within two to three weeks following Cole purchases were redeemed in Sears stores in Chicago and Schaumburg," Frydman explained.

HE SAID THE certificates were issued between April and December, 1972.

Wilkening is not being charged in connection with gift certificates received following Royal Chemical Co. purchases, Frydman said.

In October, after a three-month state-wide Better Government Assn. investigation, Wilkening was identified as one of 69 officials admitting to having received gifts or certificates.

Wilkening's attorney, John Bickley, said his client has cooperated with the state's attorney and the grand jury.

Wilkening's resignation from the $5,000 township post he held for nearly 13 years became effective Jan. 1.

Book discussions postponed

Due to the limited number of persons who indicated an interest in book discussions to begin in January at the Schaumburg Township Public Library, the staff is postponing the meetings until March.

Anyone interested in participating then may contact Pat Hogan, head of the department of public services at the library, 32 W. Library Ln., Schaumburg.

Or is there?

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks.

Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers, reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country.

In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain, said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)."

"We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores, said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week.

Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of Pickwick Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Who can afford college? The very rich... and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carloti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

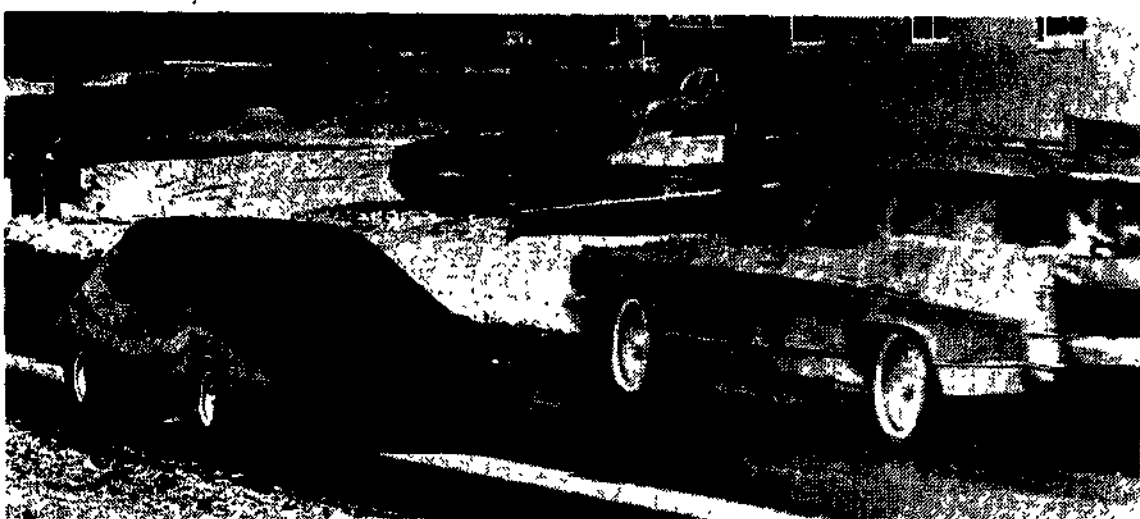

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

He also suggested that motorists ride public transportation one day a week for the welfare of the country and industry. "If we have rationing, everyone is going to be hurt."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle... for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING TO McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Vote coming for new Maryville school building?

by LUISA GINETTI

A referendum to raise additional money to build the new Maryville school on the Maryville Academy grounds may be in the offing for voters in Dist. 26.

The money would be used to improve the five-acre land parcel at the academy, on River Road north of Central Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township. The land has been deemed unsuitable for building by the Illinois Capital Development Board.

Dist. 26 Supt. John Fridlund said the ICDB has estimated the cost of improving the land at almost $70,000. "It would be difficult for us to pay anything like that with the current funds unless we cut back drastically in other areas," Fridlund said a referendum to raise the money may be one alternative if the school board decides to stick with the selection of the Maryville site.

"The question facing us now is whether or not the expense of improving the land merits keeping the site as our choice," Fridlund said yesterday.

THE IDEA OF HOLDING a referendum to raise money to improve the site has also been suggested by Karen Zuck, a member of the Citizens' Action Committee, which reviewed and proposed selection of the academy site.

"I don't know of any other alternatives as far as other sites are concerned because the committee checked out every available piece of property," Mrs. Zuck said yesterday. "I think all that is needed is to replace the fill at the site to make it suitable for building and I foresee a referendum to raise the money because I don't think the board has the funds."

Mrs. Zuck said she is irritated that the board failed to discuss the problem at its last meeting even though board members were aware of the ICDB's opinion of the land site. "It seems to be one thing after another with this. It's almost like they don't want to build the school there even though it's the best site for a school."

IDYLL NIPPER, another member of the Citizens' Action Committee, would not comment on the ICDB's memorandum on the site until she has read the report and seen the engineer's study of the soil.

"I'm sure the committee will meet again and reevaluate the situation," Miss Nipper says. "We are limited in our choice of sites because of the cost of land and we have already ruled out the junior high site (which was originally chosen as the building site) because of a lack of space and a need for a retention basin there."

Miss Nipper says she hopes the school board will have complete information on the matter available at its meeting Tuesday night.

Fridlund said the matter will receive high priority at the board meeting but he did not know what action, if any, would be taken in terms of solving the problem.

THE NEW MARYVILLE school is to be built with $800,000 in state funds from the ICDB. Of that amount, $75,000 has been earmarked for land purchase. No amount of the state allocation has been set aside for land improvement.

The new school was to be ready for use by September, but due to delays in site selection, district officials said this deadline will be impossible to meet.

Parks still have openings in classes

It's not too late to sign up for a crocheting or ballet class. Openings still exist in virtually all Mount Prospect Park District winter classes.

Only the belly dancing class is filled. Persons interested in signing up for other classes can call the park district at 255-8380 or go to the park district office at 411 S. Maple St., between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

A complete schedule of classes, which was mailed to park district residents last month, is available at the administration office. Classes begin next week.

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Accounts Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Accounts Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

a strong increase. The NAS business processed more than $150 million in receivables, or overdue accounts, last year. At an average $100 a person, this represents 1.5 million people who bought themselves a pack of trouble.

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

Moonlighting policemen do it mostly for profit

by TOM VON MALDER

In Wheeling, some are pumping gas. In Mount Prospect, they are standing around in department stores, while in Buffalo Grove, they are walking through construction sites.

They all are moonlighting policemen, whether their after-hours employment is arranged through their respective police departments or on their own. Mostly, they are working for extra money, although some feel jobs such as department store detective are good training for their police career.

All three departments permit policemen to work extra jobs and, although departmental regulations vary, each insists that the extra job not interfere with their police duties.

Lt. Ronald Nelson estimates that 5 of 25 men in the Wheeling Police Department have outside part-time jobs. He said he knows of three who pump gas and two who drive cement trucks for a local construction firm.

For any "police-related, guard-type duty," Nelson said an outside employer must contract for a policeman's service with the Village of Wheeling. He said this is done so that the policeman's regular pension and similar benefits and insurance will still cover him while he is on outside guard duty.

THE GUARD CATEGORY of jobs covers department stores, rock concerts, circuses, Christmas duty at the post office and the like.

"We contemplated forbidding all outside jobs," Nelson said, "but we felt it would be unfair." Rules were drawn up after other area departments' policies were investigated. These rules were then approved by the policemen.

As in Buffalo Grove and Mount Prospect, Wheeling policemen are forbidden to sell liquor or work in an establishment that does, including operations like bowling alleys with lounges. Wheeling police chief Peter Guttilla also must approve any outside job.

Nelson said Guttilla is "pretty liberal" about what jobs the men can take. Freshman policemen are "highly discouraged" from taking an outside job because it might interfere with their training, Nelson added.

IN MOUNT PROSPECT, the situation is more liberal. There is no hour limitation on outside jobs (such as the 20-hour limitation in Wheeling) and the police chief does not have to approve the job, although he is informed of the outside employment.

"It hasn't been a problem," Police Chief Bert Giddens said. "There is no order on hours yet."

Although the exact number of Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight was not available, one patrolman, who works part-time as a guard in a store at the Randhurst Shopping Center, guessed that about 90 per cent of the force at one time or another moonlights.

As in Wheeling, extra-hour assignments at sporting events, circuses and similar activities are handled on a first-come, first-served basis with the employer hiring through the village. Department store guard duty is handled strictly between the employers and the policemen, however.

Most Mount Prospect policemen who moonlight do so as a store detective, usually at Randhurst, because it is the biggest shopping center in the area. However, the policemen have worked at other stores, particularly when they first open and have not as yet hired their own full-time security force. The men either can wear their uniforms or act as undercover agents.

BUFFALO GROVE policemen pick up most of their extra jobs by guarding construction sites. The builders contract with the village for the men. Some men work at banks too.

Chief Harry Walsh, who does not have to approve such jobs, said he knows of no one in the department who has a non-guard-type of job, such as working in a gas station.

All of the policemen who moonlight and talked with The Herald admitted they do it mainly for the money, particularly at holiday time. "It pays for Christmas. It makes it a lot easier and a lot happier," as one man put it.

One policeman said he is down to being a store guard one day a week, although he had worked more when he had his children's medical and educational bills to pay for. The extra cash appears welcome in times of financial stress.

Yet a couple of men said they felt acting as a store detective helps them sharpen their investigative techniques and awareness. All agreed that being a policeman, however, is first.

The local scene

Hockey players at Randhurst

Chicago Cardinals and Nordics hockey players will be in the Randhurst shopping center today through Sunday to sign autographs and discuss the game.

Ron Prellac and Burt Harvey of the Cardinals and Craig Glender and Bob Cademartori of the Nordics, along with other players, will be in the mall from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. today and tomorrow, and from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Both teams' home games are at the Metro Twin Ice Arena just south of the shopping center.

Hearing tomorrow on 'mushroom project'

A public hearing is scheduled tomorrow night to air plans for apartment construction on property formerly known as the Dawn Fresh Mushroom Farm in Mount Prospect.

Kenroy, Inc., Skokie, plans to build 198 apartment units in 11 three-story buildings on the 8.9-acre site at the southwest corner of Dempster Street and Elmhurst Road.

The property had been rezoned for multi-family use in 1968, but Kenroy officials are seeking a special use to change the planned unit development plans. The number of units will remain the same, but more open space will be available, according to Roy Gottlieb, chairman of the Kenroy board of directors.

The property was involved for 4½ years in a court fight between Mount Prospect and Des Plaines. Mount Prospect was awarded annexation of the site Oct. 26 when a Cook County Circuit Court judge ruled Des Plaines' prior annexation was improper.

The hearing on the special use request is scheduled for 8 p.m. tomorrow in the village hall before the zoning board of appeals.

Lessons slated for young skiers

The Prospect Heights Park District still has a few openings in its children's ski lessons program.

The first lesson will be held tomorrow at the Holiday Park ski facility at Wooster Lake. The fee is $40 for five lessons or $32 if equipment does not have to be rented.

Buses leave from Sullivan School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights, at 3:30 p.m. Each Friday the children, which includes third through eighth graders, will have a one-hour lesson and three hours of free time at the ski area.

Those wishing to sign up may do so by telephoning 394-2848 or going to the park district office, 4 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights. The deadline is noon today. Adult ski lessons are held Saturday evenings and those interested should also contact the park district.

Preschool program signups next week

Registration for a special preschool program for children in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will start next week at various locations throughout the district.

The program, sponsored by the Parents' Council on Early Education, will be for those children who will be 5 years old by Dec. 1, 1974. Fee for the two-month program, which will run in April and May, is $7 per child.

A COPY OF THE child's birth certificate and the fee should be brought to the registration, according to Mrs. Underwood. The schedule for registration is as follows:

- Preschoolers who will attend Grant Wood, Clearmont, Salt Creek, Ridge, Mark Hopkins and Rupley Schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd. on Jan. 8, starting at 8 p.m.

- Preschoolers who will attend Byrd and Cook schools in Elk Grove Village will register at Lively Junior High, 999 Leicester Rd. starting at 8 p.m. Jan. 9

- Preschoolers who will attend Jay and Forest View Schools in Mount Prospect and Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights will register Jan. 7 at Holmes Junior High, 1900 W. Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect starting at 8 p.m.

New rezoning ordinance is adopted, then tested

The Mount Prospect Village Board last night adopted a strict ordinance requiring identification of all persons holding an interest in property involved in rezoning matters — then promptly put the new ordinance to its first test.

The ordinance, which puts the village in line with a state law that went into effect last Oct. 1, will be effective upon its publication.

Minutes after the ordinance was unanimously approved, however, the trustees asked for a listing of the owners of the Fanslow apartment complex, who were before the board to seek an extension of village sewer and water service to the complex at 524 E. Algonquin Rd.

THE PETITIONERS complied, identifying six beneficiaries of the Parkway Bank trust: Richard Fanslow, Leonard Sorkin, Joseph Grant, James Chapman, Gregory Hayes and Irving Tuma.

The new ordinance specifically requires identification of beneficiaries of a land trust when an application is made for "any benefit, authorization, zoning amendment, variance, special use, license and/or permit" involving the property.

A beneficiary is defined in the ordinance as a person or organization holding "any interest, regardless of how small or minimal such interest may be," in a land trust.

The ordinance was proposed by Carolyn Krause, chairman of the village's Zoning Board of Appeals, when the state law outlawing secret land trusts went into effect. Secret trusts have been used in Illinois to conceal the identity of property owners in order to obtain zoning and other changes requiring municipal approval.

$30 in change stolen from school cafeteria

An estimated $30 in change was stolen sometime during the weekend from vending machines located in the lunchroom at Lincoln Junior High School, 700 W. Lincoln St., Mount Prospect.

Police said a window was broken to provide access to the school.

Who can afford college? The very rich...and very poor

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Second of a series

Jim's parents can't afford to send him to college.

His family doesn't live in a poor neighborhood, his father has a steady well-paying job, and there are only two children living at home.

Jim is from a middle-income family in the Northwest suburbs — and that's his problem.

His family's income is not low enough to qualify for state or federal financial aid programs, but his family is not rich enough to afford four years of education at a state university and still pay the mortgage on their house.

THAT IS NOT an unusual situation. In fact it is happening more often today than five years ago. The middle-income student is being squeezed out of the education market and in the suburbs, where the cost of living is high, a college education is a financial burden for many families.

The average cost for one academic year at Northern Illinois University is now about $2,400. Most of the other state schools cost about the same as Northern, while private schools and out-of-state schools cost much more. The price tag probably will be higher next year due to inflation and increased operating costs. Already, the state board of higher education has recommended a six per cent increase in tuition at state universities next year.

But the problem is not only one of higher cost. There have been cutbacks this year in student financial aid programs which mean fewer students will qualify for assistance. Since eligibility standards are based on income and financial need, students who just got in under the wire before, especially middle-income students, are now scratched from the list.

WHAT THE eligibility standards don't take into account is the cost of living in the student's home area. It costs more to live in the suburbs than in other parts of the state, mainly because housing is more expensive. But when a student applies for financial aid he lists his family's income and it makes no difference where he lives.

"You're not living high off the hog if you're making $15,000 to $20,000 in this area," says Vincent Carloti, college counselor at Elk Grove High School. Because financial aid programs don't take the cost of living into account, students from the suburbs are at a disadvantage, he says.

MIDDLE-INCOME students from the suburbs "get the least amount of aid," says Ronald Rosenthal, college counselor at Arlington High School, "and they feel the pinch more." State programs, such as the Illinois State Scholarship and grant programs, have higher eligibility standards than federal programs, he says, and have "loosened up a little bit to help the middle-class person."

The Illinois State Scholarship Program should be commended, says James Killam, college counselor at Maine West High School. It's "probably the finest program in the country." But he adds that since the cost of college education is

Yep, gas is goin' up...

... Unless, of course, you don't need it

by BETTY LEE

Standard Oil customers can expect to pay 5.8 cents more per gallon on both regular and premium gasolines starting today, while other companies already have increased gas prices.

The increase is based on a 73 per cent hike on crude oil, said Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Standard Oil. The increase is being passed on to the retailer, who in turn passes the increase to the consumer, he said.

For the same reason, Sunoco Oil Co. yesterday hiked the price of its gasoline 2 cents a gallon. Shell Oil Co. increased prices by 1-cent per gallon, due, company officials said, to the towering costs of foreign and domestic crude oil.

Many gasoline stations are expecting deliveries from suppliers to replenish their pumps which have been emptied by the hoards of customers. Gas station managers had been juggling with gasoline supplies during the last days of the month by shortening business hours, imposing limits on gas or by shutting down completely.

NOW, INDUSTRY officials and dealers are speculating that there will not be enough gasoline to last during the last few days of January because of reduced allocations to each station.

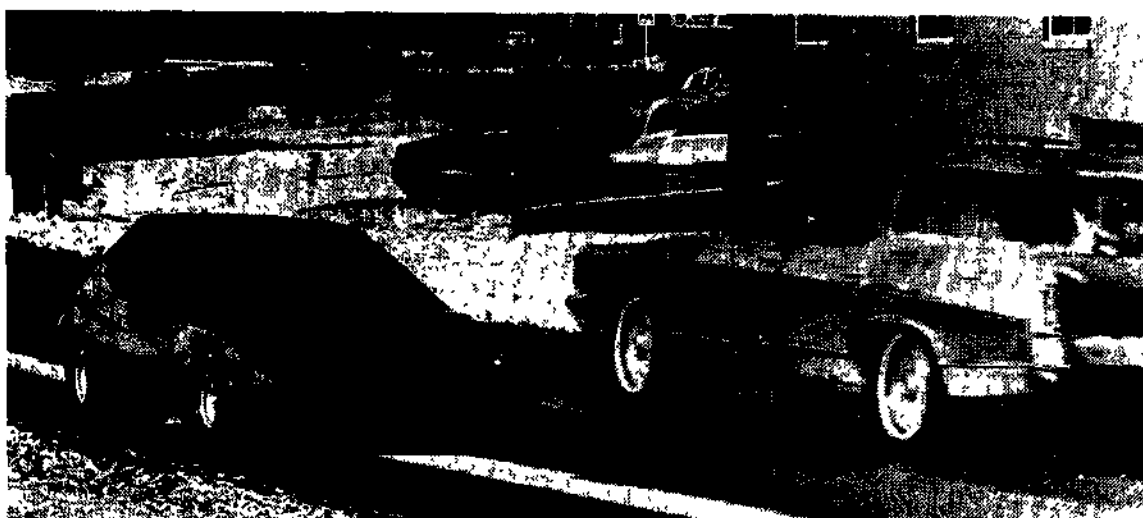

"A great many dealers, as high as 50 per cent, may well be closed the last few days of January for not sensibly rationing their gas," said Robert Jacobs, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers' Assn.

He added that there would probably be a "free market for the first three weeks with most dealers limiting sales to 3, 5 or 10 gallons thereafter.

Dealers are advised to assess their supply situation at midmonth and adjust sales on that basis. Jacobs also suggested that dealers give stickers to regular customers so they can "take care of their regulars first."

He also suggested that motorists ride public transportation one day a week for the welfare of the country and industry. "If we have rationing, everyone is going to be hurt."

You, too, can own McKee's Electric Vehicle...for $20,000.

by JULIA BAUER

There's at least one driver in the Northwest suburbs who doesn't have to bow to the almighty fuel pump. He just drives his tiny car in the garage at night and plugs it in.

He's Robert McKee, owner of McKee Engineering Corp. in Palatine, and for the past four years, he's been turning out prototypes of battery-powered electric cars.

"There's been a lot of interest in electric-powered cars lately," McKee said yesterday. But don't waste gas looking for a local electric-car dealer handling McKee's cars. His vehicles cost between $20,000 for the earlier models to the $50,000 to $80,000 range for the latest designs.

"Our background is more in the research and development line," McKee said, explaining that large corporations are buying his prototypes for their own research.

One of the latest projects is a van, and other vehicles include a golf cart, sports model and now a four-passenger model.

ACCORDING to McKee's figures, electric cars make sense for most urban dwellers, who make trips averaging 7.2 miles and carrying 1.2 people.

"You can get about 75 miles on one charge in city driving," McKee said. His cars are capable of speeds up to 62 miles per hour, well above the new speed restrictions expected to be set in the coming weeks.

If the cars ever go into mass production, McKee's designs will need some revising to meet stringent U.S. safety standards. Because the batteries tend to make the small cars heavy the electric autos fall into stricter categories of safety features. But mass production isn't coming soon, at least for McKee's models.

"It takes just an awful lot of money to set up a factory," McKee said. For now, all of the cars are built and designed by McKee and Michael Williams, a Schaumburg resident who does the body styling for the electric cars.

Before turning to the "car of the future," McKee worked with racing cars for 20 years. And surprisingly enough, the little city cars and big racing machines have many of the same problems.

"With the electric cars, you have so little power, you have to use it to the best advantage. And with racing cars, you have a lot of power you have to use to best advantage," McKee explained.

Local busline doing better, but not yet in black

by KURT BAER

Ridership on Metron Systems commuter buslines was up 50 per cent last month compared to November. But the young company still is not breaking even.

About 1,900 passengers boarded Metron's buses in December — nearly 600 more than the previous months, says company president Claude Luisada.

But Metron still lost money on its overall December operation.

The ridership figures do not include charter runs of last month's free rides to downtown Arlington Heights for Christmas shoppers.

Metron finished November, the last month for which figures are available, with a deficit of about $3,200. In October, the company lost nearly $4,500.

With the increase in riders, December's deficit is expected to be the smallest in Metron's brief four-month history, and Luisada said yesterday that he remained optimistic on the future of the company.

HE ATTRIBUTED December's increase in ridership to four basic factors:

- Greater public awareness of the bus service.
- Cold, snowy weather that discourages private automobile trips to the station.
- The ever-increasing cost of operating a car.
- Genuine concern over gasoline supplies and individual rationing.

He said that final financial figures on December's operation have not been prepared, but that preliminary indications are that revenues doubled during the month.

More riders and charter contracts were the reason for the increase.

Luisada said Metron increased its sales of January monthly passes 20 per cent yesterday over Monday.

There are plans, he said, for a promotional campaign later this month, and also a likelihood that the company will acquire additional buses for more commuter bus routes.

METRON NOW operates three rush hour commuter routes driving residents of the Ivy Hill, Northgate, Berkley Square, Windsor Woods and Surrey Ridge areas to and from the Arlington Heights train station.

The service also extends to Buffalo Grove's Mill Creek subdivision, directly north of Northgate.

The cost of a monthly pass is $15; $1 one-way and $1.50 for a single round trip. Information on routes and schedules is available from Metron at 398-5660.

Door-to-door, dial-a-bus service is expected to begin later this month, Luisada said. The service, which will operate during the non-rush hours, has been delayed because of tie-ups with the supply of two-way radios for the buses.

Dial-a-bus unlimited monthly passes will cost $20; a monthly youth pass (under 18) is $15; monthly seniors pass (over 55) is $12; a single one-way trip is 50 cents; a single round trip is 75 cents.

Metron Systems Corp. has a one-year contract with the Village of Arlington Heights to operate its vehicles. The village purchased two of the mid-sized buses at a combined cost of $56,000. The buses are being leased to Metron.

Two caught trying to siphon gasoline

Arlington Heights police apprehended two persons in separate incidents over the New Year holiday for attempting to siphon gasoline from cars.

Stephen C. Balke, 18, of Hanover Park, was charged with attempted theft after he was seen trying to siphon gasoline from cars in an apartment parking lot.

He was released on $1,000 bond pending a Feb. 8 appearance in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

A 17-year-old Arlington Heights youth was taken into custody after a brief chase by police after he was seen prowling the lot of Latoff Chevrolet. He was released to his parents.

Credit economy slipping into red

Business is booming—for collection agencies

by LEA TONKIN

If you have never received a due notice of an unpaid Christmas bill, it might be your turn this year.

Collection agencies are reporting that people who have never fallen behind on bills before are slipping this year — thanks to a credit economy that is sliding more and more into the red.

"Warnings of far-reaching shortages, the energy crisis and predictions of a recession with rising unemployment have not braked this headlong rush into a spending spree," said Leonard G. Rose, president of Chicago-based National Accounts Systems Inc. Record Christmas sales are disturbing because so much of the trend involves buying on credit, he said.

"At the first of the year, when the bills come due, it's an open question whether they can pay in January what they spent the month before," said Rose of consumers. He already has begun to see the effects of economic flux. Delinquent accounts in the last quarter of 1973 showed

Bill collectors have plenty of problems, too

So you think you've got problems trying to pay those holiday bills on time? Consider the headaches suffered by the bill collector, who must deal with nasty debtors every day.

Some debtors do not want to pay, even when they are able. They resent raising inflation. They're fearful of their financial future. They just plain feel bad, and for the first time in decades feel worse off than they were a year ago, according to University of Michigan researchers.

Leonard G. Rose, president of National Accounts Systems Inc., Chicago, says tight money and high interest rates add to a consumer's woes. He says this pentup frustration and resentment is turned on the collector, who must remind people of their obligations. Some people even leave town to avoid their debts, Rose says. The number of these "skips" has increased substantially in the past year.

Despite the increase in bad debt accounts expected for 1974, Rose sees some hope for the future. He notes that many families are adjusting to shortages and dislocations in their lifestyles. "Now if they can just display the same self-discipline and control in their financial lives, 1974 could end up as one of the best years they've had!"

"BAD TIMES MEAN more business for us, of course, but it does not necessarily mean better business," says Rose. Debtor reluctance shows up in poor collectibility on accounts. Where the collection industry averaged 40 per cent successful collections three years ago, the figure has sunk to 28 per cent.

"So many people spend in anticipation of future income, and they can't realistically comprehend the fact that their income can stop, period," said Rose. "In fact, even a disruption in earning patterns — temporary layoffs, strikes or simply a cutoff of overtime work — can push many families over the brink of financial disaster."

Psychological reasons account for many of the uncollectible accounts, Rose contends. He says this unwillingness to pay creditors, plus the inflationary pressures expected in 1974, will magnify the problem.

"During good times, when people optimistically overextended themselves, a large portion of bad debts involve discretionary purchases: travel, recreation and luxury items," Rose explained. It's going to be more painful to cut down purchases in 1974, says Rose, because a higher portion of spendable income will be dedicated to necessities.

AN EXAMPLE OF the problem is bad debt loss in the medical field. The bad debt loss was $1.2 billion in 1968. The fig-

And now there's a toilet paper shortage...

by STIRLING MORITA

Move over, gold hoarders, gasoline stockpilers and meat freezers, the toilet paper fanatics have joined the ranks. Area grocery store managers have reported a large increase in demand for the bathroom necessity and are ordering more for shortage-minded consumers.

Although the paper shortage may seem real to local shoppers reports from the East Coast indicate it may be one of those word-of-mouth national hoaxes which occasionally sweep the country. In fact, paper company executives have taken ads on the East Coast to inform customers frantic buying on toilet paper is unnecessary — there is plenty available.

The well-publicized paper shortage has been blamed as one of the reasons for the demand, but store managers are quick to point out that customers are cleaning out supplies because they are afraid of being caught without tissue.

LARRY NAUMAN, director of public relations for Dominick's Finer Foods chain said, "There's big consumer pressure in stocking up on it (toilet paper)." "We're finding shortages in many lines as well as toilet paper," he said. "But it is the crucial item."

He added that toilet paper is moving well in all Dominick's local stores. Unless the need for the tissue is anticipated in advance, replenishing supplies is difficult because of the time factor involved in shipping the lightweight, bulky material, he explained.

The toilet paper is usually shipped by railroad because of its bulk, and railroad arrangements take longer, Nauman said. Trucking costs are more expensive.

BILL SUHRBUR, merchandising manager for M. Loeb Corp., Elk Grove Village, supplier for many small local stores said the rush on toilet paper apparently started last week and that the supply pull came at the end of the week. Suhrbur added that some stores "reached out-of-stock conditions," but the company was expecting large carloads of the tissues yesterday. No one has mentioned anything about price increases, but Suhrbur expected that they will rise.

Spokesmen for Jewel Food Store and National Supermarkets, reported increased demand for toilet paper, but added that the chain stores' suppliers were apparently ready for the surge in tissue popularity.

EMIL LEITNER, manager of Pk-Kwik Foods, Roselle, said newspaper advertisement for toilet paper brought people into the store about two weeks ago and that the store's supply was nearly mopped up.

He said there had been very few rolls on the shelves, but that he was expecting more yesterday.

Bill Leark, manager for A&P Food Store, Arlington Heights, said he has had some difficulties in getting more toilet paper. He said he ordered about 38 cases of the material and that only 18 were shipped to the store.

A spokesman for High-Low Foods in Elk Grove Village said the stocks were a little lower than usual.

Residents are saying 'so what' to carpools

Carpools may be the way of the future, but so far commuters have not begun to clamor for rides with their neighbors, a spot check of area homeowners' associations indicates.

At least one association, Greenbrier in Arlington Heights, has put out a call to subdivision residents interested in getting together.

Keith Cook said a telephone number for persons interested in carpooling was included in Greenbrier's January newsletter after one resident told him he was looking for other people to share a ride to and from Evanston.

Although the newsletter was just mailed out, Cook said so far he has not had any response to his offer to coordinate car pool requests.

In Rolling Meadows, City Mgr. James Watson said the city had talked of matching up car pool requests from residents through the municipal newsletter.

A special form that city residents could fill out and mail in would be used to match up riders. But the city does not have the clerical staff to work on the project, which so far, is only in the talking stages, Watson said.

Other homeowner association presidents said so far they have not been contacted by their resident-members about carpools, but that the matter may come up at their regular meetings later this month.
